——.] — Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27), s. 2, confers on the Ct. of Ch. jurisdiction to award damages in lieu of an injunction in the case of a threatened injury. Notwithstanding the repeal of that Act by Statute Law Revision & Civil Procedure Act, 1883 (c. 49), the combined effect of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 10, & Statute Law Revision Act, 1898 (c. 22), s. 1, is to maintain in force the jurisdiction conferred by Chancery Amendment Act, 1858, s. 2.

Where therefore an action was brought in the Ch. Div. for an injunction to restrain an obstruction of ancient lights, & the ct. found that defts.' buildings when completed would cause an actionable obstruction to pltf.'s lights, but that no such obstruction had yet taken place:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to award damages in lieu of an injunction.—LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. v. SLACK, [1924] A. 1399a. ——.]—In an action brought by pltf. against deft. society for an injunction & damages in respect of an alleged obstruction of ancient lights, the judge found that defts.' buildings when completed would cause an actionable obstruction to pltf.'s lights, but that no such obstruction had yet taken place, & he expressed the opinion that the interference with pltf.'s legal rights when the building was completed would be small, & could be adequately compensated by damages, but held, contrary to his own opinion, that he was bound by the opinion of the Ct. of Appeal in Dreyfus v. Peruvian Guana Co. (1889), 43 Ch. D. 316, that there was no jurisdiction under Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27), to give damages in lieu of an injunction where the injury was threatened but had not been sustained, & he therefore granted an injunction. The Ct. of Appeal, without going into the merits, by a majority, upheld the view that the ct. had no jurisdiction in such a case to award damages in lieu of an injunction. The House of Lords, by a majority, reversed this decision, & remitted the case to the Ct. of Appeal to deal with it on its merits:—Held: the findings of the judge brought the case within the "good working rule" suggested by A. L. SMITH, L.J., in Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., No. 1356, ante, as that which might guide the ct. in exercising the discretion given it by Chancery Amendment Act, 1858, to award damages in lieu of an injunction; that was still the rule to be adopted by the ct. as a guide & was not affected by anything that was decided in Colls v. Home & Colonial Stores, No. 830, ante; therefore, there being evidence to support the findings of the judge, the injunction granted by him, contrary to his own opinion, ought to be discharged, & in lieu thereof an inquiry directed as to damages.—SLACK v. LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., [1924] 2 Ch. 475; 94 L. 2717a. Appointment of commission under Benefices (Ecclesiastical Duties) Measure, 1926, s. 3 (1)—Necessity for notice to incumbent—In respect of what duties.]—By Benefices (Ecclesiastical) Duties) Measure, 1926, s. 3 (1), where the bishop has reason to think that the ecclesiastical duties of a benefice are inadequately performed he may appoint a commission to inquire into the facts, & on their report that the inadequate performance of the duties is due to the negligence of the incumbent, has power under sect. 5 (1) to inhibit him. By sect. 2 (a) "ecclesiastical duties" include the observance of ordination promises, & also (iii) "an obligation binding the incumbent to manifest in his acts, conduct & course of life, due respect for his sacred office, & a due solicitude for the moral & spiritual welfare of his parishioners." A commission reported to the bishop that the ecclesiastical duties of a benefice were inadequately performed owing to the negligence of the incumbent, & also found certain charges proved which were a violation both of the ordination promises of the incumbent & of the provisions of sect. 2 (a) (iii). By sect. 2 (b): "No incumbent shall be deemed to have been negliegnt in the observance or performance of any of his ordination promises . . . unless such observance or performance has been required of him in writing by the bishop, who shall give him opportunity of replying, before issuing any commission under the provisions of section three of this Measure." No such requirement was made: —Held: the commission had jurisdiction to hold the inquiry, although the above notice had not been given, because the inadequate performance of ecclesiastical duties charged was that of ecclesiastical duties not expressly set out in sect. 2 (b), it being in respect of the inadequate performance of the latter only that such notice is required. The requirement in sect. 2 (b) applies only where the neglect charged is that of ordination promises, as such, or of duties imposed by the Rules for the Representation of the Laity, as such, & the charges against applt. were not charges of this character.—HUNTLEY v. NORWICH (BISHOP), [1931] P. 210.

—— —— Approval of decorations & fittings.] —On the hearing in the Consistory Ct. of London of a petition as to the furniture & fittings of the Church of St. Magnus-the-Martyr, in the City of London, a faculty was granted for, amongst other things: (1) a second Holy Table; (2) an image of the Virgin & Holy Child placed behind the second Holy Table; & (3) a crucifix fixed to a pillar at a considerable height from the floor & near the pulpit. On appeal the Ct. of Arches dismissed the appeal as to (1) & (3), but allowed it as to (2):—Held: (1) the law was the same for every kind of sacred image in a church, including a crucifix or rood, & although such an image was not illegal per se, it could not lawfully be placed in a church without a faculty.

On an application for such a faculty, the question to be considered is whether, if the faculty be granted, there is or is not, in the particular case, a danger of the image being used for purposes of worship or adoration condemned by Article of Religion 22. After discussion of the kind of evidence proper to this inquiry:—Held: (2) there was a danger of the proposed image of the Virgin & Holy Child being so used; (3) an image used for purposes of worship or adoration was an ornament & was illegal, because not included amongst the ornaments of the church sanctioned by the Ornaments Rubric in the Book of Common Prayer; (4) a faculty authorising the erection of an image in a church should not be absolute, but until further order.

(5) The other matter of appeal is the second Holy Table. The church holds, or will hold, between three hundred & four hundred people, & there are a large number of celebrations every week. In those circumstances it would be a matter of course to allow a second Holy Table, but for the exceptional character of the ceremonial & services of this church. I am not, however, disposed to interfere with the exercise of the learned Chancellor's discretion in this part of the case. I think there ought to be full plans & particulars of the decorations & fittings of & surrounding the second Holy Table, & these fittings ought to be subject to the approval of the learned Chancellor & to be specifically included in the faculty (SIR LEWIS DIBDIN).—VINCENT v. ST. 3513b. Cost of investment of redemption money—Compulsory redemption—Jurisdiction of court to deal with.]—By a settlement dated in 1893 certain tithe rentcharges payable out of lands situate at W. were settled, subject to certain life interests which had determined, to the use of H. for life with remainders over. The settlement contained a proviso appointing the trustees of the settlement trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts, & providing that a sole trustee should be competent to act for all the purposes of the Acts, including the receipt of capital money. In 1899 H. assigned his life interest in the rentcharges to C. In 1905 C. died, having by his will devised his real & personal estate to resps. & appointed them his exors. In 1922 applt., who was the owner of the land out of which certain of the tithe rentcharges were payable, in exercise of the power given him by Tithe Act, 1918 (c. 54), s. 3, applied to the Ministry of Agriculture & Fisheries for the redemption of certain of these charges, amounting to £48 10*s.* 8*d.* & 5*s.* respectively, & for the determination by the Minister of the amount of the consideration money payable in respect thereof. On Sept. 20, 1922, resps., in exercise of their option under Tithe Act, 1846 (c. 73), s. 9, signed a form of consent which had been sent to them by the Ministry to the payment of the consideration money to the surviving trustee of the settlement of 1893. A month later they wrote to the Ministry revoking their consent & requesting that the money might be paid into ct. The Ministry thereupon wrote to applt. directing him to pay the money into ct., which he accordingly did. On Feb. 12, 1923, resps. took out an originating summons for an order that the fund in ct. might be invested & the income therefrom paid to resps. or the survivor of them as & when received during the life of the tenant for life :—Held : (1) on an application to invest money paid into ct. representing compensation paid under the Tithe Acts on the redemption of rentcharges, there was no general principle that required the ct. to direct that the person exercising the compulsory powers under the Acts should bear the burden of the costs, but the costs were, under Jud. Act, 1890 (c. 44), s. 5, in the discretion of the ct. entirely unfettered by any such general principle ; the ct. below ought to have exercised its discretion by holding that applt., who had been brought before the ct. solely for the purpose of making him liable for costs, was not so liable, & to have dismissed the application as against him with costs.

(2) Semble : there is no power in the Tithe Acts which enables a tithe owner who has once exercised the option given him by the Act of 1846, s. 9, to revoke or alter the exercise of it.—Re WARTLING TITHE REDEMPTION, [1924] 2 Ch. 123 ; 93 L. a l. —— Power to remove parish priest.]—Applt., a parish priest, was removed from his parish by a decree of removal issued by the bishop of the diocese in which the parish was situated. Applt. claimed a declaration that the decree was illegal & void on the grounds that (1) there was no power under the canon law to issue such a decree unless a "citation" had been first served on him, & he had an opportunity to meet the charges made against him ; (2) alternatively, if the canon law did not require the service of a "citation" or the granting of a personal hearing, yet the making of the decree without notice to him was contrary to natural justice :—Held : the decree was not illegal on either ground.—O'Callaghan v. O'Sullivan, [1925] 1 I. q i. —— ——.]—Land was conveyed to certain persons in trust for a religious body called the United Brethren in Christ, & a congregation was organised & a church built. Subsequently a division took place in the religious body, & it was held that the party to which the congregation in question adhered were seceders. This congregation continued to use the church, &, some of the original trustees having died, appointed new trustees to act with the survivors, & these trustees refused to give up possession to the representative of what had been declared to be the true body :—Held : the trustees must be treated as being trustees for the true body, who were entitled to enforce the trust & to have possession of the church, & it was not necessary to organise another congregation & appoint new trustees for that congregation under Religious Institutions Act.—Brewster v. Hendershot (1900), 27 A. The council were in financial difficulties, & had approached the Minister of Health with a view to obtaining a further loan. This had been refused, unless the finances were placed on a sound footing & expenses reduced. With a view to achieving this result they appointed a sub-committee with full powers to scrutinise expenditure & effect reductions & savings. This committee recommended that pltfs., who were remunerated on the Burnham scale, should have their engagements determined by notice. Acting in pursuance thereof the committee passed the resolutions complained of, & notices were

sa. Right of child—To receive instruction.]—The governing principle of School Act, R. S. S. 1920, c. 110, is that children between the ages referred to in sect. 202 (2) (as amended by 1928, c. 48, s. 18) have the right to attend school & receive instruction. The right is the right of the child itself; & it is not a matter left to the discretion of its parents or the school board.—WILKINSON v. THOMAS (Sask.), [1928] 2 W. W. R. 700.—CAN.

The council in considering these questions were acting in pursuance of their statutory obligations, & no objection could be entertained as to the validity of the notices on the ground of motive. (2) There was power to delegate under 1921 Act, s. 4 (2), & the committee had vested in them the duty of ascertaining how best savings could be brought about. On their report the notices of dismissal had been prepared & sent to pltfs., signed by the clerk of the council. Part III.—Schemes as to Powers and Duties.

24a. For organisation of education—What amounts to "scheme."]—In determining whether proposals put forward by a local education authority for the development & organisation of education in its area & submitted to the Board of Education for approval constitute a "scheme" within Education Act, 1921 (c. 51), s. 11, so as to render necessary to its validity the performance by the authority of the conditions precedent to the submission of a scheme specified in sect. 14 (2) of the Act, the test to be applied is whether both the education authority & the Board of Education intend that which is put forward to be a "scheme" within sect. 11 so as to make the education authority bound, under sect. 15 (1), to give effect to it. The magnitude & quality of the proposals are not material considerations.—R. v. EAST HAM BOROUGH COUNCIL, Ex p. HUNT, [1930] 2 K. B. 64; 99 L. J. K. B. 497; 143 L. T. 709; 94 J. P. 135; 46 T. L. sq. Appointment of trustee—Whether valid—Made at annual meeting of ratepayers—No notice of special business.]—The election of a trustee at the annual meeting of ratepayers in question herein to fill a vacancy on the board caused by resignation was held invalid, since by School Act, R. S. S. 1920, c. 110, s. 125, such a vacancy must be filled at a special meeting; &, since sect. 92 (2) requires the notice of a special meeting to set forth its purpose, & the notice of said annual meeting made no mention of the election of a trustee to fill the vacancy, it could not be said that the annual meeting was such a special meeting.—LACOURSE v. MCLELLAN & DEGRAW, [1929] 3 D. On a case stated by the Minister of Health under Audit (Local Authorities) Act, 1927 (c. 31), s. 2 :—Held : the concrete paving or flagging of the playgrounds was not an alteration or improvement in the buildings, & that therefore the obligation to pay for such work was not thrown upon the managers of the schools by Education Act, 1921 (c. 51), s. 29 (2) (d), but the local education authority were bound to pay for such work under their obligation to maintain & keep efficient all public elementary schools within their area which are necessary.—LANCASTER (COUNTY PALATINE) COUNCIL v. CROWE (No. 1), [1929] 1 K. 26 i. Duty to "maintain & keep efficient"—School transferred to local authority.]—Trustees of a voluntary Episcopal school transferred it to the local education authority, the school then being conducted as a primary school, with a supplementary course. Two years after the transfer, the education authority altered the system & began to conduct it in sequence with a neighbouring school. In an action against the education authority at the instance of the former trustees :—Held : under Education (Scotland) Act, 1918, s. 18 (3), defenders were bound to hold, maintain, & manage the transferred school as a public school of the same character & status as at the date of the transfer & provide similar instruction to that provided at that date.—NORFOR v. ABERDEENSHIRE EDUCATION AUTHORITY, [1924] S. There was no secondary school in Arran, & the children attended Ardrossan Academy, which is within the education authority. Except for two months in summer, the children left Arran for Ardrossan on Monday mornings, & they were boarded during the week with persons resident in Ardrossan, with whom they lived in family. On Saturday they returned home for the week-end, & they spent their holidays at their homes in Arran. The A. education authority claimed repayment of the cost of educating the children at Ardrossan from the B. education authority :—Held : pursuers were entitled to recover the cost of the children's education from defenders. On Apr. 10, 1893, the three Govts. of the Dominion, Ontario, & Quebec entered under statutory authority into an agreement of submission as to matters in difference in the settlement of accounts between them under the award of 1870, & for the ascertainment & distribution of the said school fund. 182a. —— ——.]—The Girls' Public Day School Trust was incorporated as a co., but its memorandum & articles were framed with the object of establishing schools that would give a good education at the lowest possible cost. The Trust School was open to the general public, a large proportion of its pupils were scholars from the public elementary schools, & a great proportion of its governing body were nominated by the local education authority, &, further, the school was largely maintained by public moneys, & in the view of the Board of Education the school satisfied the regulation which prohibited any Parliamentary grant to a school conducted for private profit. In accordance with the Board's wishes it was provided that the co should be converted into an educational trust at the end of a period & exceeding fifty years from 1905, & that in the event of a winding up before the end of that period the surplus assets of the co. should be subject to an educational trust & should not be distributed among the shareholders; that during the period above-mentioned the dividend paid on share capital should not exceed a sum equal to 4 per cent. a year. The Comrs. found on the facts the Trust School was a public school, & as such entitled to the benefit of the exemption from income tax :—Held : there was ample evidence on which the Comrs. could find that this school was a public school. & the possibility of profit arising to an individual in the course of carrying on a school did not of necessity prevent the school having the character of a public school.

The existence of a perpetual foundation is not by itself conclusive but only one of the factors to be considered. There is no distinction between money used for a public school raised by debentures at interest, & money raised by preference shares with limited interest. The judgments in Blake v. London Corpn., No. 178, were not intended to lay down a rule that no school from the conduct of which any person could derive pecuniary benefit could in any circumstances be a public school.—GIRLS' PUBLIC DAY SCHOOL TRUST v. EREAUT (INSPECTOR OF TAXES), [1931] A. 275a. —— ——.]—At a school for boys there was a rule prohibiting smoking by pupils during the school term, whether on the school precincts or in public. During the term a pupil rather less than sixteen years old, after having left the school for the day & returned home, smoked a cigarette in the public street, & next day the schoolmaster administered to him five strokes of the cane as a punishment for breach of the rule. On the hearing of an information against the schoolmaster for an alleged assault on the boy the justices found that the rule in question was reasonable, that the father of the boy by sending him to the school authorised the schoolmaster to administer reasonable punishment to the boy for breach of a school rule, & that the punishment administered was reasonable; & they dismissed the information. 302b. —— —— —— Onus of proof.]—The council of deft. borough, as the local education authority, in pursuance of a recommendation of their education committee, made after exhaustive inquiries & discussion, resolved that the engagements of all married women teachers falling under certain specified categories should be terminated; &, accordingly, notice was given to each of pltfs. to terminate her engagement. Pltfs., three married women, had for several years been engaged under contracts terminable by a month's notice on either side, as assistant certificated teachers in some of defts.' schools, & were admittedly efficient teachers. It was proved that the object of the council in reducing the number of the married women teachers was to create vacancies for unemployed single women teachers whom the council trained for the teaching profession & for whom it was important in the interest of educational efficiency that teaching posts should be provided. In carrying out that policy, the council, with the view of minimising cases of hardship in the selection of married women teachers for dismissal, took into consideration the domestic circumstances & duties of the married women teachers & the earning capacity of their husbands. Pltfs. sought declarations that the notices of dismissal were invalid on the ground that the council in giving them did not act bonâ fide with the intention of discharging their statutory duties of maintaining educational efficiency, but acted with the illegitimate object of providing employment for unmarried women without reference to educational efficiency, of obliging married women teachers to confine themselves to home duties & of preventing those whose husbands were in regular employment from increasing the income of the joint home :—Held : (1) pltfs. failed to discharge the onus which lay upon them of showing that the policy adopted by the council of reducing the number of the married women teachers for the purpose of creating vacancies for unemployed single women teachers, & the steps taken to carry it out, were in excess of their statutory powers or were adopted or taken in pursuance of some illegitimate object; (2) the matters taken into consideration by the council were not irrelevant from an educational standpoint, but were material factors in determining, not only whether the policy ought to be adopted, but the best method of applying it; (3) as defts. had acted bonâ fide & within their statutory powers, the action ought to be dismissed.—

In terminating pltf.'s employment, said proviso was not observed, nor, as found by this ct. on the evidence, was there any effective waiver by pltf. of his privilege thereunder. Pltf. sued for damages for wrongful termination :—Held : sect. 196 of School Act, R. S. A., 1922, as amended 1923, c. 35, s. 8, which provided for an appeal to the Minister by "any teacher who has been suspended or dismissed by the board," had no application to deprive pltf. of his right of action. On one occasion he temporarily removed the fire screen which usually guarded the fire in his room, &, the junior class coming into his room as usual, & going to the fire, the clothes of one of them, a child of six years of age, caught fire, & she was severely burned :—Held : deft. was liable.—BOHANE v. DRISCOLL, [1929] I. The deputy returning officer rejected the nomination papers as being invalid, because the parish within the poor law union for which qualification was claimed was not stated. Upon an election petition:—Held: (1) the omission to state in the nomination paper the name of the parish for which the person nominated was qualified as a local government elector was a non-compliance with Rural District Councillors Election Order, 1898, r. 4; (2) that defect was not cured by Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), s. 13, because that sect. only applied to a case where there had been a wrongful admission of a nomination paper, & did not apply to a case where a nomination paper had been rejected; (3) neither was the omission an "inaccurate description" of the person nominated within r. 33 of the 1898 Order, but was a non-compliance with the requirements of r. 4 of that Order, & therefore was not cured by r. 33.—BALDWIN v. ELLIS, [1929] 1 K. 1593a. —— " Candidate "—Necessity for declaration or nomination.]—An election for the office of county aldermen took place at a meeting of a county council, & voting papers were signed & personally delivered to resp., who was chairman of the county council & of the meeting, & were openly produced & read by him. Amongst the voting papers was one containing a vote for petitioner, by writing his name & address on the voting paper, as a county alderman. Forty-four voting papers contained votes for resp. as a county alderman. Neither petitioner nor resp. had before the election declared himself to be a candidate at the election of county aldermen. Resp. declared himself to be elected amongst others a county alderman, & petitioner was not elected. Petitioner, alleging himself to have been a candidate at the election, presented a petition against the election of resp. :—Held : petitioner was not right in alleging himself to have been a candidate at the election for county aldermen, as he had not been elected & had not declared himself before the election as a candidate for election, & the writing by the voter of petitioner's name & address on the voting paper did not amount to a nomination of him as candidate within Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 77, & he was not, under s. 88 of the Act, entitled to present a petition for the purpose of questioning the election of resp.—CAMBRIDGE COUNTY COUNCIL CASE, FORDHAM v. WEBBER, [1925] 2 K. 38a. —— To "person" requiring supply—Who is —Receiver.]—A colliery co., at the time of the appointment of a receiver in a debenture holders' action, owed a sum of money to an electrical distribution co. for electricity supplied to them. The distribution co. threatened to cut off the supply of electricity from the colliery co. unless payment of the arrears was guaranteed by the receiver. The receiver commenced an action to restrain the distribution co. from cutting off the supply. By South Wales Electrical Power Distribution Company Act, 1900, s. 40, it is provided that: "the co. shall give a supply of energy to any person who requires a supply which may be given by this Act other than a supply in bulk upon that person entering into a binding agreement to take the energy upon such terms as failing agreement shall be fixed by a single arbitrator appointed by the Board of Trade":—Held: the receiver was a "person" within the sect. & was therefore entitled to require a supply of electricity upon the terms set out in the sect.; & the distribution co. must be restrained from withholding or threatening to withhold from him a supply of electricity.—GRANGER v. SOUTH WALES ELECTRICAL POWER DISTRIBUTION CO., [1931] 1 Ch. 551; 100 L. 38a. —— —— General strike—Refusal to employ naval ratings—Agreement with union workers to abandon supply of power.]—Pltfs., who carried on business in S., were entitled, by statute & by contract, to receive from the S. borough council a supply of electrical power, but were deprived of this supply on certain days in May, 1926, when the general strike was in operation. In respect of this deprivation of supply pltfs. sued defts., who were the members of the Electricity Supply Committee of the S. borough council, to whom the council had lawfully delegated the management of the electricity supply, alleging that defts. had wrongfully & maliciously conspired & combined among themselves & with the London District Committee of the Electrical Trades Union to procure & induce the borough council, its servants & agents, to discontinue the supply of electrical power to pltfs. The writ in the action was issued on Jan. 13, 1927. Defts. denied pltfs.' allegations, & pleaded Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61). At the trial it was proved that at the end of Apr. 1926, when the general strike was threatened, the Govt. made preparations for the maintenance of essential services & offered to provide naval ratings to take the place of workers who might go on strike. The Govt. also issued an Emergency Order relieving the S. borough council from its obligation to supply the whole of the previous requirements of consumers of power by 50 per cent. Defts. did not accept the Govt.'s offer of naval ratings to work the electricity plant, considering it unwise to do so in view of the likelihood of disorder in the borough; but they discussed the position with the Trades Union Council & eventually resolved that if the union workers would continue the supply of light they would abandon the supply of power. The result of this was that the supply of power to pltfs., as to all other occupiers of premises in the borough, was discontinued, whereby pltfs. suffered damage. The jury found that defts. in making the agreement whereby power was not supplied to pltfs. were not acting in good faith & in the honest belief that they were carrying out their statutory duties, & that they were actuated by an indirect motive to injure pltfs. & to further the interests of those taking part in the strike. Upon these findings judgment was entered for pltfs. Defts. appealed:—Held: there was no evidence to support the jury's findings.—SCAMMELL G. & NEPHEW, LTD. v. HURLEY, [1929] 1 K. B. 419; 98 L. J. 39a. —— Injunction to restrain supply by another person.]—Pltfs., a local authority empowered to supply electricity within a certain area, sought an injunction under Electric Lighting Act, 1909 (c. 34), s. 23, to restrain deft. from supplying electricity to certain consumers in the area:—Held: as the supply of electrical energy was not deft.'s primary business, the action failed.—CAERPHILLY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. GRIFFIN, [1928] Ch. 171; 97 L. J. Ch. 139; 138 L. T. 516; 92 J. P. 5; 44 T. L. R. 132; 26 L. G. R. 38.

42a. —— Supply to premises partly outside area—Point of supply within area.]—Defts. were authorised by the County of London (Northern Extensions) Electric Lighting Order, 1897, made under Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 (c. 56) & 1888 (c. 12), to supply electricity within an area adjoining the relators' area of supply. Sect. 6 of the Order prohibited the supply of energy by defts. beyond their area of supply, & Electric Lighting Act, 1909 (c. 34), s. 23, contains a general prohibition against supplying energy outside an authorised area. Defts. entered into a contract to supply a firm having a small part of its premises within defts.' area of supply & the remainder of the premises in the relators' area of supply. For the purpose of this contract defts. erected their apparatus on the part of the premises of the firm within their area, & the consumers' terminals, that is, the point where the electricity was passed from defts.' service lines to the lines on the firm's premises owned & controlled by them, were also on that part of the premises. The use of electricity on this part of the premises was trivial. In the circumstances the A.-G. brought an action on the relation of the relators to restrain defts. from supplying energy to the firm outside their area:—Held:

—— Not incompatible with performance of statutory duties.]—By a Provisional Order of 1898 the B. Council were constituted electricity undertakers in B. with power to charge up to a certain maximum price, but with authority to make special agreements with particular consumers as to price. By a transfer deed of Dec. 31, 1901, approved by the Board of Trade, the B. Council transferred the undertaking to defts. with a provision for retransfer if defts. made default in their obligations as undertakers. By a supplemental deed of same date, made without the approval of the Board of Trade, defts. agreed with the B. Council not to charge higher prices than those charged in the adjoining borough of S. In 1911 the B. district & the contractual rights of the B. Council were transferred to pltfs., the S. Corpn., but defts. still remained electricity undertakers in B. Defts. having recently begun to charge higher prices than pltfs., pltfs. brought an action to restrain their breach of agreement. Defts. contended that their agreement was ultra vires both under Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), s. 11, which prevented them from divesting themselves of their statutory powers without the consent of the Board of Trade, & also under the general law applicable to statutory undertakings:—Held: the agreement was a business transaction into which defts. might reasonably enter; it did not fetter the powers of defts. & was not incompatible with the performance by them of their statutory duties, & was not therefore ultra vires.—SOUTHPORT CORPN. v. BIRKDALE DISTRICT ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., [1925] Ch. 794; 94 L. o i. —— —— Injury to licensee with notice of danger.]—An action for damages for personal injuries sustained by pltf. as the result of his fishing-rod coming into contact with an electrical transmission wire which deft. co. maintained under an easement therefor granted by the owner of the land over which the wire was carried. The land was in the possession of a tenant & the pltf. had, apparently, the implied assent of the tenant to go on the land. The jury found deft. negligent in maintaining the wire too near the ground, but also found that pltf. had been contributorily negligent, & apportioned the damages. The judge dismissed the action, on the ground that the cause of action as set up in the pleadings was confined to alleged breaches of the regulations for such wires under Electrical Energy Inspection Act, R. S. B. C., 1924 (c. 77):—Held: the appeal should be dismissed, on the ground that pltf. was aware of the danger but took no care to avoid it, & deft. owed no duty to him to have its wire strung higher.—SALE v. EAST KOOTENAY POWER CO., LTD. 103a. —— What amounts to employment by "authorised undertaking" — Employment when claim arises.]—The claimant N. had been employed as an electrical engineer by a co. supplying electricity at P. The co. entered into an agreement with an authorised undertaking at N. to take electricity in bulk from that undertaking, & ceased itself to supply electricity from the date of the agreement. The co. then dismissed the claimant, having no further need for his services. He claimed to be entitled to compensation under Electricity (Supply) Act, 1919 (c. 100), s. 16, on the ground that he had suffered loss of employment in consequence of an agreement between authorised undertakers within that sect. ; & he based the amount of his claim on the fact that he had been in receipt of an annual salary. The referee held, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case, that the claim of the claimant was correct, & that the amount of compensation to which he was entitled was £1,160 :—Held : on argument of the special case, (1) although at the time when the agreement was made between the P. co. & the N. undertaking the co. was not an authorised undertaker, it had since become an authorised undertaker & was one at the time when this claim arose, & it was therefore covered by the reference in sect. 16 to authorised undertakers ; & (2) on the facts, the claimant was employed at a weekly & not an annual salary, & the compensation due to him must be calculated accordingly.—NAYLOR v PEACEHAVEN ELECTRIC LIGHT & POWER CO., LTD. 106a. Time for ascertaining value of property.]—Under an Electric Lighting Confirmation Order Act, it was directed that a co. should sell, & a local authority might, & should purchase that part of the undertaking & business of the co., which was situate in the area of the local authority. After a notice to treat had been given the co. incurred a considerable amount of further capital expenditure in respect of the undertaking. The purchase-price having been left to arbitration & the arbitrators referring it to an umpire, the umpire in fixing the purchase price considered that the adjustment of the rights of the parties in respect of such capital expenditure, did not come within the award, & fixed the price without considering it. On an action brought by the co. for specific performance, it was submitted by the local authority that the co. could not show a good title to certain property comprised in the purchase. At the time of the hearing of the action the local authority were endeavouring to obtain leave to borrow the purchase money on the security of their rates :—Held : the High Ct. in this action was the proper party to adjust the rights of the parties as to the additional capital expenditure, that an inquiry must be directed on the matter of the additional expenditure, the local authority being entitled to the undertaking of the co., as it was at the date of purchase subject to necessary fluctuations before completion, & that it could not have thrust on it an unduly enlarged undertaking.—METROPOLITAN ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. MARYLEBONE CORPN. In 1892 applt. co. became the successors of the undertakers named in the order of 1890. Under sect. 63 of the order the local authority, resp. corpn., could within forty-two years give notice requiring the undertakers to sell, subject to all subsisting rights & contracts, at a price to be ascertained by either of two methods, the one selected in this case being by capitalising the net profits of the undertaking at 5 per cent. per annum upon the capital of the co. shown by the books of the co. to have been properly expended on the undertaking at the date of the notice requiring the undertakers to sell. Sect. 4 provided that if the undertaking was purchased in accordance with the provisions

It had only a distribution system within the town, its generating plant being elsewhere. The town assessed the pole line & distribution system at $3,000 & the franchise at $7,000. Applt. contended that, as it had no property in the town except that assessed at $3,000 as aforesaid, the $7,000 assessment on the franchise was illegal :—Held : the assessment did not violate sect. 413 (6) of Town Act, Sask, 1927. Assessment must be made of the land &, " in addition," of the special franchise according to the method of determination laid down. Any argument that might otherwise be based on " double assessment " was met by the express statutory provision.—CANADIAN UTILITIES, LTD. v. STRASBOURG TOWN, [1931] S. C. R. 72 ; 2 D. L. The expression " all other machinery " construed ejusdem generis with the words " dynamos, poles & wires " does not include transformers, switches or electric bulbs in private houses or factories, & which would only benefit the individual ratepayers & not the general body of the ratepayers.—Ex p. LEWIS, [1923] 1 D. of the order the local authority should from the date of such purchase be the undertakers. By sect. 8, the undertakers were required to keep accounts of the capital employed for the purpose of the business distinct from any other accounts. In accordance with sect. 63 notice was given by the corporation on Dec. 3, 1928, to the co. to sell. An action was brought by the corpn. to determine what was the proper method for ascertaining the purchase price to be paid by the corpn., & what was the date as from which the sale was effected & the corpn. became entitled to take the profits of the going concern. The corpn. claimed that the price should be arrived at by capitalising upon a basis which the order did not fix, a sum of 5 per cent. upon the capital of the co. shown by their books to have been properly expended upon the undertaking, upon the footing that that sum represented the annual net profits of the co.'s undertaking, & that they were entitled to the profits as from the date notice was given, namely, Dec. 3, 1928. The co. asserted that the price ought to be fixed by capitalising the annual net profits of their undertaking upon a 5 per cent. basis, in other words, to first ascertain what the annual net profits were & then the capital sum which, if invested at 5 per cent., would produce those profits, & that they were entitled to retain the profits down to the date when the purchase money had been ascertained, & the obligation of the corpn. to pay it had arisen. The judge accepted the view of the corpn. on both points, holding that the date from which the purchase was to take effect was not dependent on the fixing thereof by the Electricity Commissioners under Electric Lighting Act, 1888 (c. 12), s. 2, but was to be ascertained by reference to the provisional Order of 1890 alone:—Held: there would be difficult calculations necessitated by the co.'s method of arriving at the purchase price, & sect. 8 might be used as indicating that the method suggested by the corpn. was right & would simplify the calculation. Where there was no special indication of the date when property was to change hands the date of the transfer would be that of taking possession after a good title was shown, but here there were certain indications. The co. relied on sect. 4 of the order as showing that the date must be when the local authority acquired their rights & responsibilities upon payment of the purchase-money, but sect. 4 dealt with a different matter to sect. 63, & did not elucidate the interpretation of sect. 63, subclause 1, the clause elected as the basis for arriving at the price. The words "at the date of such notice" in that sect. showed that to be the crucial date.—OXFORD CORPN. v. OXFORD ELECTRIC CO., LTD. (1930), 143 L. T. 577; 94 J. P. 229; 29 L. G. R. 1, C. A.

The trustees declined to accept the trust. All the cestuis que trust then executed a deed of trust, by which they agreed to divide the property into two classes. Class 1 was to be sold immediately, to pay testator's debts. Class 2 was to be held by the trustees named, in trust for the purposes of the will, so far as not inconsistent with the trust deed, to pay the rents accruing to the parties as entitled under the will, & with power to a majority of the trustees to sell even within the nineteen years, at the end of which period, however, the property was to be sold absolutely, & the proceeds divided as the will directed. 1283a. Reconversion by foreclosure—Effect of Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c 37), s. 9—Intention to accept reconversion.]—Testator, who died in 1861, devised his real estate in strict settlement & empowered the trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, to sell the same or any part thereof, & directed them with such consent to invest the proceeds of sale in the purchase of freehold land or in the public funds or on real securities to be respectively settled & held to & upon such uses & trusts corresponding as nearly as might be with the uses & trusts therein declared concerning the land sold, with power for the trustees from time to time with the like consent to vary such investments. In the events which happened the material limitations of the will resulted as follows : To the use of E., T. & J. successively for life in the order named, with remainder to the use of E., T. & J. as tenants in common in tail general, with cross-remainders between them in tail general, with remainders over. In 1867 part of the land was sold & the proceeds invested in mtge. of freehold land. In 1871 E. died leaving an only daughter. In 1881 T. died a bachelor. In 1898 the surviving trustee foreclosed, & in 1899, by a deed appointing a new trustee to which J. was party, the foreclosed land was conveyed to the uses & upon the trusts of the will as if the same had been thereby specifically devised. On the death of J. in 1916 without issue, his executrix, who was also executrix of T., claimed that the foreclosed land in fact represented personalty & was subject to a trust for sale by Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c. 37), s. 9, & that she was entitled to two-thirds of the proceeds. The only daughter of E. claimed the foreclosed land as tenant in tail under the limitations of the will, E., T. & J. never having disentailed :—Held : (1) owing to the power to vary investments, the crucial time for determining the character of each investment was the death of J., the surviving tenant for life, & that the mtges. having been then foreclosed the mere foreclosure operated as a reconversion of the property into realty, & that there was no equity on the part of any cestui que trust under the will to have the personal character of the investment restored to it; (2) by the deed of 1899, to which all the parties able to control the character of the investment of the trust fund were parties, the foreclosed land was duly adopted as real estate & settled to the uses of the will; (3) although Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c. 37), s. 9 (5), may apply to land foreclosed before the commencement of the Act & remaining at the passing of the Act in the condition determined by the foreclosure, it would be unreasonable to extend the retrospective operation of the section to a case like the present where previously to the commencement of the Act the foreclosed land had been definitely accepted & settled as land & rights acquired thereby; (4) even if, by virtue of sub-sect. 5, Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c. 37), s. 9, was to be deemed to apply to foreclosed lands as from the date of foreclosure, the terms of both sub-sects. 3 & 4 had in the present case been complied with sufficiently to prevent the reconversion of the land into money under sub-sects 1 & 2; (5) the foreclosed land had become legally vested in the daughter of E. in tail as the heir in tail of E.—Re Bogg, Allison v. Paice, [1917], 2 Ch. 239; 86 L. 1316a. Contingent reversionary interest—In personalty.]—Testator, who was entitled in reversion expectant upon the determination of his wife's interest &, contingently upon no issue of the marriage living to attain a vested interest, to the proceeds of sale of certain real estate conveyed by him, upon his marriage in 1880, to trustees upon trust for sale, died in 1886 in his wife's lifetime, having devised the real estate, which had remained unsold, to the use of his wife for life with remainders over by way of legal limitations in strict settlement. There was no issue of the marriage. The real estate was not sold in the lifetime of the wife, who accepted the benefits under her husband's will & died in 1921 :—Held : inasmuch as at his death testator's interest was a contingent reversionary interest in personalty, contingent upon the event of no posthumous child being born who might attain a vested interest, & reversionary because it was expectant upon his wife's life interest, testator was not competent to effect a reconversion by his will, because he never became entitled to an absolute interest in the property before his death, & the property passed under his will as personalty.—Re Sturt, De Bunsen v. Hardinge, [1922] 1 Ch. 416; 91 L. 1691 ii. —— ——.]—P. in Feb. 1921, conveyed certain lands to a trust co., & by a declaration of trust of even date, accepted by the trust co., declared certain trusts upon which the lands were to be held. P.'s wife was to have a life interest in three of the parcels conveyed, & certain other benefits, & at her death the property was to be distributed among P.'s children ; this life interest was to be in lieu of dower in all P.'s lands. On Feb. 21, 1921, P., by letter, requested the trust co. to sign a declaration of trust to the effect that it held one of the parcels of land conveyed to it, in which the wife was given a life interest, in trust, for payment to an investment society of $7,500 "which pays off the loan on stock for that amount held by my wife," & this the trust co. did. By P.'s will, made on the date of the execution of the conveyance & declaration, he appointed the trust co. his exor. & trustee. The wife took nothing under the will. P. died in July, 1921. In Jan. 1923, the trust co. made a mtge. in favour of an assurance co. upon three of the properties in which the widow claimed a life estate, to secure repayment of a large sum of money which was advanced to the trust co. & which the trust co. applied in paying off loans made to P. 1743 i. Satisfaction defined.]—Satisfaction is the donation of a thing, with the intention, either expressed or implied, that it is to be taken, either wholly or in part, in extinguishment of some prior claim of the donee. One whose life was insured assigned to his son a portion of the insurance moneys $1,000, in consideration of an undertaking by the son to advance from time to time moneys necessary to pay parts of the premiums. Subsequently the insured made his will by which he gave to his son $1,000 "out of the money payable at my death out of my life insurance policy" :—Held : the $1,000 given by the will could not be regarded as a satisfaction of the $1,000 assigned to the son.—Re MARKS (1921), 64 D. The husband paid to a builder with whom he had made contracts about £2,000 for improvements & repairs to the house. A few months later he died at the age of fifty-three. It was found that the transaction was not entered into with intent to diminish the value of the husband's estate, but that the object was simply to improve the family home in accordance with their means & station in life ; & that there was no reason to believe that the husband would not enjoy the normal span of life, or that he would necessarily predecease his wife :—Held : the payments did not constitute a gift to the wife of the deceased within Death Duties Act, 1921, of New Zealand, ss. 38, 39, so as to be deemed to be part of the husband's estate for the purposes of that Act.—FINCH v. STAMP DUTIES COMR., [1929] A. There followed a discretionary trust in favour of A., his wife or children, with remainder in trust for A.'s sons, & with ultimate remainder to E. The mother died in 1925, & estate duty was paid on the value of the settled property. The trustees, under their discretion, then paid £50 a month to A. & the balance of income to E. In 1926 A. died, unmarried, & estate duty was claimed:—Held: A., in executing the disentailing deed & resettlement, had acted as a person "competent to dispose of property" within 1894 Act, s. 22 (2) (a), & the discretionary trust in his favour was a reservation by him of an "interest" in the property within Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (c. 12), s. 38 (2) (c). 90a. —— —— Trust established in England.]—By his will, made in English form, testator, who declared that the instrument was to take effect according to the law of Hong Kong where he was domiciled, devised & bequeathed his property, which was situate out of the United Kingdom, to trustees on trust to invest a sum to produce an annuity for his wife, to pay certain legacies & to stand possessed of the residue to pay the annual income thereof to his sons or son during their or his lives or life, & on the death of the last survivor of his sons in trust for his son's children. The tenant for life, who was the only son of testator living at his death, wished to borrow money &, at the request of the lenders, he appointed, in England, four new trustees of the will, three of whom were resident in England. Between 1913 & 1922, owing to the tenant for life's dealings with the trust funds, proceedings in the Ch. Div. were instituted & orders were made in connection with the administration of the trusts of the will. In 1922 the tenant for life died, leaving him surviving his widow & two infant sons, who were domiciled in Hong Kong but had been made wards of ct. by virtue of the proceedings in the Ch. Div. & the orders made therein. The trust property was situate abroad:—Held: the succession of the infants to testator's residuary estate was at his death a succession by virtue of Hong Kong law & to Hong Kong property, & it had never lost that character or fallen within 1853 Act, s. 2, & the property was not liable to estate duty under 1894 Act, s. 2 (2).—A.-G. v. BELILIOS, [1928] 1 K. The certificates were in all cases situate in London, & the securities themselves were transferable in London at the outbreak of war, & at the date of testator's death. Testator died in 1915, in Berlin, being domiciled in Germany. By his will three-fifths of his property were bequeathed to German & Austrian beneficiaries, & two-fifths to British & Polish beneficiaries. In 1915 the will was proved in Germany by the exors. named therein. In 1922, grant of administration in England was made to pltf. By virtue of Treaty of Peace Orders, the whole of the interests of the German & Austrian beneficiaries became charged with & subject to the claims of the Custodian of Enemy Property. In 1922 all the South African securities were transferred to the South African Custodian, an exor. dative was appointed in South Africa to administer testator's South African estate, & estate duty in South Africa was paid by him in respect thereof. Some of the American securities were transferred to the American Alien Property Custodian, administration of testator's American estate was granted in America, & the securities were transferred to the American Custodian to be distributed by the American administrator among the beneficiaries. All the remaining American securities, with the exception of a small balance, were released to pltf. by the English Custodian. In May, 1924, pltf. filed a corrective affidavit, including therein those of the American securities which had been released to him at that date, & he paid estate duty & interest in respect thereof:—Held: (1) all the shares were

The settlor died in 1925, without having exercised the joint power of appointment, leaving his wife & children him surviving. For the purpose of death duty under the Stamp Duties Act, 1920-1924, of N. S. At her death in 1918 the furniture was sold for £45,000, & the Crown claimed succession duty & estate duty upon the difference between the two sums from the trustee of the settlements:—Held: (1) the transaction was a bonâ fide sale between mother & son, & no succession duty was payable; (2) as to the claim for estate duty, there had been a "purchase for partial consideration" within 1894 Act, s. 3 (2), the consideration paid represented four-fifths of the value of the property at the date of such purchase, & estate duty was payable only upon one-fifth of the value as at the date of the death of the tenant for life; (3) "partial consideration," in sect. 3 (2), meant something less than the full & fair value as between buyer & seller.—Re BATEMAN (BARONESS), [1925] 2 K. In 1892 the redemption of the annuity for a sum of £55,890 was agreed upon, & that amount was paid into ct. & invested in the purchase of Consols. The fifth Viscount E. died in Aug. 1922, & the sixth Viscount in Feb. 1923. Questions having arisen as to the payment of estate duty, the ct. was asked whether estate duty became payable (a) upon the capital of the sum of Consols, or (b) upon the value of the interest of the successor to the title in such sum of Consols, & if estate duty became so payable, then whether, for the purpose of determining the rate of estate duty, such sum of Consols ought (a) to be aggregated with the other property, or (b) to be treated as an estate by itself:—Held: "chattels" in collocation with settled lands in 1894 Act, s. 5 (5), did not suggest personalty generally, but those particular items of it which were usually settled upon trusts that followed the devolution of the settled land, & the sum of Consols was not "chattels" within the sub-sect., & must be aggregated with the other property for the purpose of paying estate duty.—Re EXMOUTH'S ANNUITY, [1925] Ch. 280; 94 L. In the marriage contract the son accepted the obligations therein contracted by his father as in full satisfaction in any event of all legal claims for legitim or otherwise he might have upon his father's estate. At the date of the marriage contract & of the bond the only claim to legitim possible to the son was in the event of his elder brother predeceasing his father. That event happened, & at the father's death the amount of legitim to which the second son would have had a claim, had he not discharged it, was £25,000:—Held: the bond could not be regarded as a debt incurred by the father for full consideration in money or money's worth wholly for deceased's own use & benefit in the sense of 1894 Act, s. 7 (1), & did not form a proper deduction in determining the value of his estate for the purposes of estate duty.—LORD ADVOCATE v. WARRENDER'S TRUSTEES (1906), 8 F. sa. "Interest in business"—What is—1914 Act, s. 15.]—A father & two of his sons carried on business in partnership. By a re-arrangement of the partnership relations the father accepted £124,646 in full of his whole rights in the old firm & its assets, & agreed to allow this sum to remain as a loan to the new firm at 4 per cent. interest, on condition that, if called up by him, or in any event on his death, it was to be repaid by ten yearly instalments. The father contributed no capital to the new firm apart from the loan, but had an interest in the profits to the extent of a one-tenth share. He died in 1922, leaving a will by which he bequeathed the residue of his estate, including the loan, to his family, & estate duty was duly paid thereon. The two sons came to an arrangement with their father's exors., under which the sons agreed to repay the loan at once in return for a certain discount; & in settling with the exors., they retained in the business the respective shares of the loan falling to them, by crediting themselves with the amounts in the books of the firm. Within two years of the father's death one of the sons died, & estate duty became payable on his estate. His exor. having claimed a reduction, under the above sect., of the estate duty payable on the sum credited to the son in the firm's books in respect of his share of his father's loan:—Held: the father's right to repayment of the loan was not an "interest in the business" within the sect., & the sum standing in the son's name in the books of the firm was an interest in the assets of the firm, & was not identical with his father's interest in the jus credit of the loan.—GLEN v. INLAND REVENUE, [1926] S. He directed his trustees to sell the business. The daughter died eight days after testator, under the age of twenty-five, & before the direction to sell had been implemented. The trustees having claimed a reduction, under Finance Act, 1914, s. 15, of the estate-duty payable on the daughter's death, in so far as assessable on the value of the business, the Comrs. of Inland Revenue refused the claim:—Held: sect. 15 applied, in respect that the beneficial possession & enjoyment of the residue, including the business, had passed to the daughter on testator's death, & had again passed on her death; & the trustees were, accordingly, entitled to the relief claimed.—WARREN'S TRUSTEES v. INLAND REVENUE, [1928] S. By sub-clause 28 he provided that on the death of any of the legatees, his or her share should accrue to the survivors. By sub-clause 29 he provided for the application of the remaining income in payment of other legacies, & these being paid the remainder was to be applied in the same manner as the 74¼ hundredths. By clause 10 it was directed that the capital should go in moieties to charities. By an order made on July 28, 1924, the income was divided into one hundred & thirds. Two of the income beneficiaries had now died. On a summons taken out in these circumstances asking whether the estate duty payable by reason of the death of any person entitled to any share of the income was to be paid upon the value of the share in the capital equal to that of the income previously enjoyed by such person or upon the like proportion of the actuarial capital value of the income during the respective lives of the several persons entitled thereto or other the period during which the trusts in respect of such income should be subsisting or how otherwise the same ought to be calculated & out of what fund the same was payable:—Held: (1) the property which passed on the death of any such person must be taken to be a share of capital in the residuary trust fund, & that estate duty must be paid on the value of such share; (2) the duty payable on any such death was a first charge on that portion of the residue out of which the income was payable, & must be borne by the corpus of such estate.—Re NORTHCLIFFE, ARNHOLZ v. HUDSON, [1929] 1 Ch. 327; 98 L. Testator died in 1893, & H. entered into possession of the lands under the trusts of the will. J. died intestate & unmarried in 1897, leaving his brother, the said H., his heir-at-law. By an order of the ct. made in 1908 it was declared that on the death of J., H. took an estate for life, with a vested absolute interest in remainder, subject to being divested if he left issue, in the freehold lands devised by his father's will, &, accordingly, that H. could make a valid testamentary disposition or otherwise dispose of his estate or interest in the lands. On the death of J., H. took out a grant of administration, & paid duty in respect of the personal property which passed on the death of J., but he did not pay any estate duty in respect of the contingent interest in the lands which had been devised to J. by his father's will, & which passed to him, H., as his brother's heir-at-law. H. died without issue in 1920, & estate duty was paid by his exor. on the value of the property which passed on his death, including the lands in question:—Held: the Revenue Comrs. were entitled to claim estate duty on the death of J. in respect of his contingent estate in the lands which passed on his death to H., & the rate of estate duty was to be calculated according to the value of that interest when it fell into possession on the death of H., together with the value of the rest of the estate of J.—Re O'CONNOR'S ESTATE, HENDRICK v. REVENUE COMRS., [1931] I. limited in remainder, in the event of any other issue of the fourth Viscount succeeding to the title, to the use of the sons of such eldest son & other sons of the fourth Viscount in tail male. Subject to such rentcharge, the L. settled estates were limited to the use of pltf. for life with remainder to the use of his eldest son for life with remainders over. By a deed poll dated Oct. 15, 1913, provision was made for the abatement of the £50,000 rentcharge in certain events. The third Viscount, who was tenant for life of the estates in question, had died in 1923, while nine of the sixteen half-yearly instalments of estate duty payable in respect of the death of the second Viscount, who had died in 1919, remained unpaid. One of the questions for the decision of the ct. at the original hearing of the summons (Re Portman (Viscount), No. 249, post) was as to what proportion of the balance remaining unpaid at the death of the third Viscount of the estate duty, which became assessable on the death of the second Viscount in respect of the L. estates, should be borne by the yearly rentcharge of £50,000, & it was admitted in argument that there was no difference in principle in respect of that unpaid balance between that duty & that which was assessable upon the death of the third Viscount. After judgment had been delivered & before the minutes had been finally drawn up, leave was given to withdraw the admission made in argument as aforesaid, & it was directed that the question with regard to the liability of the rentcharge in respect of the unpaid instalments of estate duty assessable on the death of the second Viscount should be argued:—Held: the effect of 1894 Act, s. 9 (1), was to throw the incidence of the duty ratably & in proper proportions upon all persons becoming beneficially interested in the property upon which the duty was constituted a first charge by force of sect. 9 (1) of the Act; the rentcharge, or the abated rentcharge, must be dealt with, as regards these unpaid instalments, in the manner indicated in the original judgment; & the order would be in the terms of the minutes prepared in accordance with that judgment.—Re PORTMAN (VISCOUNT) (No. 2), [1925] Ch. 294; 94 L. 209c. —— Incorporation of Form 8 of Statutory Will Forms, 1925.]—Testator by his will, after making specific & pecuniary bequests, gave to his wife absolutely any freehold or leasehold house belonging to him & in which he should be residing at his death. He declared that all legacies thereby given should be free of all death duties & devised & bequeathed all his residuary real & personal estate to his trustees, & declared that (inter alia) Form 8 of the Statutory Will Forms, 1925, should be incorporated in his will so far as it was applicable to his residuary estate. The only real estate testator possessed at the time of his death was a freehold house in which he was then residing. Questions arose: (a) whether having regard to Form 8, clause 4 (c), of the Statutory Will Forms, 1925, the estate duty payable in respect of testator's freehold house on his death should be borne by the testator's widow or by the residuary estate, & (b) whether upon the true construction of the will, the estate & succession duties payable by reason of the testator's death in respect of the freehold house were payable out of the residuary estate:—Held: (1) although the exor. was by reason of the provisions of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 16, now accountable for estate duty on realty, the incidence of the duty remained unchanged & was still charged by virtue of the Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 9 (1), on the realty in respect of which it was paid. Form 8, clause 4 (c), therefore, had no application, & apart from the question of construction the estate duty on the freehold house must be borne by the widow; (2) on the true construction of the will testator had used the word "legacies" not in its strict sense, but as including the gift of the house in which he was residing at his death, although that house was of freehold tenure. The estate & succession duties payable by reason of testator's death in respect of the freehold house in question were therefore properly payable out of the residuary estate. Re PREVITÉ, STURGES v. PREVITÉ, [1931] 1 Ch. 447; 100 L. The question having been raised whether the duties payable on the deaths of testator's daughters under Finance Act, 1914 (c. 10), s. 14, were charged under or by virtue of clause 7 of the will on the shares bequeathed by that clause:—Held: what testator contemplated by clause 7 was an immediate process under which the shares were to be sold & applied in paying duties which were presently payable, & under which, after those duties had been paid, the residue of the shares or the proceeds were to be handed over to G.—Re FENWICK, LLOYD'S BANK, LTD. v. FENWICK, [1922] 2 Ch. 775; 92 L. 265a. Bequests to several charities successively—Intention to exonerate earlier charities.]—By his will dated 1911 a testator devised & bequeathed his residuary real & personal estate to his exors., the Public Trustee & another, upon trust for sale & conversion &, after payment of his debts & funeral & testamentary expenses, he desired the balance (called his residuary trust fund) to be placed with the Public Trustee & the income paid to his wife for life. Testator then directed that after his wife's death four capital sums amounting to £10,000, free of estate duty & settlement estate duty but not free of legacy duty, should be set apart & the respective income paid to certain life tenants respectively. By clause 9 testator directed that on the cesser of the respective life tenancies the respective capital sums should be paid to thirteen charities thereinafter named "in the order of priority in which the names appear in this my will as far as the money will go, no. 1 being first paid; no. 2 next & so on, that is to say:" Testator then enumerated thirteen consecutive charities, giving nos. 1 to 10 £500 apiece; no. 11, £1,000; & nos. 12 & 13 £2,000 apiece, thereby exhausting the £10,000. The residue, after providing for the settled £10,000 was given to a daughter. Testator died on June 11, 1914, before Finance Act, 1914 (c. 10), s. 14, abolishing settlement estate duty & the relief thereby conferred, was passed. The estate was cleared & the residuary trust fund paid to the Public Trustee, who paid the income to the wife till her death on July 1, 1928, & then set apart the £10,000 settled legacies. One of these was immediately distributable without further payment of estate duty, owing to the life tenant having predeceased the wife; but on the cesser of subsequent life tenancies estate duty would be payable, & the Public Trustee therefore issued a summons to determine how it was to be borne, as between the successive charities:—Held: clause 9 conferred an absolute priority as between the successive charities, & was sufficient as between the earlier & the later charities to exempt the former from their primâ facie statutory liability to contribute to the estate duty under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 8 (4).—Re LOMER, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. VICTORIA HOSPITAL FOR CHILDREN, [1929] 1 Ch. 731; 98 L. 265b. Devise with option to sell to specified person—Purchaser to pay annuities & road charges—No reference to death duties.]—Testator, by his will, devised land to P. subject to the payment of certain annuities, of road-making charges for which testator was liable, & of estate & other death duties, & subject also to the proviso that if within twenty-years of testator's death P. should desire to sell the land, he was to give the Governors of the N. Grammar School the option of purchasing the land at the price of £300 an acre, such offer to be subject to the payment by the Governors of the said annuities & road charges, & acceptance to be notified within three months. The land, of about 22 acres in area, was in fact worth £670 an acre at the date of the testator's death. In accordance with the condition P. offered it to the School Governors at £300 an acre, & the offer was duly accepted & the land sold & conveyed to the Governors for £6,688. The value of the land for the purposes of death duties was assessed at £14,720. On a summons being taken out to determine whether the Governors were liable to pay a rateable proportion of the estate & succession duties levied upon the value of the property:—Held: that the Governors having acquired the land, not under any disposition by testator, but by the voluntary act of P. in selling instead of retaining the property, took no benefit under testator's will, & they acquired the land expressly subject to annuities & road-making charges, but impliedly free from any charge for death duties.—Re COCKERILL, MACKANESS v. PERCIVAL, [1929] 2 Ch. 131; 98 L. The Full Ct. answered these questions as follows: (1) the shares of the six children surviving at the date of the assessment: (2) six. Upon the assessment for 1919–1920 the comr. allowed only one deduction of £5,000, contending that the beneficiaries were not joint owners within the Act. In the receipt given to pltf. by the solr. it was stated that the cheque was given to him "re mtge. 10 R. St.", which was a brief description of land upon which defts. had made a mtge. to the solr.'s father's exors. The solr. notified defts. that the exors. desired payment of this mtge., & that he had a client who would advance the money necessary to pay it off. A mtge. by defts. to pltf. upon this land was thereupon prepared by the solr. & executed by defts. in Mar. 1923. They made payments from time to time upon the mtge. by cheque to the solr., who paid off the mtge. held by the exors., & consequently did not obtain a discharge of it. The $1,100 was misappropriated by the solr., who absconded in 1926. It was intended that the mtge. moneys should be paid to the exors. & not to the mtgors., & this pltf. understood. This action was brought to enforce the mtge., & pltf. in her evidence at the trial stated that the solr. showed her the mtge. in Mar. 1923 :—Held : the facts that the mtgor. delivered the mtge. to the solr. & that he showed it to pltf. did not amount to a representation that the moneys advanced by pltf. had been paid to the holders of the first mtge., & that it had been discharged, & it could not be said that the mtgors. were estopped from disputing the fact that the moneys had been advanced to them.—MURRAY v. CROSSLAND, [1929] 4 D. Money paid on forged cheque—Failure to inform bank of forgery.]—Pltf. had an account with deft. bank, & his wife forged his signature on cheques & thereby drew out all the money left in the account, & she lent it to her sister. Pltf., on discovering the facts, did not at once inform the bank, but about nine months later, when his wife told him that she wanted more money for her sister, he stated his intention of going to the bank, & that night his wife committed suicide. Pltf. then went to the bank & told the manager about the forged cheques. In an action by pltf., claiming to be credited by deft. bank with the amount of the forged cheques, the bank pleaded (a) adoption & ratification, & (b) that pltf. was estopped by his silence from alleging that the signatures were forgeries. The tribunal of first instance found that the forged cheques were honoured through the carelessness of the bank officials. There was no evidence that pltf. had ever adopted the forged cheques as his own :—Held : ratification had no applicability to a forged signature, but pltf. was estopped from alleging the forgeries because his silence until after his wife's death had caused the bank to lose their right of action against the forger, & therefore the action failed.—GREENWOOD v. MARTINS BANK, LTD. 80a. Procedure by judgment summons.]—In an action by pltf. against an unincorporated body & seventeen named persons, described as its committee, in which pltf. claimed damages for libel, judgment was given in the High Ct. for deft. with costs. On a bkpcy. notice founded on that judgment not being complied with, defts. presented a petition in bkpcy. ; but this petition was dismissed by the registrar as being wrong in form, on the ground (inter alia) that the petition was by an agent on behalf of an unincorporated assocn. & others, whereas such an assocn. cannot sue or be sued, either in its own name or by a purported agent. Subsequently, defts. took out a judgment summons in the county ct., & the county ct. judge ordered pltf. to pay by instalments the sum due under the judgment of the High Ct., together with the costs of the summons :—Held : (1) as procedure by judgment summons is a mode of enforcing a judgment & directly in connection with the action, as distinguished from a bkpcy. petition, which is not, the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to make the order :—Held : (2) the death of one of the successful defts. since the judgment did not render it necessary for the survivors to obtain the leave of the ct. before they could enforce the judgment.—BUNDY v. MOTOR CAB OWNER DRIVERS' ASSOCIATION (1930), 143 L. 146a. —— —— Omission to claim costs.]—Where, at the trial, the judge grants a certificate for speedy execution under 1 Will. 4, c. 7, s. 2, pltf. should issue one writ of execution for the amount of the damages & costs. 311a. —— Murder of employer—Books with false entries on which commission payable to employee found by body.]—Applt. was indicted for the murder of his employer, whose dead body was found in the latter's locked garage. Evidence was given (inter alia) that on the seat of a car in the garage at the time of the discovery of the body there were found books which had contained entries or impressions of fictitious orders showing that applt. had been paid commission thereon. These entries or impressions had apparently been made by applt.'s employer, & the leaves had been torn out. Evidence was also given that in the garage there was found a letter written to applt. by his employer & making an appointment. This letter was found open & crumpled, but it was not proved that it had reached applt. The theory of the prosecution was that, the fictitious character of the orders having been discovered by the employer, an altercation had arisen & the applt. had murdered him. Applt. was convicted :—Held : evidence above described was admissible as part of the circumstances of the case, & the conviction must be affirmed.—R. v. PODMORE (1930), 46 T. L. R. 365 ; 22 Cr. On Sept. 22, 1898, G.'s agent wrote to pltf. stating that the play had been first performed in Great Britain on a certain date & at a certain place :—Held : a copy of the letter of Sept. 22, 1898, the original having been lost, was admissible as evidence in a copyright action between pltf. & third parties, who claimed a right to produce cinematograph films of the play under an agreement for value with G., dated Sept. 6, 1919, to prove that the first performance of the play took place in this country as stated in the letter since (a) being written by G.'s agent, it constituted an admission by G., a person who, although not named on the record, had a substantial interest in the result ; & (b) it constituted an admission by defts.' predecessors in title.

(2) An entry in the register of first performances of dramatic productions at Stationers' Hall is admissible in evidence as a public register. If such an entry is incorrect, the party producing a certified copy of it may be precluded from relying on it as primâ facie proof of a right to produce or reproduce the play to which it relates, but it can be regarded by the ct. as corroboration of other evidence of title.—FALCON v. FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO., LTD., [1926] 1 K. In an action against the secretary-treasurer to recover an amount alleged to have been misappropriated by him during 1921, pltf. sought to charge him with the receipt of the sum which was shown by said "reconstructed cash book" as received & said book was submitted in evidence:—Held: said book was not admissible against deft.; its contents were not obtained in the manner contemplated by Rural Municipality Act &, therefore, it did not, even if it had been wholly compiled by deft., constitute an acknowledgment by him, as the entries in the original cash book would have done; he had not so recognised or acted upon it as to make its contents evidence against him; it was not secondary evidence of the destroyed cash book; &, the necessary foundation not having been laid for the purpose, it was not admissible as secondary evidence of the taxpayers' receipts & cheques.—GLEN BAIN RURAL MUNICIPALITY v. HALEY, [1928] 3 D. The decision of His Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, which by the provisions of the Act is conclusive, is that on Mar. 22, 1928, Northern Rhodesia was a territory under His Majesty's protection. In taking those inquiries before the master it became necessary to prove the lawful marriage of the parents of the intestate before her birth &, as no record of the marriage could be found, a summons was taken out by pltfs. for the determination of the question whether three certificates of birth of three of the children, including the intestate, of those parents & a certificate of death of one of those children were primâ facie or any evidence of the lawful marriage of the parents:—Held: the certificates were admissible, but not alone sufficient, because taken by themselves they did not identify the persons therein mentioned. 924a. ——.]—Ct. of Probate Act, 1857 (c. 77), s. 73, confers wide powers on the ct. Under it an exor., not willing or competent to take probate, may be replaced by an administrator to be appointed by the ct., if it shall appear to be necessary or convenient by reason of special circumstances. Misfeasance on the part of an exor. with regard to the estate of his testator is a ground for proceeding under the sect., even after the exor. has intermeddled.

Exors. had intermeddled & neglected to prove the will, & had made an agreement with the universal legatee that the will should not be proved. The question is whether the papers are independent or interdependent.

Testator left two wills, one English, the other American; the latter dealt exclusively with property outside the English jurisdiction, but the two documents were interdependent with regard to the residue, which was liable for English estate duty. The exors. of the two wills were different persons. Testator had expressly directed that the American will should be "probated" in America:—Held: (1) the two wills & a codicil to the English will should all be proved in England; (2) the document to be retained in the English Probate Registry as evidence of the testamentary act of making the American 3127a. ——.]—The proviso to R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 1, that nothing in that rule contained shall deprive an exor. who has not unreasonably instituted or carried on or resisted any proceedings, of any right to costs out of a particular estate or fund to which he would be entitled according to the rules theretofore acted upon in the Chancery Div., governs the case of bare exors. who reasonably propound a will & codicil, even if, though the will is pronounced for, the codicil is pronounced against. The position of such exors. differs from that of persons named as exors. in a testamentary paper which they unsuccessfully propound. Having established the validity of the will, & made good their position as testator's exors., they are entitled to their costs of the litigation out of the estate as between solr. & client, & can be deprived of that right, which rests substantially upon contract, only if they have acted culpably or unreasonably. Until that has been established, their costs are not in the discretion of the ct., & notwithstanding Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 49, repealed & re-enacted by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 31 (1) (h), an appeal lies without leave from an order condemning them in costs or depriving them of costs out of the estate.—In the Estate of PLANT, WILD v.

3127b. ——.]—The principle of the decision in In the Estate of Plant, Wild v. Plant, No. 3127a, ante, that exors. who have established the validity of their will are entitled to their whole costs of the litigation, although they fail in establishing a codicil, does not extend in all cases to costs incurred by them by reason of their insisting upon probate not only of clauses in a will expressing the testamentary mind of their testator, but also of a clause which is found not to be his testamentary act. If a residuary gift is excluded from probate on the ground of want of capacity the question still arises whether the costs so incurred by the exors. are due to their "violation or culpable neglect of duty." If the ct. finds on this issue that an exor. is a wrongdoer, his primâ facie right to receive out of the estate costs not otherwise provided for is displaced.—THOMAS v. JONES, [1928] P. 162; 139 L. 3692a. —— —— ——.]—In my view Collis v. Flower, No. 3691, was wrong, for the reasons that I have been stating. The common law tenancy was terminated. The exor. had a common law tenancy, & it was terminated by notice to quit. He did not remain in occupation of the house, &, in my view, the original tenant having no right, as we have now decided, to dispose of the property by will, had no right to give any statutory right to the exor., & the exor., who had not lived in the house, could not claim to be a statutory tenant. In my view, therefore, Collis v. Flower, No. 3691, is no longer an authority.

The administrator case stands on a different footing, because one has to look in all these cases to see what the facts were. The administrator case is the case of Mellows v. Low, No. 3692. There the facts were different. The original tenant was a weekly tenant. It was a common law tenancy, & during her tenancy she died intestate. Consequently, whatever rights she had in her common law tenancy remained to her representatives in an intestacy. No notice to quit was ever given. Consequently the common law tenancy remained. Then the landlord claimed that on the death of the tenant intestate, with no member of her family residing in the house, the tenancy lapsed. It was held that the administratrix was a person who derived title under the original tenant, &, consequently, that the residence could not be interfered with. The point of that case which renders it a right decision is that no notice to quit the common law tenancy had ever been given. The common law tenancy, therefore, remained, & it remained in the person who at common law was entitled to it, & her tenancy had never been terminated. Consequently, Mellows v. Low, No. 3692, on the facts, is right, but if notice to terminate the common law tenancy had been given the ct. could not, in my opinion, have said, unless the matter could be brought within the very curious clause about intestacy to which I have referred, that such an administratrix not being in possession is entitled to be protected by the Act (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—SKINNER v. GEARY, [1931] 2 K. C. who was the right heir of H., by his will appointed the applicant T. exor. & trustee & devised his lands to the use of the applicant for life with remainders over. On Jan. 1, 1926, the commencement of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), the lands passing under the wills of H. & C. remained subject to the settlement created by the will of H., &, in the event of the termination of the limited ownership under the will, also subject to the settlement created by the will of C. On the same date J. was tenant for life under the will of H. By a vesting deed dated Apr. 16, 1926, the lands were declared to be vested in J. in fee upon the trusts operating from time to time under the will of H. or otherwise. J. died Apr. 27, 1928. General probate of his will including the settled land was granted to his exors. in the first place. Later the grant was amended limiting it " save & except the settled land vested in testator settled previously to his death & remaining settled notwithstanding his death." J. having died without issue appct. T. then became tenant for life in possession under the settlement created by the will of C. as well as the trustee of that settlement. On appeal from the registrar a grant of probate of the will of J. limited to the settled land was directed to issue to the appct. as special exor. of J.—In the Estate of TAYLOR, [1929] P. 260 ; 98 L. A farmer died intestate leaving four dependent infant children. The administrator of his estate sold certain chattels which were during the lifetime of the deceased "exemptions" under Executions Act, s. 29. On an application by the administrator for directions as to the disposition of the moneys realised from the sale, the creditors of the deceased, none of whom had recovered judgment, contended that the right of exemption terminated on the deceased's death; that all the assets of the deceased, including the exemptions, were liable for his debts; & that even if the chattels continued to be exempt, the proceeds of their sale was not exempt:—Held: the administrator, who had also been appointed guardian, held the money received from the sale of the exemptions for the benefit of the children.—Re MCKENZIE ESTATE (Man.), [1930] 1 D. 4877a. Capitalisation of reserve fund.]—A testator bequeathed to his son & grandson on the death of his wife the shares belonging to him at his death in a certain co. Between the death of testator & the subsequent death of his wife each of the 460 shares of the value of £35 each which belonged to him at the date of his death became, as the result of the capitalisation of a portion of the reserve fund of the co., consolidated with a new share of the value of £15 into a share of the value of £50. Testator's estate, as the result of the capitalisation, also became entitled, in consequence of his holding of 460 ordinary shares, to 920 preferred ordinary shares of £10 each:—Held: (1) following Smell v. Dee (1707), 2 Salk. 415, the gifts were contingent, & (2) the original 460 shares together with the accretions became, on the death of testator's wife the property of the specific legatees.—Re BUXTON, BUXTON v. BUXTON, [1930] 1 Ch. 648; 99 L. 4895a. —— —— —— ——.]—Testatrix gave legacies of £100 to each of her exors. & trustees & then bequeathed all her plate, jewellery, ornaments, china, & other household effects to two specific legatees absolutely. The whole of her residuary property of every kind she devised, bequeathed & appointed to her trustees upon trust to sell & out of the proceeds, first, to pay her funeral & testamentary expenses, debts, & the legacy duty; secondly, to appropriate & set apart two sums of £4,000 & £2,000 to be held upon certain trusts for life & then over; & thirdly, to pay a number of pecuniary legacies, including one of £600. Testatrix declared that should her residuary personal estate be insufficient to pay all the legacies then the legacy of £600 should be reduced to £500; & every legacy & annuity was bequeathed free of legacy duty. There was a deficiency in the estate; —Held: (1) there were sufficient indications in the will that the testatrix intended the distribution of her estate to be in accordance with the priorities mentioned, & the settled legacies must be paid in full before all the other pecuniary legacies; (2) the legacy of £600 must be reduced to £500 & this reduced legacy, plus the duty, must abate pro rata with the other postponed legacies, including those to the exors.; (3) the costs of packing & delivering specific legacies must be borne by the specific legatees.—Re LEACH, MILNE v. DAUBENY, [1923] 1 Ch. 161; 92 L. From that date the trustees accumulated funds until 1924, when they brought an action of multiplepoinding & exoneration for distribution of the estate:—Held: (1) while as a general rule interest was allowed upon legacies from the death of testator or from the prescribed date of payment, there was no absolute rule compelling the ct. in all cases to allow such interest, the general rule being displaced if circumstances showed it to be inapplicable; (2) the general legatees were not entitled to interest on their legacies from 1890 to 1919, in respect that, owing to the insolvency of the estate during that period, there was no asset realisable to meet the legacies nor any interest-bearing subject; (3) there was no absolute rule to the effect that the rate of legal interest should be 5 per cent., the rate of interest being in every case for the discretion of the ct. in the particular circumstances.—WADDELL'S TRUSTEES v. CRAWFORD, [1926] S. If payment was delayed in order thereby to benefit a residuary legatee, then, in the absence of a direction to the contrary, no interest upon such postponed legacies would be payable before the expiration of the prescribed period. But where the postponement was intended primarily to enable the exors. to collect & realise the assets, the postponed legacies would carry interest from such a time after the end of the "exors.' year" as the exors. had in hand realised assets which could rightfully be applied to the payment of such legacies.—MORPETH v. WILLIAMSON, [1926] N. 5594a. Direction in will for payment of "money secured on mortgage" out of residue—Balance of unpaid purchase-money.]—Testator, who at the date of his will in 1912 was the owner of several freehold properties, one of which was subject to a mtge. & of leasehold & other personal estate, gave & bequeathed all the freehold & leasehold properties of which he might die possessed upon trusts in favour of certain of his grandchildren & great-grandchildren, & the residue of his estate upon trust for sale & conversion; he then directed that his trustees should out of the money thereby produced pay (inter alia) his debts & legacies, & should out of the residue of such money pay & discharge "any sum of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold properties," & should stand possessed of the residue of such money in trust to divide same as therein mentioned. After the date of his will testator paid off the mtge. & took a reconveyance of the mortgaged property. Shortly before his death, in June & Oct. 1917, testator contracted to purchase certain freehold properties in respect of which he paid deposits, leaving balances of the purchase-money owing to the respective vendors. On Dec. 23, 1917, testator made a final codicil, by which, after revoking the appointment of one of his exors. & bequeathing a legacy, he confirmed his will in all other respects. Testator died on Dec. 26, 1917, without having completed the purchases or paid the balances of the purchase-money, & shortly after his death his exors. completed the purchases & paid the balances of the purchase-money; whereupon the question arose whether, as between the persons claim-

5513 i. Whether mixed fund primarily liable—Necessity for direction in will for payment out of mixed fund.]—Since the Wills Act a residuary devise must for the purposes of administration be regarded as a specific devise, & in the order of assets for the payment of debts ranks with specific devises & specific bequests. A residuary devise does not lose its right to contribution from specifically bequeathed personalty for the payment of debts so far as the general personal estate is insufficient, merely by reason of the facts that it is given together with the general personal estate on trust for conversion & the proceeds of conversion are made a mixed fund for the purposes of disposition, & that the whole estate is subject to a general constructive charge for the payment of debts. To entitle specifically bequeathed personalty to be exonerated from such liability by the residuary realty further evidence of testator's intention to that effect is necessary; such as a direction that the debts are to be paid out of the mixed fund, or that the proceeds of conversion are to be regarded as personal estate.—Re FORSYTH, WYATT v. FORSYTH (1929), 29 S. ing under testator's will, those balances ought to be borne by the freehold properties of testator in respect of which same were payable, or ought to be satisfied out of his residuary estate:—Held: (1) inasmuch as a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money differs essentially from a mtge., even in the modern & wider sense of that term, upon the true construction of the will in the absence of any context enlarging the meaning of the term "mtge.," the balances of the unpaid purchase-money owing at testator's death were not "sums of money secured on mtge.," & no contrary intention was signified by the direction in the will to pay & discharge such sums out of testator's residuary estate, so as to exclude the operation of 1854 Act, which by virtue of 1867 Act, s. 2, extends to a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money; with the result that the balances in question ought to be borne by & satisfied out of the freehold properties in respect of which same were payable, & the devisees thereof were not entitled to have those balances discharged out of testator's residuary estate; (2) the confirmation of the will by the last codicil thereto, although executed after the mtge. on testator's freehold property had been paid off & after the vendor's lien had arisen, had not the effect of extending the meaning of the words "any sums of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold & leasehold properties," so as to include the balances of unpaid purchase-money in question.—Re BEIRNSTEIN, BARNETT v. BEIRNSTEIN, [1925] Ch. 12; 94 L. 5654a. —— —— To revert to residue on death of legatee.]—By his will, testator bequeathed a legacy of £16,000 to trustees for his daughter A. during her life & after her death directed that the legacy should revert to & be added to his general residuary personal estate & go as the same was bequeathed by his will. Testator then gave his general residuary personal estate to B. Testator devised his estates in certain places to other trustees as a fund for the discharge of his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses & his pecuniary legacies in aid of his personal estate, with power to his trustees, if they thought it expedient or necessary either before or after his residuary personal estate should be exhausted to raise money for those purposes by sale or mortgage & subject thereto upon trust for B., in fee. The personal estate of testator was insufficient for the payment of his debts & legacies, & B. supplied such deficiency, including the annual payments to A. in respect of her legacy. A. survived both testator & B. On the death of B., the question arose whether, as testator's personalty was insufficient for the payments before mentioned, testator intended that the corpus of the legacy should be raised out of the real estate devised to B. for the benefit of B., who was testator's residuary legatee:—Held: the words "revert to & be added to my general residuary estate" in the will, showed that the testator meant the legacy to be restored to the funds from which it was taken; & it was not to be taken from the real estate merely for the purpose of augmenting the personal estate.—Re SOMERSET (DUKE), THYNNE v. ST. competition with testator's business. Deft. having, since the issue of the writ in the action, assigned the lease of the new premises to B. & the goodwill of the business also having been assigned to her, it became no longer necessary to grant any of the relief claimed & necessary to determine only whether deft. was entitled at the date of the issue of the writ to the right which he then claimed, for the purpose of deciding how the costs of the action ought to be borne:—Held: (1) in face of the claim made by deft. to the benefit of the lease, pltfs. were justified in bringing the action; (2) having regard to the special nature of the business of a yacht broker which necessarily involved competition between every individual broker with all the others, it would have been a breach by deft. of his fiduciary duty towards the beneficiaries under the will, if he had at the date of the issue of the writ set up on his own account an independent business of a yacht broker in competition with pltfs., carrying on their testator's business; with the result that deft. must pay all the costs of the action.—Re THOMSON, THOMSON v. ALLEN, [1930] 1 Ch. 203; 99 L. 6014a. —— ——.]—Testator devised & bequeathed to trustees estate A. & also all & singular his freehold & leasehold estates & effects in H. & W. together with the steam engines & machinery, money in hand, etc., together with all & singular other his real & personal estates & effects, upon trust, that his trustees, etc., should carry on his cotton manufactory in the best & most proper manner they possibly could & be empowered them to retain as much ready money, as a capital in the business, as by them might be considered necessary, with full power to carry on the same, & to keep the whole in good repair, & to renew the machinery: & directed that at the end of every twelve months next after his decease, provided his daughters L. & E. were living, the profits, if any, & the surplus income from his H. & W. estates, after paying certain annuities, after retaining a sufficient capital to carry on the manufactory, should be equally divided between his two daughters, share & share alike; but if his trustees were not inclined to carry on the cotton manufactory, he empowered them to let the same, when he directed the reserved capital to be immediately divided between his two daughters L. & E. share & share alike: & he further directed that the surplus rents of his H. & W. estates, after paying the annuities, were to be equally divided every twelve months after his decease between such two daughters, share & share alike. He directed his trustees to allow his daughter E. to receive all the rents, etc., of his estate A. for her life & declared that at her death her issue were to be entitled to such estates, but if she left no issue then such estates were to go to his daughter L. & if she should then be dead, having left issue, such issue were to take; he then gave to L. an annuity of £600 during her life, & charged the same on all his real & personal estates in H. & W. & bequeathed the same at her death to her issue equally: &, if she should die without leaving lawful issue, his daughter E. if she should be living, was to take the annuity of £600 & the whole of the surplus rents, etc., of his H. & W. estates, both real & personal: & if neither of his daughters left issue, the whole of his estates, both real & personal, were to go to R. H. for life, with remainder to his issue, remainder to his heir at law. L. & E. survived testator: E. & L. both died without issue:—Held: (1) the representatives of L. & E. were absolutely entitled, in equal shares, to all such personal estate as was situate in H. & W. & which was not retained by the trustees as capital for carrying on the manufactory; (2) on the death of the survivor of E. & L. without leaving issue, the whole of testator's personal estate described in his will as situate in H. & W. consisting of his leasehold estate & the manufactory, & the capital retained by the trustees for carrying on the business, were subject to the trusts declared in favour of R. H.; (3) R. H. was entitled for his life to the whole of the income of the freehold estates at A., H. & W. & to the income of the capital retained & employed by the trustees in carrying on the business.—HORSEFIELD v. ASHTON (1856), 26 L. He also directed that all his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & the "costs, charges & expenses of carrying into effect the trusts of his said will," should be paid out of the capital of said business:—Held: (1) the widow was entitled for life or until her second marriage, to the whole of the profits made by such business after testator's death; the cash at the banker's & the trade debts being assets or part of the capital of such business; (2) the debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & the costs of suit, etc., should be borne out of the capital of such business; testator having exonerated his residuary estate from any such or similar charges.—DIXON v. DUTFIELD (1862), 5 L. 6281a. ——.]—Testator, who died on May 17, 1916, by his will appointed appcts. exors. & trustees, & bequeathed a number of absolute & settled pecuniary legacies. Testator gave all his estate whatsoever unto appcts. upon trust for sale & conversion at such time & manner as they should think fit, with power & discretion to postpone sale & conversion & charged the moneys to arise with the legacies bequeathed by his will. Testator's will contained a residuary bequest, investment clause in wide terms, & a power to appcts. to appropriate any part of the estate in its actual condition in satisfaction of any legacy. The principal asset of testator's estate was a sum of nearly a quarter of a million pounds Irish Three per cent. Guaranteed Stock, & the estate was insufficient for payment in full of all the legacies. The Irish stock could not be sold even at a reduced market value of £151,411 & in the interests of the estate it was inexpedient to realise it at once. Appcts. having caused to be prepared a scheme of apportionment, appropriation & abatement among & between the legacies, applied by an originating summons issued on June 27, 1917, to the ct. for its sanction :—Held : appcts. could exercise the discretionary power of appropriation notwithstanding the fact that some of the legacies were settled by testator's will.—Re DANIELS, LONDON CITY & MIDLAND EXECUTOR TRUSTEE CO., LTD. v. DANIELS (1918), 87 L. 6915a. —— —— Liability of executor for "wilful default"—What amounts to.]—Pltfs. were the two sons of testatrix, entitled in equal shares to her estate undisposed of by her will, including £214 14*s.* 5*d.* in the Post Office Savings Bank & £62 4*s.* in Savings Certificates. Deft., as sole exor. of testatrix, employed to wind up her estate a solr. who, unknown to him, had at one time been suspended from practice, & who obtained from the first pltf. the Post Office Savings Bank deposit book & the Savings Certificates. Deft. heard for the first time of the solr.'s suspension three months later, when the first pltf. told him of it. Under deft.'s written authority, a warrant valued at £62 4*s.* had been issued in favour of the solr.'s firm, & the first pltf. wrote to deft. objecting to his having taken that course. Later, the first pltf. asked deft. to employ another solr., but deft. did not do so, as the solr. was then promising to settle the matter. Ultimately the solr. absconded, & the sums

The partition was built, pltf. contributed the $1,000 & the lessees went into possession. H. died in Jan. 1923, & his wife, deft. A. & deft. co., the executors named in the will, obtained probate thereof. In Oct. 1923, M. made an assignment in bkpcy. & deft. co. was appointed custodian of the bkpt. estate. Pltf.'s claim in this action was to recover a large sum made up of rent, taxes, cost of repairs & interest. He alleged that defts. entered into, & from Jan. 1923 continued in possession & receipt of the rents & profits & claimed payment from them personally:—Held: deft. co. entered upon the premises not merely in its representative capacity as exor., but personally as assignee of the term, & as such was personally chargeable with the amount of rents & profits which it received, & with such further sums as it might have received if it had used due diligence, but not exceeding in the aggregate the full amount of the actual rental value of the premises.—RYCKMAN v. TRUSTS & GUAR. In this action, pltfs., two of the children, alleged that defts., exors., had committed a breach of trust by selling the lands at a gross undervalue. 76a 1. —— —— ——.]—Defts. were the occupiers of a factory. A workman in their employment, following his daily duties, climbed up a ladder to the shafting in the dye-house to fix a belt on a pulley, & was caught in the shafting, whirled round & killed. No one actually saw the occurrence, but, as portions of deceased's clothing were on the shaft, they probably got caught in it. An information against defts. charged that, contrary to Factory & Workshop Act, 1901, s. 10 (1) (c), a part of the mill gearing, namely, a line of shafting, was neither securely fenced nor in such a position nor of such construction as to be equally as safe to every person employed or working in the factory as if it had been securely fenced. The justices dismissed the information, but stated a case for the opinion of the K. B. D. :—Held :

driving belt slipped off the pulley & an employee of resps. attempted to put it back while the shaft was running & sustained injuries. The shaft & pulley were about thirteen feet from the floor & they were not fenced or guarded. In attempting to put on the belt the workman stood on a beam about seven feet from the floor, & was acting contrary to resps.' instructions. Resps. were summoned for not having the shaft fenced, but the justices, being of opinion that any fence would have been useless owing to the shaft being thirteen feet above the ground, dismissed the case:—Held: the finding of the justices was not equivalent to a finding that the shaft was "in such position or of such construction as to be equally safe to every person employed or working in the factory as it would be if it were securely fenced," which was the requirement of 1901 Act, s. 10 (1) (c), & there would have been no evidence to support the latter finding.—ATKINSON v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. 98a. Duty to keep in repair & free from obstruction —Part of factory in occupation of lessee.]—The supply of mechanical power referred to in Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 149 (1), is not limited to the case of supply by the owner of the building, & there is no reason to read into the sub-sect. after the word "supplied" the words "by the owner."

X. owned a building which was a factory where more than forty persons were employed, & carried on business as a shirt manufacturer in the basement & on the ground & first floors. The second floor was unoccupied. The third & fourth floors were let to Y., who carried on business there as a blouse manufacturer, employing more than forty persons. The factory of X. & that of Y. were respectively worked by separate & distinct electric motors, driven by electricity generated & supplied by the electricity undertaking of a municipal corpn. & each factory had a separate meter. Without this supply of electricity the electric motors could not be driven:—Held: mechanical power, namely, electrical current, was supplied to different parts of the same building within sect. 149 (1). Accordingly, as the building was a tenement factory, etc., the owner, was responsible under sect. 14 (6), (7) of the Act that the means of escape in case of fire provided throughout the factory, including the two floors occupied by Y., should be maintained in good condition & free from obstruction.—MUMBY v. VOLP, [1930] 1 K. may make regulations in respect of dangerous machinery. By sect. 105 the provisions of the Acts with respect (inter alia) to fines in respect of death or injury are applicable as if any premises on which machinery worked by steam, water, or other mechanical power is temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building or any structural work in connection with a building were included in the word "factory," & as if the person who, by himself, his agents or workmen, temporarily uses any such machinery for the before-mentioned purpose were the occupier of a factory. The Secretary of State, in pursuance of s. 79, made certain regulations casting upon employers of workmen the duty of fencing floor-openings with a suitable guard rail & toe board or other efficient means:—Held: (1) the words "temporarily used" are not confined to the actual moment when the machinery is in use, but extend to the whole period during which the machinery is available for use in the constructional work, & therefore that persons who had brought such machinery upon the premises were liable to conviction as the occupiers of a factory in respect of the death of a workman who fell through an unfenced shaft at a time when the mechanical hoist for which the shaft was made was not in use; (2) the words "employers of workmen" imposed upon sub-contractors, engaged in laying floors in a building in course of erection, liability in respect of the death of one of their workmen who fell through an unguarded well hole which the sub-contractors had left for a staircase in the construction of which the sub-contractors were not concerned.—BARNETT v. CAXTON FLOORS, LTD., BUTLER v. KLEINE PATENT FIRE RESISTING FLOORING SYNDICATE, LTD. 264c. ——.]—Pltf. was a weaver in defts.' employment & his wages were calculated on the amount & kind of cloth woven in each week in accordance with a uniform list of prices agreed between the employer's & workmen's unions. According to the list of prices, pltf. became entitled for the week ending Aug. 1, 1928, after agreed deduction to a sum of £2 5*s.* 0½*d.*, but defts. only paid him £2 4*s.* 0½*d.*, claiming the right to deduct 1*s.* in respect of three yards of cloth woven with a fault rendering them unmerchantable. The evidence showed that it had been the practice of the mill for many years to make deductions for work not done with reasonable care & skill, the deductions not exceeding in amount the loss sustained by the employers & often not being exacted. A similar usage existed in the bulk of the mills carrying on the Lancashire weaving trade, though some of the mill owners were trying to do without deductions :—Held : this practice was not rendered illegal by the Truck Act, 1831 (c. 37), s. 3, as it did not involve a deduction for bad work from ascertained wages, but a deduction for bad work made in calculating the wages.—SAGAR v. RIDEHALGH (H.) & SON, LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 310 ; 100 L. There was no evidence of a statutory defence provided by sect. 83 of Early Closing Act that the employer had used due diligence to enforce the provisions of the Act or that the offence had been committed without the employer's knowledge, consent or connivance. Pltfs., the county council, owned land adjoining one of the approaches & built a school on it. 55a. Extent of right—Whether exclusive right of ferry—Construction of Act.]—By a private Act pltfs. were empowered to make & maintain a motor road from South Haven Point in the parish of Studland in the county of Dorset to a public road leading from Studland to Swanage. By sect. 56 of the Act they were empowered to establish, maintain, work & use a ferry service for passengers, animals vehicles & goods between the Sandbanks & South Haven Point within Poole Harbour. By sect. 62, passed for the protection of the Poole Harbour Comrs., pltfs. were required to establish or acquire & thereafter continuously work the ferry by means of a vessel propelled by steam on a chain cable system, & by sects. 62, 97, passed for the benefit of certain landowners, they were required to provide from seven o'clock in the forenoon when summer time should be in force & from eight o'clock in the forenoon at all other times of the year until one hour after sunset on every day a minimum hourly service of vessels from each shore. The two sects. contained provisions enabling Poole Harbour Comrs. & the landowners respectively to exercise certain powers & rights in case pltfs. should cease working the ferry or fail to work it continuously & efficiently. They established a ferry service in accordance with these provisions :—Held: the Act did not confer on pltfs. an exclusive right of ferry, & that they were not entitled to an injunction restraining defts., who for many years before the Act had in fact carried passengers between the Sandbanks & South Haven Point without claiming any franchise entitling them to do so, from carrying passengers bicycles & goods across the mouth of Poole Harbour within or near the limits of pltfs.' said ferry.—BOURNEMOUTH-SWANAGE MOTOR ROAD & FERRY CO. v. HARVEY & SONS, [1930] A. The river " F." is a river in which there are salmon. For a certain distance before & at the point where the tail race re-enters this river it is bounded on both sides by lands that belong to an adjoining owner, & not to the deft., the owner of the mill. There was no grating steam fishing boat, brought an action in the county ct. against deft., who was a member of the crew of the boat, claiming a sum as money lent by them to deft. Deft. alleged in defence that the sum claimed had been paid to him as wages; &, further, that the county ct. had no jurisdiction, the question between the parties being a dispute concerning wages within Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 387, which could only be dealt with by a superintendent thereunder. At the trial it was found as a fact that the sum claimed had been lent to deft., & that there was no real dispute concerning wages: —Held: (1) the county ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the action notwithstanding the section, inasmuch as that ct. had all along had jurisdiction to entertain an action for money lent & the section did not either expressly or by implication exclude that jurisdiction; (2) the jurisdiction of the superintendent under the sect. did not arise until a party to the dispute called him to decide it, & here no party had called upon him to do so.—STURLEY v. POWELL, [1930] 1 K. Deft. had the use of the tail race from the moment it left his own lands until it reached the river: Held: deft. was under a statutory obligation by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 106, s. 70, to erect the grating even though it entailed an interference with the banks of the adjoining owner.—R. Moreover under this Statute, rules & regulations might be made by Order in Council, & the same were made providing that such licence could be granted only to "Canadian built" vessels, & that after Apr. 1932, none but such would be eligible for licence, & further providing that after Apr. 1, 1930, a licence fee of one cent a pound on the fish caught should be payable. This fee in the case of deft. would amount to between $130,000 to $150,000 a year:—Held: as the regulations ignore the statutory limitation to British ships registered in Canada or owned by a Canadian, etc., & fix as the condition upon which the licence would issue that such ships be Canadian built, & such condition being obviously beyond the scope of the Act, & the delegated powers, such regulations are ultra vires, unenforceable, null & void.—R. v. NATIONAL FISH CO., LTD., [1931] Ex. In each case the questions whether the master fairly & honestly on reasonable ground believed it necessary to take shelter, & whether he exercised reasonable skill, competence & courage in the circumstances, are questions of fact for the tribunal whose duty it is to find the facts.

A want of bona fides would abrogate any right or privilege to shelter given by the statute. 439a. Protection of employer under Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63)—When applicable.]—(1) Held : the language of Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), s. 12 (2), has no relation & does not apply to a case where a defect of deft.'s machinery or a default of an employee under deft.'s control is the cause of the deficiency. This sub-sect. deals with the case where the deficiency is due to a bonâ fide mistake or accident or other causes beyond deft.'s control, that is to say, not with negligence or other conduct of deft.'s servants or other persons under his control. In such a case deft. may avail himself of the provisions of sect. 12 (5) if he satisfies the provisions of that sub-sect., by having any other person, including an employee, whom he charges as the actual offender, brought before the ct.

(2) On the question whether proceedings against defts. for contravening this sub-sect. were " proceedings under this Act in respect of an alleged deficiency of weight " within sect. 12 (2), whilst LORD HEWART, C.J., did not express a decided opinion, one way or the other, AVORY, J., expressed the view that proceedings under sect. 6 (2) of the Act were in respect of an alleged deficiency of weight, & TALBOT, J., expressed an opinion to the contrary.

(3) On proceedings against bakers under sect. 6 (2) of the Act defts. duly laid an information against one of their employees under sect. 12 (5) ; having him brought before the ct. as the actual offender & tendering evidence in order to prove that they had used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act, & that their employee had committed the offence without their consent, connivance, or wilful default. At petty sessions, the information against the employee was dismissed, but defts. were convicted. Defts. appealed to Quarter Sessions :—Held : the Ct. of Quarter Sessions had no power to exempt defts. from any penalty under sect. 12 (5) on the ground (per LORD HEWART, C.J., & TALBOT, J.) that having regard to the fact that the employee had been acquitted at petty sessions, it was not open to defts. to contend at Quarter Sessions that the employee was wrongly acquitted, & on the ground (per AVORY, J.) that in any case on the facts the employee charged was not the actual offender within the sub-sect.—WALKLING, LTD. v. ROBINSON (1930), 99 L. 439b. —— —— Exercise of due diligence by employer—Question of fact.]—(1) Where an employer who is charged with an offence against the Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), brings another person before the ct. under sect. 12 (5), as being the actual offender, the question whether the employer has used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act is one of fact & not of law. (2) The result of compliance with sect. 12 (5) is that both the employer & the other person are convicted, but that the latter alone is liable to any penalty. (3) Qu. : whether in a case where the justices have convicted the employer & have refused to convict the actual offender, the employer may not appeal to quarter sessions. Walkling, Ltd. v. Robinson, No. 439a, is no authority to the contrary, since in that case the employee was found as a fact not to be the actual offender, & an appeal would have involved the allegation that he was wrongly acquitted. —HAMMETT (R. 476b. —— Change of tenancy—Removal of predecessor from register—Whether new tenant "person aggrieved."]—On May 1, 1930, applt. succeeded a predecessor as annual tenant of premises used as a dairy. On May 12, 1930, resps., who were the local authority, having in the meantime given a similar notice to his predecessor, gave to applt. a notice purporting to be given under Milk & Dairies (Amendment) Act, 1922 (c. 54), s. 2 (1), calling upon him to show cause why they should not remove his predecessor from the register of purveyors of milk in respect of the premises on the ground that they were satisfied that by default of the latter the premises were not in a fit condition for the purposes of a dairy. On May 13, 1930, resps., after hearing applt., decided to remove his predecessor from the register on that ground, & thereupon gave applt. notice that they had so decided. An appeal by applt. under the above sub-sect. against the decision of resps. was dismissed by the magistrate on the ground that applt. was not a "person aggrieved" by the decision within the sub-sect. sf. Bond fide sale in course of trade—In consideration of debt due to buyer & other creditors.]—The sale of wheat in question herein, the consideration for which was an indebtedness of the seller to the buyer & the payment by the buyer of certain other creditors of the seller, held to be protected as against attack under Fraudulent Preferences Act, s. 4, by sect. 7 thereof, which provides that the prior provisions of the Act shall not apply to a bond fide sale made in the ordinary course of trade or calling to innocent purchasers or parties. The proceeds of the wheat amounted to more than the amount of the consideration expressed in the bill of sale, but this could not be foreseen at the time of the transaction, & it was held that the excess was not large enough to be regarded as an element of fraud.—DESJARDINE v. CALLISON, [1928] 3 D. 204 ii. —— Partition by father on remarriage—Allegation by settlor that conveyance in fraud of creditors—Onus of proof.]—In 1904 a Burman executed on his remarriage a deed of partition by which he purported to convey to his daughter, the only child of his first marriage & then eight years of age, immovable property as her one-quarter share of the joint property of that marriage, & he appointed his own mother to take care of it. He remained in possession, but contributed to the support of his daughter, who resided with her maternal grandmother. At the time of the conveyance the father was considerably indebted, & his creditors, finding that they could not attach the property, settled with him upon easy terms. In 1915 the father promised his daughter, & her maternal uncle that the property would be restored to her. In 1925 the daughter sued for possession. The father pleaded that the conveyance was in fraud of his creditors, & that the suit was barred by limitation :—Held : upon the whole facts the father had failed to discharge the burden, which was heavily upon him of proving that the conveyance was in fraud of his creditors, & not a genuine conveyance of his daughter's share, possibly liberally calculated; & consequently his possession was not adverse to his daughter, but on her behalf.—MA NGWE NAING v. MAUNG THA MAUNG (1928), I. 175b. —— Proviso in policy limiting sum assured.] —In 1920 H. took out a policy of industrial insurance on the life of his daughter, then aged three months, at a premium of twopence per week, & in 1925 he effected a similar policy on the life of his son, then aged one month, in each case assuring the amounts respectively set out in a Table contained in the policy. The Table in the policy of 1920 was made out on the basis of a premium of one penny per week & insured sums payable on the death of the life assured varying in amount according to age & the time the policy had been in force; it also contained the following statement: "Twopence per week will assure double the above sums provided that in any case where the amount secured by the larger premium would exceed the limits of assurance prescribed by Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (c. 25), viz., £6 for children under five years of age, & £10 for children under ten years of age, the sum assured shall be limited to £6 or £10 as the case may require." In the policy of 1925 was a statement that the amount payable under it was subject to the limitations of Friendly Societies Act, 1924 (c. 11):—Held: in view of the statements in the two policies limiting the amount insured in each case to the statutory maximum, neither policy contravened the provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts, 1896 & 1924, & was valid.

In 1925 C. signed a proposal for a whole life assurance on the life of her son, then aged one year next birthday, at a weekly premium of one penny for a sum to be assured increasing as per scale up to £15. On the same day she signed a proposal for an endowment assurance on the same life at a weekly premium of threepence for a "sum to be assured £7 14*s.* payable on attainment of age fifteen or in the event of previous death as per scale." Two policies were issued on the basis of these proposals. On the whole-life policy there was this memorandum: "This life is also assured under [the endowment] policy. Accordingly, the full sum assured printed in the schedule will not come into operation until the attainment of the age of ten. The combined amount payable in the event of earlier death shall not exceed £6 on death under age three, £10 under age six, & £15 under age ten":—Held: as the above quoted memorandum cut down the sums payable under the combined policies to the statutory limit, the policies did not contravene the Friendly Societies Act, 1924 (c. 11), & were valid.—Re HIRST & LIVERPOOL VICTORIA FRIENDLY SOCIETY, Re CLARK & LONDON & MANCHESTER ASSURANCE CO., [1930] 2 K. On each roller was printed a number of devices, such as cherries, roses, etc. If certain combinations of these devices stopped opposite a pointer on the face of the machine, the player won a certain number of discs. With these he could purchase on the premises certain goods. The winning combinations & the odds for each were printed on the front of the machine in view of the player. 284a. House used for game where chances not alike favourable to all players.]—The committee of management of a members' club installed in the club certain machines for the use of members only & for the purpose of giving additional pleasure to the members. The machines were operated by means of pennies inserted in a slot. The player, having first inserted a penny, depressed a handle, causing three cylinders to revolve on which were depicted bells, bars & fruits. On the cylinders ceasing to revolve the player either lost his penny or received winnings up to twenty pennies, according to the combination of fruits &/or bells &/or bars opposite a pointer. The machine automatically filled a jack pot from its winnings, & the pennies in the jack pot were returned to the player who obtained the combination of three bars. The machines were similar in type to other machines for the user of which persons had been convicted under the Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), where the persons had used the machines in shops or places of public entertainment or in proprietary clubs. Four members of the committee of management of the club in question were charged under Gaming Houses Act 1854 (c. 38), s. 4, for being persons having the care & management of certain premises, to wit, the club, which were then being used for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein. The contention of the members of the committee of management was that the position of a members' club was analogous to that of a private house, & that gaming upon the machines in a members' club was therefore not unlawful gaming :—Held : in order that a house should be a common gaming house within s. 2 of the Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 2, it was not necessary that some person should be keeping the house for his gain, lucre or living; it was sufficient that it was a house kept or used for playing at any game where the chances of the game being played therein are not alike favourable to all the players; the chances of the game played on the machines in this club were not alike favourable to all the players, & that the club was a members' club did not prevent the club premises being kept or used for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein, & therefore the members of the committee of management of the club could be convicted of the offence charged under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), s. 4.—DANIELS v. PINKS, [1931] 1 K. his disc. The machine was fitted with a control, by which the player could stop the rollers, one at a time, & so endeavour to obtain a winning combination. There were 15 machines on the premises. Deft. was prosecuted under Gaming Houses Act, 1854, s. 4, that he, being the occupier of the premises, did use them for the purpose of unlawful gaming. The justice was satisfied on the evidence that the majority of the persons who used the machine would be players of less than average skill, &, therefore, held that the game was one in which the chances were not favourable alike to all players, including the owner of the machine, & accordingly convicted the deft. :—Held : the conviction was right.—GORDON v. DUNLEVY, [1928] I. of Lotteries Act, 1823, it was established that the promoters had formed & put into execution a scheme for the sale of bonds, each of which entitled the holder on certain conditions to £150. To qualify for this sum a participant had first to obtain a bond at the cost of 1*s.* either from the promoters or from a friend. This was the parent of a family of bonds which was brought into existence by a process of subsales. The holder of the parent bond had to buy from the promoters four bonds for 3*s.* & to sell them to four friends for 1*s.* each. These four bonds were the first generation, & each of the four holders of them had to repeat the same process, thus bringing the second generation of sixteen bonds into existence. The process had to be repeated until the sixth generation of 4096 bonds had come into existence, making, for the complete series, 5461 bonds. On the occurrence of this event the holder of the parent bond became entitled to £150. Not only was each individual bond a member of a family of bonds, but it could itself become the parent of a new family, & the holder of it was entitled to £150 as soon as its sixth generation was completed:—Held: the scheme was a lottery, in respect that the occurrence of the event upon which payment fell to be made could neither be approximately predicted nor materially influenced by the exercise of any knowledge, experience, art, or skill on the part of the holder of the parent bond.—BARNES v. STRATHERN, [1929] S. d i. —— —— Receipt of money with coupons—Whether offence under Street Betting Act.]—In a complaint under Street Betting Act, 1906, it was proved that accused received in the street from various persons a large number of slips accompanied by sums of money. The slips were odd pieces of paper, upon each of which were written the names of at least one group of eight football teams, to which was added a name, number or other symbol, for identifying the sender of the slip. Accused did not submit lists of football teams for the purpose of selection, the names of such teams being selected by the senders of the slips from lists of teams advertised or reported in the public press to play on the Saturday following the date on which the slips were received by accused. The teams selected were those which the senders of the slips predicted would be winning teams on that Saturday. Along with each slip was sent 1*s.*, the understanding being that, after the results of the matches were published, accused would examine the forecasts made, & thereafter would deduct from the money received a sum in name of commission, & hand over the balance to the person sending in the correct forecast if only one forecast was correct, or, if more than one forecast was correct, an equal share of such balance to each of the senders of correct forecasts. If no correct selection was sent in, there was no distribution, & the whole contributions were carried forward to the next week ; which procedure was repeated until a correct forecast was made, or until the end of the football season arrived, when if there had been no correct selection received, the money in hand, less a commission to the accused, was distributed among those who had sent it :—Held : accused was engaged in betting transactions & was guilty of an offence under Street Betting Act, 1906.—YEUDALL v. MCQUILKIE, [1928] S. but each entrance form had to be accompanied by part of a bag or wrapper from one of the named articles:—Held: since the competitors were not asked to judge the real merits of the articles but to guess how other people would guess at their popularity, there was material on which a magistrate was justified in finding that the result depended entirely on chance & in convicting the advertising manager of the promoters of an offence under Lotteries Act, 1823 (c. 60), s. 41. —HOBBS v. WARD (1929), 93 J. 504b. —— Determination of order of popularity of theatrical rôles.]—Resps. sent to members of the theatrical profession & to persons whose names appeared in "Who's Who" books of 10*s.* tickets in a "Grand National Mutual Subscription Fund in aid of the Ellen Terry Memorial Museum" with a request to sell the tickets among their friends & return the counterfoils & money by a certain date. An accompanying circular explained that 25 per cent. of the money subscribed would be devoted to the museum & that the remaining 75 per cent. would be distributed "in such manner as the organisers in their absolute discretion shall think fit," but that £20,000 would be distributed in prizes. It was apparently originally contemplated that the money should be used for a sweepstake on the Grand National horse race, but owing to a communication from the police there was substituted a scheme whereby subscribers were invited to place in order of popularity, as shown by the general votes of the competitors, ten rôles played by the late Dame Ellen Terry:—Held: the scheme was a lottery. The fact that the original books of tickets were sent only to members of the theatrical profession & persons in "Who's Who" did not so limit the class of competitors as to render it possible by any element of skill to arrive at a reasonable forecast of how they would vote; especially as they might be expected to sell many tickets to persons outside those two categories, so that the competition was in effect open to the public.—CHALLIS v. WARRENDER (1930), 144 L. In 1909 the co. entered into an agreement under seal with the council in which it was recited that before the passing of the Act "it was agreed by & between the predecessors of the gas co. & the council that the agreement then in force for public lighting should continue to remain in force & be binding on both parties until the council should determine the same," & that "it has been deemed desirable by the said parties hereto that the terms of the said agreement for the public lighting shall be set out as hereinafter mentioned." By the operative part of the agreement the co. agreed to light all the public lamps within the district "from & after the first day in Sept. in every year up to the following first day of May inclusive" on certain terms ; & provisions were made for increasing the number of lamps. There was no provision as to the period for which the agreement was to run or giving either party a right to determine it. By a supplemental agreement dated June 30, 1921, the times of lighting & the charges were varied, & clause 1 (c) provided that new lanterns supplied by the co. should become the property of the council without payment after fifteen years if the agreements continued for so long, "& if the said agreements be determined before the expiration of such period" the council were to pay for them. 356a. Gift made in contemplation of death from incurable disease—Death from different illness—Gift valid.]—A donatio mortis causâ is not generally conditioned upon the donor dying from the same disorder as that from which he is suffering, & contemplates the probability of death, at the time it is made.

By a mtge. made in 1922 the widow of J., who was tenant for life under his will, mortgaged a farm to W., a brother of J., to secure £1,000 & interest at 5 per cent. The widow died in 1923, having appointed her two daughters, E. & X., exors. of her will. The mtge. contained no personal covenant for payment of the principal, & the mtgee. accepted interest at 3½ per cent., reduced in 1924 to 3 per cent. In 1924 W., who was on very friendly terms with his brother's family, gave the deeds relating to the farm, other than the mtge. deed, to E. & X., to retain in their custody. On Dec. 11, 1927, W., who had since 1922 been suffering from an incurable disease & knew that he could not possibly live long, called upon his nieces, who were aware of his state of health, & gave them an envelope indorsed in his own handwriting : " Deeds relating to X. farm to be given up at death. W.," saying : " I have brought this down for you ; put it away." After he had left the house the envelope was opened, & was found to contain the mtge., which the nieces placed in their safe. On Jan. 23, 1928, W. died of pneumonia following a chill. In an action by his exors. for a declaration that the mtge. was a subsisting security & to enforce it :—Held : there was a valid donatio mortis causâ by W., & a release of the mtge. to the two daughters of J. for the benefit of his estate.—WILKES v. ALLINGTON, [1931] 2 Ch. 104 ; 100 L. 1200a. —— —— —— Hire-purchase agreement.]—Pltfs. were the assignees of the rights of the R. Co. under a hire-purchase agreement dated July 6, 1927, whereby the co., "the owners," agreed to let to one T., "the principal," a motor car on the terms that he should be at liberty to purchase the car at a fixed price, paying as a first payment £22 6*s.* 8*d.*, & thereafter monthly payments of £14 3*s.* 4*d.*, until the whole was paid. The payments by the principal under this agreement were guaranteed by deft. as surety under a document signed by her on July 6, 1927. The principal afterwards fell in arrears in payment of the monthly instalments, & on Feb. 3, 1928, he wrote to the owners offering a cheque for £20 drawn by a friend in part payment. On Feb. 4 the owners wrote accepting this cheque & stipulating that the rest of the arrears should be paid within one month. The cheque was sent to the owners, but the arrears, which amounted to £79, were not paid within one month, & the owners then took back the car, acting upon their powers under the hire-purchase agreement. On Sept. 18, 1928, the owners assigned their rights under that agreement to pltfs., who claimed £122 in all from deft. as surety :—Held : (1) there was a binding contract by the owners to give time to the principal debtor; (2) the liability for payments under the hire-purchase agreement was one & indivisible, & deft. was entirely discharged from her suretyship.—MIDLAND MOTOR SHOWROOMS v. NEWMAN, [1929] 2 K. 1223a. Charge by several persons of properties—Release of deeds deposited by one.]—By a joint & several memorandum of charge twelve persons, including six resps., deposited deeds with applt. as security to relieve applt. from the entire burden of a guarantee given by him to a bank for the overdraft of S. & Co. & they thereby respectively charged the hereditaments to which the deeds related with repayment of all money to become due from S. & Co. Applt., at the request of C. one of the twelve persons, allowed her to take the deeds deposited by her away for the purpose of raising a loan. S. & Co. having gone into liquidation, the bank called upon applt. to make good his guarantee. Thereupon resps. brought an action claiming that they were entitled to have all the deeds deposited by them under the terms of the charge discharged from the debt to which they were made liable to contribute under the charge, on the ground that, by applt. allowing C. to withdraw the deeds deposited by her, their risk had been increased :—Held : (1) there had been an alteration made in the position of those whose properties remained deposited as securities under the charge by reason of applt. allowing the withdrawal by C. of the deeds deposited by her & they not having consented to the alteration of their properties, the deeds of which they had deposited, were discharged from all claims under the charge; their right of marshalling had been affected by the withdrawal of the deeds of one of the parties, & the materiality of the alteration was a question to be decided by them; (2) the same reasoning was applicable, whether what was contributed were securities or personal liability.—SMITH v. WOOD [1929], 1 Ch. 14; 98 L. If there is, in fact, in the possession of the creditor such a counter-security, it is the duty of the creditor, whether its existence is known to the surety or not, to exercise reasonable care in maintaining it for the benefit of the surety, so as to be available, unimpaired by reason of any negligence, on the discharge of the debt. 1908a. —— —— Indemnity against loss on debentures—Sale of debentures by party indemnified.]—Deft. was the chairman of the S. Co., which at the end of 1921 was seeking to issue £15,000 First Lien Debentures to rank pari passu with a previous issue of first lien debentures of the same amount; & deft., having interested pltf. in the matter, sent him a letter of indemnity, dated Feb. 17, 1922, in these terms: "Regarding the issue of £15,000 First Lien Debentures of the S. Co. at the price of £80 per £100 . . . I understand you are subscribing for £3,000 of the same at a cost to you of £2,400. In consideration of your giving me one-fourth of any profit you may receive on such investment, I hereby indemnify you against any loss thereon. The expression 'any profit' only refers to the redemption price of £100 per £80, which, when received, will show a profit of £20 per bond & the bonus out of the proceeds of any royalties on oil sales from the co.'s properties during the currency of the debentures. . . . The interest you will be entitled to receive from the co. is excluded from the consideration of profits." The debentures were redeemable on July 1, 1925, but they were secured by two debenture trust deeds which gave power to extend the due date, & in Apr. 1925, steps were taken which resulted in its extension to July 1, 1930. In May & June, 1925, a correspondence took place between pltf. & deft. in which pltf. announced his intention of selling the debentures, & deft. protested against this, claiming that they must be kept till their due date. On July 16, 1925, pltf. put the debentures up for sale, & in the absence of other bidders sold them to his son for £25. He then commenced proceedings to recover the amount of his loss, but the House of Lords decided that nothing was payable under the indemnity until the due date arrived. On July 18, 1928, the co. went into liquidation & pltf., having repurchased the debentures from his son, brought these proceedings to recover his loss :—Held : in selling the debentures pltf. had committed a breach of an implied term of the contract, & having failed to maintain the position essential to enable deft. to receive the consideration for the indemnity, he had committed a breach of a term going to the root of the contract. Deft. had elected by his pleadings in the previous action to treat the contract as at an end & pltf. could not therefore maintain the present action.—GUY-PELL v. FOSTER, [1930] 2 Ch. 169; 99 L. J. 298a. —— —— —— Paths joining existing highways.]—Evidence of long public user, as of right, of a pathway or roadway for the purpose of passing from one public place to another, is not the less ground for inferring dedication because recreation may have been the sole motive of such user.

H. & W. were neighbouring freeholders, & the sites of their properties originally formed part of the D. estate. The property of H. was originally let on a long lease in 1878 to one G., together with a right of way over a rough road, of the nature of a timber road, leading up from the London Road towards the property & past the property to Box Hill. In 1916 H. acquired the freehold of the property, & took a conveyance of the roadway in 1924. W., without the consent of H., opened a small gate for pedestrians in the boundary fence. In the action H. claimed a declaration that he was the freeholder of the said roadway & an injunction to restrain W. from trespassing thereon. Evidence was given of public user between Box Hill & the London Road for purposes of pleasure :—Held : the evidence of public user led to a presumption that the land had been dedicated, & that the motive of such user was irrelevant.—HUE v. WHITELEY, [1929] 1 Ch. 440 ; 98 L. J. Ch. 227 ; 140 L. T. 531.

310a. ——.]—A local authority acquired, in 1875, an area of land under its Act, in accordance with which it laid out streets & made improvements in the area. But a plot of land included in the area was practically neglected for sixteen years, & was then handed over to the local authority's Parks Committee for use as an open space & was drained & gravelled. Later, a fountain & certain structures were erected on the plot, & the public used the plot freely & continuously. In or about 1928 the local authority wished to build a tuberculosis dispensary & offices on the plot, & the Minister of Health approved its appropriation for that purpose. In an action by the Attorney-General on relation for an injunction to restrain the local authority from building so as to interfere with the right of user & enjoyment of the plot by the public :—Held : the public had not acquired by user a public right of way over the plot ; the public rights over the plot were general & to some extent precarious, & could be destroyed under Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1907 (c. 53), s. 95.—A.-G. v. MANCHESTER CORPN., [1931] 1 Ch. 254 ; 100 L. 311a. Footpath along sea cliff.]—Where there was evidence of the user by the public of a footpath along a sea cliff for some distance when its direction continued on a line slanting inland, & during the course of some twenty years, owing to erosion by the sea, the footpath so used had receded about twenty or thirty feet inland, though the ct. was always slow to infer the dedication of a public right of way along a sea cliff, such a dedication could be here inferred, having regard to the fact that part of the footpath did not run along the sea cliff, & no objection to its user had been made by the owner of the land over which the footpath continued after leaving the sea cliff. Pltfs. having claimed that there was no public right of way over a strip of land under a portion of a fence removed by defts. :—Held : the public had wandered from the original right of way over the land of pltfs. when it was in the hands of their predecessor in title & was derelict, but the user of the new way by the public had never been acquiesced in, & there had never been a dedication of it to the public use, & pltfs. were entitled to a declaration that there was no such public right of way.—BOULTWOOD v. PAIGNTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. P. 98.

322a. —— User by sufferance] —Deft. council claimed that there was a public footpath over pltf.'s park. On a plan attached to an inclosure award of 1816 no such public footpath was set out, & since that time down to 1901 the park had been in settlement with no one capable of dedicating a right of way to the public. The alleged footpath led from the public road over part of the carriage drive to the hall, & then turned off through the park, leading to only three farms & three or four cottages, & by its use a distance of about sixty-four yards was saved. There was no evidence of dedication, & the evidence of user was by the occupants of the farms & cottages & their friends :—Held : the proof of uninterrupted user was no more than evidence from which the ct. could infer that at some time the owner of the soil had dedicated the path to the public of which there was no evidence, & the evidence of user was user by sufferance only since 1816, before which no such public footpath was shown to exist.—FENWICK v. HUNTINGDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. suspected right of way had been established on behalf of the public, brought an action against the vendor for breach of the implied covenants expressed by his having conveyed as "beneficial owner." The vendor's covenant being qualified, the question turned upon whether there had been dedication of the right subsequently to 1782, the date of the last purchase for value by those through whom the vendor claimed. Pltf. produced two tithe maps, made respectively in 1802 & 1840, in neither of which was the right of way marked:—Held: the tithe maps were made for a special purpose, & not for the purpose of showing public or private rights other than as regards tithe; they were not, therefore, primâ facie evidence enabling pltf. to contend that the dedication was at a subsequent date, so as to shift upon deft. the onus of proving that the dedication was prior to 1782.—STONEY v. EASTBOURNE RURAL COUNCIL, [1927] 1 Ch. 367; 95 L. He drove across the pavement into a courtyard forming part of the premises of the National Provincial Bank, there being no evidence of any other means of access to the courtyard from the highway. The footway was not constructed to allow of vehicular traffic crossing it, & there was a kerb six inches high. There were no pedestrians on the footway at the time, & the right of passage by the public was not interfered with. Applt. was an employee of the bank authorised to drive the car into the courtyard. There was no evidence either as to the ownership of the footway or of any prior user of the courtyard for vehicular traffic:—Held: since access to the courtyard by vehicles was not shown to be essential to any user of the premises, the magistrate was entitled to convict.—CURTIS v. GEEVES (1930), 143 L. 786a. —— —— Increased burden of traffic.]—A road was constructed by pltf. corpn. under powers conferred by a private Act of 1875, which enacted that the road should be constructed according to a certain specification & that it should thereafter be maintained at pltfs.' expense. The road was completed in 1878 as a waterbound macadamised road in accordance with the statutory requirements & was fully maintained by them for many years, but ultimately it deteriorated owing to the increase of traffic of a kind unknown in 1878, & unless resort was had to tar-spraying, or to some similar modern expedient, the existing traffic would rapidly destroy the road:—Held: (1) pltfs. were liable to maintain the road in the condition in which it was completed in 1878, & that liability still continued, notwithstanding the change of circumstances brought about by the increase of traffic; (2) the obligation to maintain the road rested on pltfs. alone.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. ASHDENSHAW URBAN COUNCIL & DENTON URBAN COUNCIL, [1928] Ch. 763; 97 L. 951a. —— ——.]—Relators were trustees of two wills, & as such owned lands abutting upon a certain road in the Metropolitan Borough of W. By notices dated Feb. 14, 1928, the trustees were required to pay to defts. two sums amounting to £1,473 11*s.* 2*d.*, being the estimated expenses of making up as a new street certain portions of the road upon which their lands respectively abutted. The A.-G. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, & relators as co-pltfs. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were not "new streets" within Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 & 1862. Defts. contended that the road in question had not been dedicated to the public before Mar. 20, 1836, & was therefore not repairable by them. Further, they said that each of the portions of the road was in fact & in law a "new street" within Metropolis Management Acts, & that neither they nor their predecessors had at any time taken into charge or assumed the maintenance of the paving or roadway of the street of which the said portions of the road formed part:—Held: (1) on the evidence there was nothing to show that the road in question was anything else than a public highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The fact that repairs had been done by private owners for their own benefit was no evidence of any liability on their part to repair ratione tenuræ; (2) neither of the portions of road in respect of which the claim arose constituted a "new street" within Metropolis Management Acts.—A.-G. & PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. WOOLWICH METROPOLITAN BOROUGH COUNCIL (1929), 93 J. 1002a. Walls & roof of tunnel.]—In 1823 a road was constructed as a private road by S., on, through, & under his own land. In order to make the road S. tunnelled under an existing footpath. In 1923 the road became a main road, pltfs., S.'s successors in title to the soil through which the tunnel was driven, being the road authority. In 1924 it became necessary to repair the walls & roof of the tunnel:—Held: (1) the walls & roof of the tunnel either formed part of the highway or were necessary for its maintenance, & the costs of their repair were costs within Local Govt. Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 11 (2), towards which defts. were bound to make an annual payment; (2) even if S., having in 1823 tunnelled under an existing highway, became liable ratione nocumenti to repair the part of the tunnelled road under the highway, that liability did not descend to pltfs. under Local Govt. 1146a. —— Removal of footway.]—A municipal corpn., in exercise of its powers as highway authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149, widened a narrow street in the town by entirely removing a raised & kerbed footway on one side, & throwing its site into the carriage-way without any notice to or consent of the owner of the adjoining house & premises, who was also owner of one-half of the soil of the road. The owner brought an action in the county ct. for a mandatory order to restore the footway, & for damages for injury to his property. It was proved that the access to & egress from the property through doors in a garden wall was rendered inconvenient & dangerous by the removal of the footway, & the county ct. judge granted a mandatory injunction to defts. to restore the footway to a width of 1 ft. less than before :—Held : the county ct. judge had rightly directed himself in law, & there was evidence upon which he was entitled to find that the action of defts. in removing the footway was unreasonable & arbitrary, & it was not sufficient for the action to be bonâ fide ; & the order was properly made.—HOWARD-FLANDERS v. MALDON CORPN. PART VIII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 7.

o i. —— ——.]—A public road crossed a stream by a bridge. There was a fence between the road & the land adjoining it, erected by the proprietors of the latter. At a point immediately adjoining the bridge there was a gap, 15 feet wide, in the fence. A pedestrian, on a dark night, mistaking this gap for the road, walked through it & fell into the stream & was drowned. In an action of damages against the proprietors of the land adjoining the road :—Held : there was no duty on such proprietors to fence a natural, as opposed to an artificially created, danger on their lands, any such duty, where it existed, falling on the road authorities.—MORRISON v. LONDON MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. CO., [1929] S. C. 1.—SCOT.

o ii. —— ——.]—Defts. constructed a bridge across a navigable stream, having in it a draw or swing to enable vessels to ply on the river. There was not any gate or other protection to guard the approaches to the bridge when swung. A horse belonging to pltf. broke away from the person in charge of him, escaped out upon the public road, & ran a distance of about two miles to the bridge, reaching it while the draw was open to allow a vessel to pass, & rushing into the gap was drowned :—Held : deft. municipality could not be made answerable for the loss of the horse.—STEINHOFF v. KENT CORPN. sq. Restriction during repairs—What is sufficient warning of danger.]—The duty of those making repairs upon a travelled road, is to take such reasonable care, by notice, lighting, guarding or otherwise, as may be reasonably necessary to prevent damages as the result of the temporary condition of the road. When this is done, & the condition of non-repair & of temporary danger is brought home to a person using the highway, he is called upon to use reasonable care on his part for his own safety.—WISE v. TORONTO TRANS-

1191a. —— Obstruction during construction of new road.]—A corpn., in making a new road connecting two existing roads in the same straight line with a bridge across a ravine dividing them, pulled down an old wall which closed a cul de sac in which one of the roads terminated, partly constructed the new road & erected a wooden fence at the end, beyond which was the ravine. Pltf. drove his car after dark down a public road leading straight into the new road under construction, & not seeing the fence in time, which had no red lamp or other warning of danger upon it, & was not watched, drove through it & fell with his car into the ravine, sustaining serious personal injury & damage to the car:—Held: the corpn. being in occupation of the land under construction as a new road, pltf. was not a trespasser upon private property, but an invitee, to whom they owed a duty to warn of any hidden danger; the unlighted fence was in the circumstances a concealed trap, &, pltf. not being guilty of contributory negligence, defts. were liable to him in damages for negligence.—OLDHAM v. SHEFFIELD CORPN. 1191b. —— Trench dug in unfinished road.]—Defts. in execution of a housing scheme were laying out a new road running eastwards from a certain highway & closed at its eastern end by a quickset hedge. Footpaths had already been laid out & edged with kerbstones; houses were being built on the northern side & heaps of earth & building materials made the footpath on this side impassable; the footpath on the south side was still unfinished, but was traversable; it was bounded by a fence of wooden posts & bars; the middle of the road was levelled but not metalled; across it, for laying an electric cable, defts. had cut a trench which they left unfenced & by night unlighted. They did not prevent persons, whether intending occupiers of houses or others, from walking down the new road. Pltf. on a Sept. evening, while there was still daylight, walked with a companion down the highway & into the new road along the southern footpath. Through a gap in the fence they went across other land occupied by defts. to a golf course. They returned somewhat hurriedly when it was growing dark, & pltf. fell into the trench & was injured:—Held: the trench being apparent to all, there was nothing in the nature of a concealed danger or trap, & defts were not liable to pltf., who was a mere licensee.—COLESHILL v. MANCHESTER CORPN., [1928] 1 K. sd. Street railway track adjacent to highway.]—Pltfs. in a motor car attempted to cross the tracks of a street railway, which were at that point not laid upon the travelled highway but upon land owned by the city corpn. adjacent to the travelled highway. The place of crossing was in a dangerous condition, by reason of the tracks not being ballasted but simply resting upon exposed sleepers. The car was imprisoned there & run into by a street car, & pltfs. were injured & the car damaged:—Held: the city corpn. were liable since, although no obligation to repair existed, there was a trap or concealed danger.—JAMES v. TORONTO (1925), 57 O. In an action against defenders, as the local authority charged, under Edinburgh Municipal & Police Act, 1879, with the lighting of the streets, it was proved that a red lamp situated on the island was not lit at the time of the accident. It was also established that defenders had not failed in their duty with respect either to the construction & condition of the lamp, or to the precautions taken to ensure that it should remain alight during the hours of darkness:—Held: the standard of performance could not be absolute, but must be relative to the best available means of achieving exact performance, &, in the absence of evidence of any failure on the part of defenders to take every reasonable means of carrying out their statutory obligations, they fell to be assoilzied.—KEOGH v. EDINBURGH MAGISTRATES, [1926] S. sa. Right to rebate—Basis of calculation.]—Resp. village, an urban municipality within appt. county, was subject by statute to an annual general levy by the council of the county for county road purposes. Under a provision of an Ontario statute of 1926, repealed & re-enacted as sect. 28 (5) of Highway Improvement Act, R. S. Ont., 1927, the village first became entitled to a rebate in each year of 75 per cent. of the general annual rate raised in the village in the previous year. The annual general rate imposed in the years 1926, 1927 & 1928 included sums required by the council of the county to meet the interest & sinking fund charges upon debentures issued by it before 1926 in order to raise money for constructing & improving roads forming part of the county road system:—Held: in fixing the sum upon which resp. village was entitled to the 75 per cent. rebate the appt. county was bound to include the amount raised by it in the village towards the interest & sinking fund charges upon the debentures.—LINCOLN COUNTY COUNCIL v. PORT DALHOUSIE VILLAGE COUNCIL, [1931] A. 1372a. —— —— Liability of water company.]—A water co., at the request & expense of the owner of a house, laid down a service pipe leading from their main under the street into the house, in which they placed a stop-cock for the purpose of regulating the supply of water. This stop-cock was protected by a cover or guard-box let into the pavement, which was provided with a lid or flap. Owing to the hinge of the lid or flap being out of repair, it projected above the pavement, & pltf. while passing along the street tripped over it & sustained injury. The apparatus could not be repaired without being removed, or removed without breaking up the pavement. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of those who were liable for the repair of the hinge:—Held: the co., who alone had power to break up the street for the purpose of repairing the guard-box, were responsible for its repair, & liable in respect of the injuries sustained by pltf.—CHAPMAN v. FYLDE WATERWORKS Co., [1894] 2 Q. The areas were constructed as part of a building adjacent to the sidewalk & were for the benefit of the owners or tenants of the building. No authorisation by the town corpn. for the construction of the areas was shown, but it appeared that, since the year 1900, the corpn. had looked after the coverings of the areas, treating them as part of the sidewalk. Before the accident, the area into which pltf. stepped had been covered with a plank, but on the night of the accident it was uncovered:—Held: the town corpn., having knowledge of the condition, & having taken no steps to close the areas, or to see that they were adequately protected, were liable to pltfs.—MCMICHAEL v. GODERICH TOWN, [1928] 4 D. 1435a. Street traders—Licence—Application to renew—Duties of borough council.]—(1) The remedy by appeal to petty sessions given by London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1927 (c. xxii.), s. 35 (2), to a street trader who is aggrieved by the refusal of the renewal of his licence as a street trader is equally beneficial, convenient & effectual as mandamus would be. Mandamus will therefore not lie to a Metropolitan borough council to compel them to hear & determine a street trader's application for renewal of a licence.

(2) In deciding such applications, the council is an administrative body, not a judicial one; it may therefore properly take into account a report of a committee, & its decision will not be invalidated merely by the fact that some members taking part in it were not present at an earlier meeting when the applicant was heard.

(3) Semble: the Act does not contemplate the calling of evidence before the council on such applications; but the justices at petty sessions who hear an appeal can conveniently hear such evidence as may be necessary.—R. v. LEWISHAM CORPN., Ex p. JACKSON (1929), 93 J. 1775a. ——.]—Defts., who owned & used traction engines for the purposes of their business, drove two of these engines on a very hot day in July over a highway belonging to pltfs., who were the highway authority for the district. The highway, which had been constructed as a first class main road for the purpose of bearing traffic of all sorts, had a mexphalte surface. In passing along the most exposed part of the highway, the driving wheels of these engines sank into the road at a point where the surface was very soft, with the result that the road was damaged. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover extraordinary expenses, pursuant to Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12. They also claimed damages for wrongful abuse of the highway by defts. & for nuisance & negligence :—Held : as agricultural traffic, including heavy traction engines, was admittedly part of the ordinary traffic, & the weights in the present case were normal, no claim for excessive weight or for extraordinary traffic could arise under the Act of 1878 ; there was no excess whatever by defts. of the lawful use of the highway & no wrongful abuse of their rights of passing & repassing ; the injury to the highway was due to a peculiar & unique conjunction of heat & of atmospheric & other conditions ; defts.' vehicles did not constitute a nuisance, & there was no negligence on the part of defts.—EASTBOURNE COUNTY BOROUGH v. FULLER & SONS (1928), 93 J. 1894a. —— Consent of owners of land abutting on highway—Condition precedent.]—By sect. 59 of a local Act "the corpn. may from time to time by order stop up wholly or partially any highway which in their opinion is unnecessary on such terms as to the vesting of the soil & other matters as may be agreed on between the corpn. & the owners & lessees of buildings & lands abutting on the highway & on any highway being so stopped up all public & other rights of way & other rights in, over or upon the same shall be absolutely extinguished." By sect. 117: "Any person deeming himself aggrieved by any order or determination of the corpn. or by any conviction or order made by a ct. of summary jurisdiction under any provision of this Act may appeal . . . to the next practicable ct. of quarter sessions under & according to Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 269":—Held: (1) it was a condition of the making of an order under sect. 59 that there should be an agreement between the corpn. & the owners & lessees of buildings & lands abutting on the highway; (2) the "highway" must mean the whole highway & not any part thereof; & the applt. was therefore a person aggrieved although his land did not abut on the part of the highway stopped up.—LINTON v. NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE CORPN. The amount not having been paid, the council on Jan. 1, 1926, applied to a magistrate under sect. 116 (1) of the above Act of 1894 to fix the amount of the expenses & to make an order that no part of the structure should be let for occupation until after payment thereof. The magistrate dismissed the complaint on the ground that more than the period of six months limited by sect. 11 of the above Act of 1848 had elapsed between the time when the matter of the complaint arose & the date when the complaint was made :—Held : the six months' limitation of time applied to proceedings under sect. 116 (1) of the Act of 1894, & the time ran from the date of the demand, & the magistrate's decision must be affirmed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. OWNER OF 14, LEE-STREET STEPNEY (1926), 135 L. 2229a. Part of premises fronting another street.]—Deft. in 1903 purchased a house which fronted on G. road. In 1907 she bought a strip of land which she used to form a carriage drive to the house. In 1904 her husband became the tenant of a field to the south of & adjoining the house & land. The field fronted on E. road. In 1907 deft. purchased the field, but entered into a tenancy agreement letting it to her husband, & from that time the field & the house & land had been separately assessed by the local authority though in fact the tenancy agreement between deft. & her husband ceased to exist about 1918. In 1920 E. road was made up, the usual course being followed under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 150 & 257, with the result that pltfs. claimed a charge, for the admitted proportion due from deft. of the expenses incurred in making up E. road, on the whole of deft.'s property, including her house & grounds as well as the field, as fronting, adjoining or abutting on E. road :—Held : the house & grounds & the field must be considered as being one close, & as such the whole was liable to a charge for making up E. road as fronting, adjoining or abutting thereon.—ALTRINCHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. O'BRIEN (1927), 91 J. 2439a. —— Sale by owner—Necessity for demand on purchaser—Limitation of action.]—Defts. being a local authority having duly made a final apportionment under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 12, of the expenses of certain private street works, demanded in 1910 the amount thus apportioned from an owner of land abutting on the street thus made up. In 1927 the latter sold the land in question to pltf. without having satisfied defts.' demand, & pltf. then proceeded to erect houses on the land in respect of which he became entitled to a subsidy. Defts. thereupon claimed to set off against the subsidy the amount of their claim against the owners for the time being of the land in respect of the apportioned expenses, together with interest thereon :—Held : (1) although defts. might have lost their right to sue the original owner for the expenses they were not prevented from suing pltf. as a subsequent owner for the time being. A demand on such owner was necessary to complete the cause of action for such expenses & Stat. Limitations did not begin to run until such demand had been made ; (2) on the footing that Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, was applicable, that sect. did not apply to defeat a claim against pltf., the owner for the time being, because defts. had no present right to receive the sum set off from pltf. until he became owner & twelve years from that date had not elapsed.—DENNERLEY v. PRESTWICH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1930] 1 K. B. 334; 99 L. J. K. B. 25; 141 L. T. 602; 94 J. P. 84; 45 T. L. R. 659; 73 Sol. Jo. 530; 27 L. G. R. 618, C. A.

2447a. —— ——.]—An urban sanitary authority, acting under the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), resolved to execute certain private street works in a street in their district, & to contribute a certain portion of the expenses thereof, & that in settling the apportionment of the balance of the expenses thereof, regard should be had to the greater or less degree of benefit to be derived from the works, by the premises of the frontagers, & they approved provisional apportionments on the frontagers which were duly served & deposited in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Two of the frontagers objected to the provisional apportionments on their premises, before justices, who expressed the opinion that the proposed works were not unnecessary; that the estimated expenses were not excessive; that the premises of the objectors should not be excluded from the apportionment; but they stated that they considered the proposed works were unreasonable in that it was not reasonable that the objectors should bear the whole of the amounts shown in their provisional apportionments. Accordingly they approved the plans, sections, specifications, & estimates of the urban sanitary authority, but quashed in part the apportionments on the objectors' premises, by reducing each of these two apportionments by £100. They confirmed the apportionments on the other frontagers:—Held: the justices had sought to compel the urban sanitary authority to increase their contribution at the risk alternatively of sacrificing the scheme as a whole. It was not within the province of the justices, directly or indirectly, to compel the urban sanitary authority to make a larger contribution than that which they had already agreed to grant.

Upon the further consideration of the case, the justices must adopt one of three courses: increase the apportionments on the other frontagers to satisfy the balance of £200; quash the whole of the apportionment; or adjourn the matter, giving the urban sanitary authority the opportunity of considering whether they would pass a new resolution increasing their contribution by the £200 (per CUR.).—CHATHAM CORPN. v. WRIGHT (1929), 142 L. T. 431; 94 J. P. 43; 28 L. G. R. 4, D. C.

2449a. Time fixed by order—Reasonable time—What must be considered.]—Under sects. 33, 34 of Cardiff Corpn. Act, 1884, the corpn. made an order that a street, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, should be paved, kerbed, etc., within two months. The estimate & plan deposited in accordance with sect. 33 of the Act showed that under part of the street a sewer was to be laid by the corpn. while the work was being done, & the order showed that some of the frontagers were required to connect the works which they were required to do with the new sewer. Certain frontagers did not comply with the order, & the work was done by the corpn., &, after service of notice of apportionment of the expense of the work & demand for payment, the corpn. applied to the ct. by originating summons, for a declaration that the proper proportion of the costs of the work, with interest to date of payment, was a charge upon the premises of those frontagers, in accordance with sect. 54 of the Act:—Held: the time fixed by the order was not, in the circumstances, unreasonable; nor was there any evidence to establish that if the frontagers had done the work themselves the corpn. would have hampered them by laying the sewer simultaneously with their work. The frontagers were entitled to comply with the order & to restrain any interference with them in doing so, but not having so complied, they were liable for the expense of the work being done for them & the corpn. were entitled to the relief claimed.—CARDIFF CORPN. v. CARDIFF PURE ICE & COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. 2466a. —— Powers of magistrate.]—B. Corpn. proposed to execute certain private street works under Birmingham Corpn. (Consolidation) Act, 1883, ss. 46–50, which were substantially identical with Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57). The corpn. duly complied with the formalities required & made a provisional apportionment on resps., the frontagers on the street, according to their respective frontages. Resps. objected that the works were unnecessary. On the hearing of this objection resps. called no evidence. The stipendiary magistrate held that some works were necessary, but was of opinion that the estimated expenses were too heavy. He reduced the estimate & ordered that one resp. should pay one-half & each other resp. two-thirds of the respective sums named in the provisional apportionment:—

so. Owner at time of commencement of action.]—A municipal council did certain pacing, kerbing, & guttering work in a public road. At that time defts. were the joint owners of land on the same side of the road & adjacent to the work done. Before any steps were taken to recover any part of the cost defts. parted with the ownership of the land. Thereafter the council brought an action against them to recover half the cost of the work:—Held: the words "the owner for the time being" in Local Government Act, 1919, s. 243, meant the owner at the time of the commencement of the action, & therefore that defts. were not liable.—ULMARRA MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. NOTARAS (1929), 29 S. 2580a. —— Conversion of two shops into one.]—Defts., who had purchased two houses with the shops on the ground floors projecting towards the street on which the premises fronted a few feet beyond the exterior walls of the two upper floors, submitted to the local authority plans of some proposed alterations. These consisted in the main in the conversion of the two shops into one continuous shop with a single entrance from the street in a new position. The local authority took the view that the proposed alterations amounted to taking down the front of the premises for the purpose of rebuilding, so as to entitle them to prescribe a new building line under the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155. They therefore refused to approve the plans & called on defts. to set the ground floor front back to the existing exterior walls of the floors above. Defts. having refused to comply, this action was brought on the relation of the local authority & pltf. moved for a declaration that defts. were not entitled to build beyond the prescribed line & for an order on them to remove so much of the new front of the shop as projected beyond that line:—Held: the local authority had no power to prescribe a new building line under sect. 155, because (1) on the true construction of the sect. "the front" included the exterior walls of the two upper floors as well as the exterior wall of the ground floor, & (2) in any case the alterations made to the premises did not amount to taking down the front of the ground floor.—A.-G. v. PRICES' TAILORS (1928), LTD., [1930] 2 Ch. 316; 99 L. " Erection "—What amounts to.]—Held: the object of Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71), s. 33, is to facilitate the widening of streets by enabling local authorities to prescribe an improvement line to which buildings will eventually be set back, & it is contemplated that the authorities will for that purpose then exercise the power conferred on them by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 154, of purchasing premises. In order not to increase the burden of compensation which the exercise of that power involves, Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71), s. 33 (5), enacts that no new erection can be placed on the street side of the improvement line. Resps.' shop had in 1908 been moved back, leaving a paved forecourt in front of the shop so moved back upon which they used to expose their goods. After an improvement line had been prescribed in 1927, resps. again enclosed the forecourt into the shop, bringing the shop front back to its old level, which was beyond and on the street side of the improvement line:—Held: this was a " new . . . erection " within sect. 33 (5).—SITTINGBOURNE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. LIPTON, LTD., [1931] 1 K. 2644a. Agreement to maintain bridge over canal—Extent of duty—Tow-path raised to avoid flooding—Whether council bound to raise bridge.]—The construction of a canal involved the interception of a certain public road; & the canal co., in accordance with its statutory obligations, carried the road over the canal by means of a bridge. The canal subsequently became vested in a railway co., who were required under sect. 17 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873 (c. 48), to keep the canal open & navigable. At a later date the railway co. entered into an agreement with the county council having jurisdiction in the locality under which the council agreed to remove the bridge & to construct a new bridge in substitution therefor; & the council covenanted that they would " from time to time & at all times thereafter well & sufficiently maintain & repair the new bridge & the roadway & footpaths upon the same & the approaches thereto." The agreement provided for a headway of six feet between the arch of the new bridge & the towing-path passing under it. The bridge & the neighbouring part of the canal for considerable distances on both sides of the bridge were in a mining area which had been subsiding for a long time prior to the agreement; & within sixteen years thereafter, owing to further subsidences, there was a general sinking of the bridge & the towing path. As, however, the water level remained the same, the railway co. found it necessary, in order to avoid flooding, to raise the towing path, the resulting effect being that the headway between the bridge & the towing path was reduced to four feet six inches, which was insufficient for the convenient working of the

Before the approaches on the west side of the bridge were constructed, the waters sometimes crossed the highway considerably west of a point 300 feet west of the eastern bank, & an embankment that far west was rendered necessary on account of the waters overflowing the highway & being then constructed, became part of the highway:—Held: the embankment was rendered necessary within the meaning of the Act & the bridge was therefore of greater length than 300 feet.—Re PICKERING & ONTARIO, [1930] 1 D. The cause of the accident was the failure of defts. to maintain the footway in good condition. t i. —— ——.]—In Dec. 1928, a woman brought an action of declarator of marriage against the representatives of a man who had died in Sept. of that year, averring that a marriage had been entered into between them by declaration de praesenti in Dec. 1922. It was proved that the parties had for many years prior to that date been on terms of intimate friendship, & that deceased had more than once proposed marriage to the pursuer. On Dec. 28, 1922, at an hotel at which the parties were staying, they stated in the presence of three witnesses that they accepted one another as husband & wife. A document attesting the marriage was signed by the parties & by the witnesses. The pursuer & the three witnesses to the document deponed that the interchange of consent was serious, & was intended to constitute 453a. —— ——.]—The detail & strictness of proof of a marriage required in a criminal prosecution for bigamy is of a totally different standard from that required before a magistrate who is dealing with the question of the maintenance of a wife alleged to have been deserted. In civil cases, where there is evidence of the fact of a ceremony of marriage, followed by cohabitation of the parties, everything necessary for the validity of the marriage will be presumed in the absence of decisive evidence to the contrary, even though it may be necessary to presume the grant of a special licence. The burden of impeaching the factum of a marriage & the presumption of law semper præsumitur pro matrimonio, lies upon the impeaching party.

marriage, & that no other person was present at the ceremony. On the other hand, a witness B. deponed that she was present during part of the ceremony, & that the proceedings were of the nature of a joke. At the date of this ceremony the deceased was seventy-six & the pursuer was about forty. The pursuer & one witness deponed that the parties occupied the same bedroom after the ceremony. The witness B. gave evidence to the contrary effect.

The parties did not take up residence together. The pursuer continued to carry on her profession as a teacher under her maiden name. Several witnesses deponed that deceased had subsequently introduced the pursuer to them as his wife. Other witnesses gave evidence that deceased had denied that he was married to the pursuer. Deceased died on Sept. 2, 1928, leaving about £20,000. In his will, made two days before his death, he left the pursuer a legacy of £200 under her maiden name:—Held: the exchange of serious matrimonial consent had been clearly established by the document & the evidence of the pursuer & the three witnesses thereto, & the subsequent conduct of the parties did not displace this conclusion.—DUNN v. DUNN'S TRUSTEES, [1930] S. 595a. —— Bankruptcy of husband.]—The bkpcy. of a husband who has entered into a separation deed is an answer to any claim for the payment of agreed sums under the deed, but does not convert his wife's agreement to live apart with an allowance into an agreement to live apart without maintenance. Her right to that maintenance is not in contract but is an incident of matrimonial status at common law. An agreement under a separation deed to receive an allowance merely suspends, but does not annul, that right, which revives as soon as the agreement is terminated by bkpcy., notwithstanding the receipt of a dividend. The dividend is not a transaction between husband & wife, but an incident in the bkpcy., & its receipt does not operate as a new bargain with the husband compounding the common law right of the wife. The separation agreement thus put an end to does not debar the wife from alleging the wilful neglect of the husband to provide reasonable maintenance for her within Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925.—DEWE v. DEWE, SNOWDON v. SNOWDON, [1928] P. 113; 97 L. 1223a. —— Necessity for survivorship of wife.]—In the year 1876 a husband during the lifetime of his wife took out a policy on his life with an assurance co., whereby, after a recital that the assured "for the benefit of his wife" in pursuance of Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), had proposed to the co. to effect an assurance on his own life for £500, in consideration of the payment of the premiums during the life of the assured, the co. covenanted that the property of the co. should be liable to pay to the exors., administrators & assigns of the assured the sum of £500. In 1918 the wife died, & in 1929 the husband died without having married again. In 1891 the husband was adjudicated bkpt. & obtained his discharge as from Apr. 14, 1899 :—Held : upon the true construction of the policy & Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), s. 10, the interest in the policy moneys vested in the husband & upon his adjudication in the trustee in his bankruptcy subject to the trust in favour of his wife which enured for her benefit only if she survived her husband ; with the result that as she died before her husband & before the fund fell into possession, the policy moneys belonged & were payable to the trustee in bkpcy.

Semble : Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), s. 10, does not enable a husband to confer the benefit of the policy upon any wife who does not by surviving him become his widow.—Re COLLIER, [1930] 2 Ch. 37 ; 143 L. 1226a. —— —— If living at his death—Cash value of policy sought to be taken by insured during life.]—A husband took out an insurance policy for £500 on his life, & by the terms of the policy the co. agreed to pay that sum to insured's wife, if she were living at his death, or in the event of her prior death to pay it to insured's exors., administrators & assigns. The policy contained a proviso that, if at the end of twenty years insured was still living, he should have the right to exercise any of six specified options. Insured being then still living, he exercised an option to receive the entire cash value of the policy with its share of accumulated profits & to discontinue the policy. A sum of £288 thus became payable. The co. were unwilling to pay over this sum except on the joint receipt of the husband & wife, & ultimately paid it into ct. : —Held : (1) the policy came within sect. 11 of the above Act, & created a trust in favour of the wife in certain events ; (2) insured must be taken to have exercised the option for the benefit of the trust ; (3) unless the husband & wife came to an agreement, the fund must be accumulated in ct. until it could be ascertained by the death of either party who was entitled to it.—Re FLEETWOOD'S POLICY, [1926] Ch. 48 ; 95 L. n ii. —— Whether assignable.]—A policy of assurance was effected by a husband for the benefit of his wife under Married Women's Policies of Assurance (Scotland) Act, 1880. There was competition between the widow & an assignee claiming under an assignation which bore to have been executed with the consent & concurrence of the wife :—Held : the wife had no power to discharge the trust in her favour created by the policy, & the insurance co. ought to have known that the deed was one which the spouses were disabled from granting.—SCOTTISH LIFE CO. v. DONALD (1901), 9 S. The conveyance was dated Apr. 9, 1920, & was not registered until the following Dec. Until registration the deed had not been delivered, & deft had been told nothing about it :—Held : though the presumption of advancement may be rebutted by evidence of actual intention, there was cogent evidence of pltf. having ultimately made up his mind that his wife should have the property.—HARRINGTON v. HARRINGTON, [1925] 2 D. Hotel, sued to have a caveat registered by him discharged, on the ground that he had no interest in the property. The caveat was based upon the following document : "I hereby agree to give D. half of the property known as the G. Hotel, & to give him half the rent of the same from the present date, & he agrees to pay half of all debts against the above property up to date for the said half interest." The land had been purchased in 1902 by deft. in the name of pltf., his then wife. Upon that purchase & the erection & equipment of the hotel building he applied the proceeds of the sale of two quarter sections, one of which was in his name & the other in hers. They ran the hotel business together, until 1905, he acting as manager, she as cook & housekeeper. Having agreed to separate, they sold the furniture, & leased the hotel, & borrowed money on mtge. to help pay off the floating liabilities. The husband signed the mtge. as a joint covenantor, & the lease as a consenting party. Before leaving her he asked her to sign the memorandum above set out which she did without demur :—Held : an express trust existed in favour of deft. for one half of the estate in question.—REYNOLDS v. BETSON, [1931] 1 W. The house was in pltf.'s name until Jan. 1922, when it was transferred to the wife. In Jan. 1924, the husband was ejected from the house, & he brought action against the wife for a declaration that his wife held the house as trustee for him. On the trial the husband stated that when he made the conveyance to his wife he did so on her undertaking that the members of her family would vacate the house, & this was never carried out :—Held :

S. M. 1892, c. 95, was in force, the husband being then solvent, & a certificate of title therefor issued in her name under Manitoba Real Property Act :—Held : the beneficial, as well as the legal, interest in the land vested in her for her separate use, & neither the land nor its proceeds could be taken in execution for debts of the husband subsequently incurred, notwithstanding Married Woman's Act, s. 2, respecting property received by a married woman from her husband during coverture.—FRASER v. DOUGLAS (1908), 40 S. After D.'s death, his widow became insane & was confined in a public hospital. Money was paid by the bank to the Public Trustee. Having been restored to sanity the widow redeposited in the bank what was left of the money to the joint credit of herself & two relatives :—Held : the money originally deposited belonged to D. & was placed to the credit of himself & wife as a means of conveniently managing the affairs of himself & his family ; &, therefore, the presumption in favour of the right of his wife to what remained of the fund on his death was rebutted. —STADDER v. CANADIAN BANK COMMERCE, [1929] 3 D. petition. The wife's counsel applied for costs, but as no security for her costs had been obtained, no costs were granted. The wife's solr. brought an action in the K. B. Div. to recover the costs from the husband, on the ground of his wife's agency of necessity at common law. The judge found as a fact that the solr. had acted without negligence, honestly believing that the wife was innocent & that she would be successful in her defence: —Held: in those circumstances the wife had no authority to bind her husband, so as to make him liable for the costs of her defence to his petition for divorce.—ARNOLD & WEAVER v. AMARI, [1928] 1 K. 2039a. —— —— ——.]—By a deed of separation reciting that differences had arisen between a husband & a wife, it was agreed that the wife should during the life of the husband live separate & apart from him & free from his marital control & authority as if she were unmarried, & that the wife should retain as her separate property certain articles which, if she should die in the lifetime of the husband without having disposed of them, should devolve as if she had died possessed thereof intestate & a widow. The husband covenanted that he would during the life of the wife pay to her an annual sum of £600. The wife was also to be entitled to certain furniture & effects for the use of herself during her life. Throughout the deed the parties were referred to as "the husband" & "the wife" respectively. It was provided that if the husband & the wife should be reconciled to each other & return to cohabitation the deed should become void. The husband subsequently committed adultery & the wife obtained a decree dissolving the marriage. He then made default in paying the full annual sum provided for by the deed, & she brought an action to recover the arrears :—Held : the deed was not subject to any implied term that it should only operate so long as the marriage relation continued to exist between the parties, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—MAY v. MAY, [1929] 2 K. Crawshay Ralston of the Bungalow, Valley. Died 20th May, 1916." Deft. was the W. R. Crawshay Ralston mentioned in the inscription & he had caused the inscription to be made. Pltf. brought an action against her husband for libel & also for a declaration that she was the lawful wife of deft.:—Held: though the inscription was capable of a defamatory meaning, pltf., by reason of Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 12, could not sue her husband on it, the action being for a tort & not for the protection & security of her separate property.

(2) If there were any doubt as to the validity of the marriage, in my opinion, an action at law in the K. B. Div. of the High Ct. is not the proper proceeding in which to have that matter determined. I think it would be necessary, if there were any doubt as to the validity of the marriage, to take proceedings under the Legitimacy Declaration Act, 1858 (c. 93) (MACNAUGHTEN, J.).—RALSTON v. RALSTON, [1930] 2 K. 2294a. —— For negligence—Injury sustained before marriage.]—Although by Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 12, a married woman has the same civil remedies for the protection & security of her own separate property as if it belonged to her as a feme sole, & by sect. 24 "property" includes a thing in action, nevertheless a right of action for a pure tort which accrued before the marriage of the parties is not a thing in action within sect. 24, & consequently such right is not part of the wife's separate property.

An unmarried woman sustained injuries through a man's negligent driving, & issued a writ against him claiming damages in respect thereof. Before the trial of the action she married him:—Held: her right of action was not such a thing in action as would become her separate property within the meaning of the Act, but was barred by the general disability of husband & wife to sue each other for a tort.—GOTTLIFFE v. EDELSTON, [1930] 2 K. For petitioner it was submitted that the memorandum of agreement relied upon was not a deed of separation, but merely an agreement for maintenance for a limited period. Even if it were a deed of separation, the wife was entitled to change her mind, & she had in fact shown a sincere desire to live together again with her husband, though her motive might have been the welfare of the children: —Held: the memorandum of agreement was a valid & binding & subsisting agreement to live separate & apart. 2518a. ——.]—A husband & wife intermarried in Feb. 1922, & continued to cohabit until July, 1927, when the wife left the husband. On Nov. 2, 1927, the wife petitioned for a divorce founded upon an act of sodomy alleged to have been committed on her by the husband in Mar. 1922, & alleged acts of cruelty consisting of (a) acts of shameless uncleanness & invitations to repeat them, & (b) ordinary acts of cruelty, such as acts of ill-temper & abuse.

At the trial the judge in summing up to the jury did not warn the jury against finding that the sodomy alleged had been committed on the uncorroborated evidence of the wife, who was an accomplice; nor did he clearly point out that before it could be held that there was cruelty as regards the sexual malpractices it must be shown that they caused danger to life, limb or health, bodily or mental, or a reasonable expectation of it. The jury's verdict was that sodomy had been committed as alleged; that the husband had been guilty of cruelty of the class (a), & that he had not been guilty of cruelty of class (b). The judge then made a decree nisi for dissolution of the marriage. On appeal:—Held: (1) the judge ought to have warned the jury that cogent evidence was required to overcome the presumption of innocence of sodomy, & that they should not convict on the wife's uncorroborated evidence; (2) the ct. must take notice of the fact that there had been condonation of the offence, even though the husband did not plead it; (3) the judge had misdirected the jury by saying that the sexual malpractices were cruelty in themselves, as there could not be legal cruelty without danger to life, limb, or health, physical or mental, or reasonable apprehension of it; & (4) instead of directing a new trial the ct. should dismiss the wife's petition.

(5) The wife having on the evidence been a consenting party to the act of sodomy alleged to have been committed it would be impossible for her to obtain a decree of divorce based solely on that act.

(6) The rules with regard to condonation & connivance as a bar to a decree for divorce were well established in the practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. before the Act of 1857. In my judgment these rules apply to cases in which the ground alleged for divorce is sodomy (GREER, L.J.).—STATHAM v. STATHAM, [1929] P. 131; 98 L. J. P. 113; 140 L. T. 292; 45 T. L. 2813a. Petition for judicial separation—Whether petition brought only for collateral purpose.]—A wife petitioned for judicial separation from her husband, on the ground of his adultery. She needed no protection against interference from her husband, but she required orders for permanent maintenance & for custody. The judge, following his usual custom, asked petitioner why she prayed for judicial separation & not dissolution of the marriage. Petitioner stated that she did not wish her husband to marry the woman who had ruined her home :—Held : permanent maintenance & custody being, at any rate, a part of the purpose for which the suit was brought, petitioner had a right to a decree of judicial separation. The ct. had a discretion to refuse such a decree, but not an unlimited discretion, & that discretion must be exercised upon some legal ground, such as the absolute & discretionary bars & the ground that the suit was not brought bonâ fide, but only for some collateral purpose. But where the wife's application is based upon a charge of desertion only, such a clause should not be inserted in the order, inasmuch as it prevents the continuance of desertion in strict law after the date of the order. In the present case the wife was granted a separation order on the ground of desertion, & the non-cohabitation clause was inserted in the order :—Held : the justices were entitled to find as they did, but were wrong in allowing the non-cohabitation clause to be included in the order. admissible in evidence. The wife subsequently sued the husband for dissolution of marriage on the ground of his adultery alleged to have been committed since the date of the deed. The husband traversed the allegation, & by his answer countercharged the wife with adultery antecedent to the deed. The wife disputed the right of the husband to make the counter-charge, having regard to the deed. The husband contended that the provisions of the deed were against public policy, in that they provided for the withholding from the ct. matters material & necessary for its consideration by virtue of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 178 (3):—Held: on a motion by the wife to strike out the allegation in the answer of the husband of her adultery, the deed was not against public policy, & it did not constitute any bargain between the parties to pervert the course of justice by withholding from the ct. any matter material for its consideration, & the agreement made by the deed being one honestly entered into was good, & it was no answer to it to say that if the intention of the parties had been to obtain a collusive divorce or to cloak the past, the deed could have had a dishonest & illegal operation.—L. v. L., [1931] P. 63; 100 L. 3077a. —— —— Petitioner in fear of co-respondent.]—In an undefended divorce petition by a husband it was admitted that he had spent many week-ends at his home under the same roof with his wife & co-resp. when the two latter were, to his knowledge, committing adultery; & that before the husband filed his petition citing his wife's paramour as co-resp., he entered into a deed of separation which in terms permitted his wife to "reside at such places, & with such persons as she may from time to time think fit." The case was remitted from assizes to the Divorce Ct. on the question of connivance:—Held: there was a strong case for the husband being an accessory to his wife's adultery, but, though almost terrified to be under the same roof as co-resp., he resented & resisted as far as he dared the continuance of the adulterous relations. He did not encourage it. They defied him. He was not an accessory, & did not enter into the deed with the idea of consenting to his wife's living in adultery with co-resp. 3092a. —— Agreement between husband & co-respondent as to damages.]—Petitioner filed a petition for divorce on the ground of his wife's adultery with co-resp., & it was disclosed to the ct. that petitioner & co-resp. had agreed that co-resp. should pay petitioner £2,500 damages, of which £1,750 was to be paid down, & the rest later, & that petitioner should claim no further damages from co-resp. & should put no obstacles in the way of a decree nisi being made absolute. The petition was dismissed on the ground that the suit was collusive. After the dismissal resp. & co-resp. continued to live in adultery, & petitioner, who had received the £1,750, presented a second petition against them, complaining of the adultery since the date of the former petition:—Held: petitioner had by the agreement prevented himself from complaining of any adultery whether past or future, & he had connived at the adultery of which in his second petition he complained, & the second petition must be dismissed.—GIFFORD v. GIFFORD & FREEMAN (1926), 43 T. 3135 ii. ——.]—"Collusion" is a species of statutory fraud on the ct., &, like "fraud," is incapable of exhaustive definition, & will ever be widened to prevent the mischief which the statute was intended to prevent. Collusion is possible in a good case, i.e. although the ct. is convinced that matrimonial misconduct was proved, yet if evidence of collusion, too gross & palpable to admit of being overlooked or explained, appeared, no decree should be made.

In the present case the ct., having concluded that there was an arrangement between the parties to obtain a divorce & as to the testimony which should be offered to support the claim therefor, & that the testimony given by the resp. was in accordance with this arrangement, & largely untrue, refused the decree, holding that, aside from the admission as to the arrangement, the appearances of collusion were too gross & palpable to admit of being overlooked or explained, & that the arrangement itself was clearly collusive.—SANBORN v. SANBORN, [1928] 1 D. 3449b. ——.]—The discretionary power of the ct. to grant a decree of divorce to a petitioner guilty of adultery is a regulated discretion which it is the duty of the ct. to reduce to method. The primary essential for the exercise of its power by the ct. is that there should be secured to it the means of knowledge of the material facts with reasonable certainty. With this end in view the fact that the exercise of the discretion is sought should appear on the face of the petition. There should be lodged along with the application for the certificate of a registrar that the proceedings are in order, preliminary to setting down, a statement of the matters in respect of which the exercise of the discretion is prayed & the grounds on which the petition in this behalf is based. The intervention of the King's Proctor following suppression of fact or presentment of falsehood by a petitioner in these matters is not the only safeguard for the observance of due procedure. A party to a divorce proceeding who is asking to have the discretion of the ct. favourably exercised & who in doing so acts in such a manner as to obstruct or divert the course of justice is guilty of a contempt of ct. & liable to its consequences. The multiplication of the tribunals in whom is vested the jurisdiction to decree divorce has rendered necessary a more precise procedure to secure the presentment to them of the facts in each case material to the exercise of the discretion &, if necessary, cases can then be adjourned for further consideration & the services of the King's Proctor made available. To formulate & limit with precision the grounds for the exercise of the discretion when the facts are once before the ct. is a practical impossibility; they cannot be rigidly defined but certain broad principles can be gathered from authority. The more strict & early view that two or at most three classes of cases only called for the exercise of the discretion savoured more of estoppel than of the powers of the ct. as defined by statute. Those two classes arose either when resp. had induced petitioner to believe in the death of resp. or when a petitioning wife had been forced by a resp. husband to lead an immoral life, & the question was treated as open whether condonation of petitioner's adultery constituted a third class. To-day these may be stated as guiding principles; a governing consideration is now the interest of the community at large in maintaining the sanctions of honest matrimony; a strong affirmative case is still necessary to justify the ct. in departing from the discretionary prohibition of relief to a guilty petitioner; it is manifestly contrary to law that a judicial discretion in favour of a litigant who has been guilty of adultery should be exercised when that course will probably encourage immorality: if the exercise is not unlikely to have that effect there is an argument against leniency. On the one hand condonation by a resp. of a petitioner's adultery is, though not so in the earlier time, admittedly now a ground for exercising the discretion; on the other hand, it is now a ground for refusing to exercise the discretion that the

PART XIII. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 4.—D. (a) ii.

3446 i. Principle on which court acts.]—There is nothing in Marriage Act, 1915, s. 131 (1), to indicate that the general rule is that the discretion of the ct. should be exercised against a petitioner who has himself been guilty of adultery, or that it should only be exercised in his favour in exceptional circumstances. The discretion of the ct., on the wording of the section, is quite open. If anything, the words would appear to indicate that ordinarily the decree nisi would be granted notwithstanding the adultery of the petitioner, but that in such a case the ct. is not bound to grant it. Under the section the ct. has an unfettered discretion, & it is neither desirable nor possible to lay down definite & rigid rules by which the ct. should be guided in all cases. The mere non-disclosure in his affidavit by a petitioner of the fact that he has during the marriage committed adultery is not a sufficient ground for refusing a decree nisi to which he would otherwise be entitled.—ADAMS v. ADAMS, [1928] V. 3448 ii. —— ——.]—A wife who was deserted by her husband, having reason to believe he was dead, married a second time. The first husband, turning up, petitioned for divorce. It appeared from the evidence that petitioner had been guilty of an infraction of substantially all the matters set out in Divorce & Matrimonial Causes Act, s. 16, & that the wife was a very deeply injured woman without a stain on her character:—Held: although there is power to refuse petitioner a decree, the judge's discretion is left unfettered & absolute by the legislature, & it is in the best interests of the wife, in the circumstances, to be set free; the marriage will, therefore, be dissolved on condition that petitioner gives security for the maintenance of resp. in the terms of sect. 17 of the statute.—HARNEY v. HARNEY (1926), 39 B. C. R. 275.—CAN.

3448 iii. ——.]—Held: even if the evidence against the pltf. justified the inference that he had committed adultery, the circumstances of the case, including the interests of pltf.'s child, warranted the ct. in exercising its judicial discretion in his favour.—WRIGHT v. WRIGHT, [1928] 1 D. L. R. 934; [1928] 1 W. W. R. 383.—CAN.

adultery of petitioner has in some serious degree conduced to that of resp. & conversely that a resp. should not escape the consequences of his or her proved adultery by putting forward similar acts of petitioner for which resp. was in any serious degree responsible. Further matters now considered are the interests of children, the position of a mother in whose care children are, & possible conditions as regards the future of the guilty parties. All these considerations are held to affect the interest of the community at large.—APTED v. APTED & BLISS, [1930] P. 246; 99 L. J. P. 73; 143 L. T. 353; 46 T. L. R. 456; 74 Sol. Jo. 338.

4278a. —— —— When appeal lies.]—The principle that the ct. will provide for the wife's costs of a matrimonial suit originally arose from the fact that on her marriage her property passed to her husband, but it still obtains, though at the present day the question is whether as a litigant she has sufficient separate estate wherewith to pay the costs of a solr. The power of a registrar under Matrimonial Causes Rules, 1924, r. 91, to provide for the wife's costs is discretionary & not subject to review unless he has clearly proceeded on a basis which is wrong. He is entitled to take into consideration the capital & income of both parties & the nature & availability of it in arriving at a conclusion as to the "sufficient separate estate" of the wife within the rule. Among other matters the amount of an allowance under an existing deed of separation is a factor, although partly & primarily intended as an alimentary provision & not as a fund for defraying costs.—WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS, [1929] P. 114; 98 L. It was urged on behalf of petitioner that the pleadings showed that the wife had not a good ground for her defence so as to justify an order against her husband to secure her costs. sz. Pending appeal.]—The Ct. of Appeal of Saskatchewan has jurisdiction to make an order for the payment to a wife of interim alimony pending the disposition of her appeal from a decree nisi for divorce. Such an order should not be made where the wife has been found guilty of adultery, unless special circumstances are shown to exist in her favour. The better practice is for the wife to apply to the trial judge for the continuance of alimony pending the appeal; but if her application is made to the Ct. of Appeal it has the same power as the trial judge & the same right to exercise its discretion.—MILTON v. MILTON & COOK, [1930] 3 W. sa. Discretion of Court of Appeal.]—In an undefended divorce action leave to adduce affidavit evidence of adultery may properly be granted when special circumstances are shown to exist, as when the essential witnesses reside outside the province & it is shown that pltf. is unable because of lack of means to pay the expenses of a commission or of obtaining their attendance at the trial. On an application for such leave each judge in Chambers has to exercise his own discretion, having regard to the relevant facts of the case before him. Where he declines to exercise that discretion, or acts on a wrong principle or on wrong grounds when exercising it, the Ct. of Appeal must bring its own discretion to bear on the question whether the leave should be granted or refused.—WOOD v. WOOD, [1931] 2 W. Proctor, not being a party to the suit as originally constituted, cannot resort to the Ct. of Appeal, but if he comes to the conclusion that the decree has been obtained contrary to the justice of the case he must intervene & show cause against making the decree absolute. Resp. in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, who does not resist such a finding, cannot afterwards dispute the validity of the marriage of the parties. A subsequent suit for nullity of the marriage, in which bigamy is alleged to have been in fact committed by one of the parties to it, does not, after this finding of its validity as between them, afford any exception to the general rule of estoppel.—WOODLAND v. WOODLAND (OTHERWISE BELIN OR BARTON), [1928] P. 169; 97 L. 4909a. —— To secure wife's costs—Undefended petition by wife—Subsequent defence on admission of adultery by wife.]—On the abandonment by a wife of her prayer in a petition for the dissolution of her marriage, which petition was originally undefended, her husband, by leave, filed an answer alleging adultery admitted by his wife as her reason for having her prayer struck out. The registrar refused to make an order for securing the wife's costs on the fact of the wife's admission being brought to his notice. At the trial of the suit on the husband's prayer the ct. granted the husband a decree nisi & made an order for the wife's costs " in the ordinary way." A difficulty arose in the interpretation of the order, inasmuch as the usual order for security had not been made :— Held : though solrs. acting for a wife must avail themselves of the rules in the divorce jurisdiction for securing payment of the wife's costs from the husband, in this case the husband, until his wife's admission of adultery, had desired the success of his wife's suit, & therefore the ct. directed, in the exercise of its discretion, that the husband must pay his wife's costs properly incurred up to service of the summons for leave to file an answer.—GODDARD v. GODDARD (1929), 140 L. Although the facts are such as might warrant the exercise of the discretion, if disclosed as material facts at the hearing of the suit, their suppression then & the denial of them when set up in subsequent proceedings as cause for not making the decree absolute render the exercise of the discretion in such a case mischievous as an encouragement to perjury.—STUART v. STUART & HOLDEN, [1930] P. 77; 99 L. 5360a. On lunacy of husband.]—The jurisdiction in lunacy to appoint a receiver of the estate of a person of unsound mind does not exclude other cts. from enforcing lawful claims against his estate, including claims arising in the Divorce Div. Although the primary duty of those concerned with the care of a person of unsound mind is to apply his estate for his maintenance, & there is power under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171, to direct a settlement of the property of a lunatic or defective, the Divorce Div. is not thereby discharged from the duty of providing for the permanent maintenance of a petitioning wife out of the estate of a husband of unsound mind. When by an order in lunacy a provision has been directed for the wife during the lifetime of the husband & pending his incapacity, & the Divorce Div. approve the quantum of the order, the proper course, on application in that Div. by the wife for permanent maintenance, is to order it to be secured to her at the rate ordered in lunacy so far as the husband's means permit & without prejudice to any further order in lunacy, the security not to be enforceable pending subsistence of the order in lunacy, & should it subsist during the life of the husband not to be enforceable till his death.—C. If a wife obtains a decree in an undefended case it does not necessarily follow that her conduct, for example, in the matter of delay, was approved by the trial judge. Even if the judge disapproved of the delay, he still had a discretion to pronounce the decree. In an undefended case, therefore, on allegations of unreasonable delay being made in the maintenance proceedings, sufficient evidence must be received

A petitioner having obtained a decree absolute for nullity of marriage presented a petition under sect. 190 of the 1925 Act for permanent maintenance. Resp. in his reply made serious allegations of misconduct both before & after the marriage against petitioner. Petitioner filed an affidavit in which she dealt with the allegations of misconduct. The registrar refused leave to resp. to file a rejoinder & directed the allegations in the answer as to misconduct to be struck out. On appeal the judge confirmed the registrar's order & directed petitioner's affidavit in reply to be struck out. On appeal:—Held: the words "conduct of the parties" in sect. 190 (1) referred to the conduct of the parties both before & after the marriage, & in exercising its discretion under the sect. it was essential that the ct. should have before it all the relevant evidence of the conduct of the parties both before & after the marriage. Therefore, the order directing that the paragraphs in resp.'s answer containing the allegations of misconduct & the affidavit of petitioner in reply should be struck out must be set aside & leave would be given to resp. to file a rejoinder.—RESTALL v. RESTALL, [1930] P. 189; 99 L. 5382a. —— ——.]—Although the considerations which applied in the Ecclesiastical Cts. to awards of alimony must have due weight in determining the proper award of maintenance to a wife after a decree of divorce, the assumption of a fixed arithmetical rule & an indispensable process of applying that rule is erroneous, & disregards the duty imposed on the ct. by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1) & (2). Where the husband's whole income has been expended on the requirements of the matrimonial home, a third of his means may well be required for the wife's maintenance; but where, beyond everything called for by such requirements, the husband possesses an ample fortune, the amount of his income affords no definite guidance as to the sum required to supply his sometime wife with the necessaries, comforts, & advantages incidental to her station in life.

Where the husband's gross income was £25,337 a year, derived mainly from his interest in a business concern, the registrar by his report submitted that the husband should be ordered to secure to his wife, who had divorced him, by way of permanent maintenance for her life, the annual sum of £3,500 less tax, & to pay to his wife during their joint lives the further annual sum of £500 less tax. The ct. confirmed the report.—GILBEY v. GILBEY, [1927] P. 197; 96 L. J. P. 55; 137 L. T. 31; 43 T. L. R. 283.

5382b. —— ——.]—Resp., a husband, who had been divorced, re-married, & by an antenuptial settlement settled property, which included the matrimonial home & the chattels therein & the major part of his capital, on his wife in futuro. Petitioner, his former wife, had obtained an order for permanent maintenance of £400 a year & of £100 for her son, when resp.'s annual income was about £1,500. Subsequently, when resp.'s income, not taking into account the settlement, was about £4,500, petitioner applied for an increase in the amount of the order, on the ground that resp.'s means had increased. The registrar increased the order for permanent maintenance from £400 to £1,200 a year, less income tax, & from £100 to £150 a year, free of income tax, for the son:—Held: (1) resp.'s means had increased, as by sharing the advantages of the matrimonial home as of right settled upon his wife, a larger portion of the £1,500 unsettled income was left free to be dealt with by him & by the ct.; (2) the order could not be made disregarding the settlement, which subsisted; (3) an order for permanent maintenance, or an increase of it, should not be based on the income of the husband during a year of exceptional prosperity; (4) an order for permanent maintenance in such a case should not be based on the old practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. in the case of a decree a mensâ et thoro, of granting to the wife one-third of the husband's available means, as the conditions arising from the two decrees were not the same, petitioner & resp. being divorced, & free to marry again; (5) in view of the increased means of the husband, having regard to the wife's fortune, the ability of the husband & the conduct of the parties, the order for permanent maintenance for the former wife should be increased from £400 a year to £750 a year, less income tax.—N. v. N. 5405b. —— —— ——.]—Maintenance for a wife which the ct. may order on the dissolution of a marriage & the jurisdiction to review an order for it are matters of discretion conferred on the ct. by statute & not standardised by the rules applying in cases of judicial separation. The jurisdiction is now embodied in the Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1), (2), & if an order for maintenance is limited "until further order," the ct. in reviewing it should regard all the present circumstances of the case as if they had existed at the date of the original order. It may consider not only the descending income of the husband but the ascending scale of that of the wife. Even in the absence of the limitation relevant facts as to the fortune of the wife may have weight in relation to the discretionary power to review, if occasion arises under sect. 190 (2), by reason of the inability of the husband to pay. The ct. does not derive its power to review an order for maintenance from sect. 196. The Act is a consolidating, not an amending one, & the latter sect., having regard to its terminology, is limited in its operation to cases of restitution of conjugal rights.—TURK v. TURK, DUFTY v. DUFTY, [1931] P. 116; 100 L. 5410a. —— —— No provision for variation in original order.]—There is no practice whereby a consent order for maintenance, not containing words of release such as "liberty to apply," or "until further order," cannot be varied by petition for increase or decrease, provided that the order could have been made under the statutory powers of the ct. otherwise than by consent of the parties. Where after a lapse of eight years a husband resp. petitioned for a reduction in a consent order for maintenance, expressed to be made "unconditionally," the registrar refused to make an inquiry on the ground that he had no power to vary such an order, as it contained no such words of release. On appeal the judge referred back the petition for investigation.—SMITH v. SMITH (1931), 145 L. T. 23; 47 T. L. R. 368; 75 Sol. Jo. 331.

If the judge on the hearing of the appeal comes to the conclusion that the direction of the registrar was wrong & ought not to have been made, he can recall the order issued in pursuance of such direction & make such order as in his judgment he deems just. The judge on the hearing of the appeal should, of course, give due weight to the decision of the registrar, & should be slow to disturb that decision on a mere question of quantum, unless it clearly appears from the proved facts that it would be wrong to allow the amount ordered by the registrar to be secured or paid to stand.—STIBBE v. STIBBE, [1931] P. 105; 100 L. 5452a. ——— By consent.]—The ct. has no statutory power to order the payment of a lump sum by a resp. husband after a decree absolute for dissolution of the marriage by way of permanent maintenance for the wife petitioner. Where, however, both parties consent to such a course the ct. may make a consent order for the payment of the lump sum agreed upon.—JENKINS v. JENKINS (1930), 99 L. J. P. 63 ; 142 L. T. 656 ; 46 T. L. R. 309 ; 74 Sol. Jo. 170.

5452b. ——— ———.]—Although the ct. has no power under Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190, to order a lump sum to be paid to a wife by way of permanent maintenance, if the parties consent to such a course the ct. will make a consent order carrying out an agreement for the payment of a lump sum, or lump sums, & will include in the order a condition that no further proceedings be taken without the leave of a judge.—OLDING v. OLDING (1930), 99 L. J. P. 128 ; 143 L. T. 310 ; 46 T. L. R. 539 ; 74 Sol. Jo. 467.

5459a. ——— No present order for maintenance justified—Future justification probable.]—(1) Where the ct. cannot in the circumstances prevailing at the time of the application make an order for the maintenance of the wife under Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190, but is of opinion that in the event of a change in the circumstances such an order might properly be made at some time thereafter, the proper course is to make an order on the husband to pay a nominal monthly or weekly sum so as to keep alive the jurisdiction conferred upon the ct. by proviso (b) to sect. 190 (2), & thus enable it under that proviso to increase the periodical payments should the occasion for such an increase arise.

(2) The insertion of the words " liberty to apply " in an order for maintenance does not enable the wife at a subsequent date to make an effective application for increased maintenance should her husband's income increase, and those words, therefore, should not form part of the order.—STEPHEN v. STEPHEN, [1931] P. 197 ; 100 L. 5469a. ——— What court should consider.]—(1) The ct. has no power to reserve liberty to apply for security in making an order for maintenance under Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1), (2), on a decree for divorce. The insertion of such a provision would permit the conversion at a subsequent date of an order to pay maintenance into an order to secure it, & this is ultra vires of the statute.

(2) In considering the question of security which must thus be ordered in the first instance, if at all, the interests of both spouses are to be considered. The maintenance ordered will be secured as far as circumstances permit, but in cases where the nature of the means of the husband renders it impossible to secure the whole maintenance proper to be ordered, the question arises whether it is in the interest of the wife to order security of a part, as compulsion of the husband to realise or transfer assets in order to give security under sub-sect. (1) may hamper him in earning the income out of which he may be ordered to make payments under sub-sect. (2). The wife has no greater inherent right to security than to an order for payment simply. Her right is to present maintenance, & if the property of the husband produces no present income or if an order for security would for any reason, such as the husband's absence from the jurisdiction, be unenforceable, it is more in the wife's interest that an order for payments should be made than an order to secure.

(2) There is no fixed rule that the ct. will allow to the wife one-third of the husband's disposable income as permanent maintenance. It is no more than a rough working rule & does not impose an absolute limit. Further, in estimating the amount of the allowance the ct. must not focus its attention only on the disposable income of the husband in the year preceding the making of the order, but must have regard to his earnings in previous years & to his probable earnings in the future.

(3) In making an order for permanent maintenance the ct. is given a wide discretion by Supreme Ct. of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1), with which the Ct. of Appeal will not readily interfere unless it is satisfied that the ct. below has proceeded on some wrong principle.—SHERWOOD v. SHERWOOD, [1929] P. 120; 98 L. That jurisdiction can be invoked against a person not domiciled in England, & in respect of property beyond the jurisdiction, only subject to the principle that English cts. will not infringe the authority of foreign tribunals in their domestic affairs, or adjudicate with regard to property when their judgment will be ineffective. Apart from jurisdiction over property, the exercise of jurisdiction in personam in such a case depends upon the question whether the party to be affected by it is within the reach of the compulsory process of the ct.

After decree absolute she executed a deed poll, declaring that her income under the settlement should be for her separate use without power of anticipation. Shortly after the execution of the deed poll she intermarried with co-resp. in the suit:—Held: the settlement was a "post-nuptial settlement" made on the parties whose marriage was "the subject of the decree," & was therefore within the definition in Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 192, of the class of instrument with which the ct. had power to deal under the sect.—MELVILL v. MELVILL & WOODWARD, [1930] P. 159; 99 L. 5625b. —— ——.]—(1) In deciding whether a settlement comes within the meaning of "post-nuptial settlement" on the parties within the purview of Jud. Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 192, the material question is whether the settlement in question is upon the husband in the character of husband or on the wife in the character of wife or upon both in the character of husband & wife. Mere form is immaterial. The settlement may be one in the strictest sense or it may be, for instance, a covenant to pay by one spouse to the other or by a third party to a spouse. What is material is that the settlement should provide financial benefit for one or other or both of the spouses as spouses & with reference to their married state. 5680b. —— Power in favour of after-taken spouse & issue of second marriage—Acceleration—Notwithstanding benefit to guilty party.]—The operation of a power in a marriage settlement for the resettlement of the trust funds of a surviving party to the marriage upon his or her after-taken spouse & the children or issue of his or her subsequent marriage may be accelerated in the event of the dissolution of the marriage so far as to become effective without actual survivorship & during the lifetime of the other party. By varying the settlement accordingly the ct. may effect this acceleration for the benefit not merely of an innocent party but also for that of a guilty spouse on the basis (inter alia) of the interest of the children of the dissolved marriage, in the opinion of the ct. being adequately protected by the terms & conditions of the acceleration.—ALSTON v. ALSTON, [1929] P. 311; 98 L. 5995a. —— Restraint from receipt of dividends—Until payment of costs.]—A wife was granted a decree of judicial separation on the ground of her husband's cruelty in an undefended petition, & an order for permanent alimony for herself & her four children was made at the rate of £950 a year. The husband had capital of at least £40,000. When each instalment of alimony became due he adopted an attitude of passive resistance, & on three successive occasions she secured payment only by execution on her husband's household effects, & on one occasion she secured a charging order on certain of his securities for the payment of a monthly instalment accrued due. Therefore she applied for an order to secure, under the control of the ct. or of a receiver, sufficient of the husband's capital from which payments of the monthly instalments could be made to her as they became due. The judge held that owing to a defect in the matrimonial law the ct. had no power to grant the relief asked for. The summons must be dismissed, but the husband would pay the wife's costs :—Held : under the law as it now stood, the husband could not be treated as in contempt with regard to future payments, but as he was in contempt as regards past payments & had expressed an intention to disobey the order for alimony as regards future payments, the ct., while not overstepping the proper limitations with regard to future payments, would make an order restraining him from receiving any dividends in respect of investments to the extent of £395 16*s.* 8*d.*, being the amount of the arrears of alimony & costs, directing that the solr. of resp. should receive the dividends & pay the same to the petitioner, & would give liberty to apply in chambers in regard to future arrears.—BURROWES v. BURROWES (1929), 141 L. 6128a. —— Effect of Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Act, 1925 (c. 51), s. 1 (1)—Neglect of marital duties by wife.]—On this appeal from justices the ct. explained the true effect of the change made by Summary Jurisdiction (Separation and Maintenance) Act, 1925 (c. 51), s. 1 (1), in sect. 4 of the principal Act of 1895, as not providing that a married woman was entitled to maintenance even though she did not carry out her marital obligations.

The marriage took place twenty-two years ago, & there were a number of children. In Jan. 1929 the parties separated. Soon afterwards the wife summoned the husband for desertion, & her summons was dismissed. Later, solrs. for the wife wrote to the husband that she was willing to live with him again & make a fresh start. On Mar. 27, 1931, she summoned him for alleged desertion & wilful neglect to maintain her. At the hearing on Apr. 2, the justices heard the complaint on the basis that it was one for wilful neglect, & dismissed the summons. The wife appealed. The husband was not represented:—Held: the legislature had not provided that a married woman, who had not committed adultery, might in any circumstances whatever be entitled to an order for maintenance. The law still took account of the mutual character of marital obligations. The justices had thought that the wife had renounced her wifely duties, but the summons would be sent back to them so that they might state their precise reasons for their conclusion.—CLARK v. CLARK (1931), 145 L. 6128b. Effect of separation deed.]—This was an appeal from the decision of a metropolitan police magistrate dismissing a summons by a wife on the ground of wilful neglect to provide reasonable maintenance. She had entered into a common form separation deed which provided for the payment to her by the husband of £2 a week. The payments fell into arrears, & a judgment against the husband went unsatisfied. In the following year the wife entered into a deed by which in return for the payment of a lump sum to start her in a new life in Canada, both spouses covenanted (inter alia) not to petition for judicial separation, restitution of conjugal rights, or divorce, & the wife covenanted in all respects to support & maintain herself & indemnify her husband against all liabilities into which she might enter.

The wife was paid the money & went to Canada. She had a breakdown & returned to England. She summoned her husband for wilful neglect, & said that he had become substantially better off. The summons was dismissed. She appealed:—Held: there was no evidence to show whether or not the magistrate had considered himself bound by the effect of the separation deeds to dismiss the summons. Whether the later deed operated as a final release of the husband was still an open question. It had never been decided what was the effect on the magistrate's matrimonial jurisdiction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts of a wife's agreement to waive maintenance. Order rescinded, so that the matter might be reconsidered by the magistrate.—BURTON v. BURTON (1929), 142 L. T. 165; 94 J. P. 32; 29 Cox, C. C. 26, D. C.

6133a. Jurisdiction to make—On summons for maintenance.]—Where a wife under Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925, merely asks in her summons for an order for maintenance on the ground of wilful neglect it is improper for justices to decree a separation or make an order for the custody of children.—SMITH v. SMITH (1930), 144 L. Subsequently she wrote suggesting reconciliation, but the letters were unanswered. The husband contributed nothing to her support except a sum of 10*s.* & her tram fare to Adelaide, &, almost eight months after she had left him definitely refused to take her back or support her. On these facts the magistrate granted relief for neglect to maintain, but refused to grant relief for desertion on the ground mentioned above:—Held: desertion should have been found by the special magistrate.—MORGAN v. MORGAN, [1927] S. a week, & the wife, in addition to living rent free as a caretaker of flats, was earning from 10*s.* to 15*s.* a week as a waitress. The magistrates made an order that the husband should pay his wife £1 a week, & the order included a non-cohabitation clause. The husband appealed:—Held: the non-cohabitation clause was unwarrantable & must be struck out. The magistrates were well warranted in their conclusion that there was wilful neglect to maintain. The conventional standard of maintenance in the Divorce Ct., one-third of the joint income, was not applicable to wage-earners. The allowance was reduced to 10*s.* a week.—JONES (A.) v. JONES (D. An application was subsequently made by her to a ct. of summary jurisdiction in England under the above Act to confirm that order as against her husband who was resident in England. Upon that application no evidence was submitted to the justices on behalf of the husband. The justices confirmed the order with the modification or variation of substituting £2 10*s.* per week, i.e., £2 for the married woman & 10*s.* for the child, in lieu of £5 10*s.* per week, they being of opinion that they were bound to reduce the amount payable under the order to the limit prescribed for such orders made by a ct. of summary jurisdiction under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39):—Held: (1) the justices had power to state a case for the opinion of the K. B. Div. on the question whether they were right in so deciding; (2) they were wrong in holding that in dealing with an order under the above Act of 1920 they were bound to limit the amount payable to the sum prescribed for orders made under the above Act of 1895.

g 1. —— Under Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1923.]—A maintenance order was made against one C. in England in 1908. A copy of the order, which was certified as a true copy by a person described as "clerk to the justices," was registered in N.S.W. in 1929. Proceedings were taken in this State against C. in Aug. 1930, to enforce payment of arrears of maintenance, the greater portion of which was referable to the period prior to registration. A sworn complaint by the original English complainant contained the only evidence of non-compliance prior to the date of registration. Proof of the identity of C. with the person against whom the original order was made consisted in a similarity of names, evidence that C. had been concerned in maintenance proceedings in England, & evidence as to the nature of his occupation & his request as to service of the process. An order was made that C. be imprisoned until the arrears of maintenance had been paid, & against that order a rule nisi for prohibition had been granted:—Held: the sworn complaint was not a deposition within Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1923, s. 11, & could not be accepted as evidence of non-compliance with the order prior to the date of its registration in N.S.W.—Re MCMASTER; Ex p. CORMACK (1929), 47 N. 6250e. —— —— —— ——.]—In this appeal from an order by magistrates the ct. took the point that, apart from the merits, the husband was out of time in applying for the revocation of a maintenance order made in Sept. 1904. The order was for 6*s*. The husband complained by summons towards the end of 1930 that his wife, now aged 60 years, had committed adultery with a man up to Mar. 1930, & claimed that the order be discharged. The wife's defence was a denial of adultery with the man for whom she had acted as housekeeper till his death in 1929. The justices found that adultery had been committed, & revoked the order on Jan. 5, 1931. The wife appealed on the ground that it was contrary to the weight of evidence :—Held : on the evidence before the justices the wife ought not to have been found guilty of adultery, but apart from that the husband was out of time in applying for the discharge of the order of 1904. The ground of the husband's complaint occurred more than six months before he took proceedings, & therefore the justices had no jurisdiction to hear the summons.—MELLARS v. MELLARS (1931), 145 L. The order did not contain a non-cohabitation clause. Subsequently the husband took out a summons asking that the order for maintenance should be discharged, on the ground that the wife had committed adultery. The husband gave evidence that, since the date of the maintenance order, his wife had given birth to a child, & of non-access on his part. This was the only evidence of adultery. The justices found that the wife had committed adultery, & discharged the weekly order for maintenance :—Held : (1) the evidence of the husband of non-access to bastardise his child was not admissible, & the justices' order discharging the maintenance order must be set aside ; (2) in proceedings under Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925, if there is a charge of adultery, the act or acts of adultery should be specified with particulars, if possible, of the place where, the time when, & the name of the person with whom it is alleged the adultery has been committed.—BOSTON v. BOSTON (1928), 138 L. INCOME TAX.

Part I.—Administration.

1a. —— Duty to decide question of trading—Finding that sum constitutes "trading receipts" insufficient.]—Where in any appeal under the income tax Acts the question is material whether any person or firm was or was not trading during a given period, it is the duty of the Special Commissioners to find in terms whether such person was or was not trading, & a finding that the sum on which an assessment has been made constituted "trading receipts" is not sufficient. The term "trading receipts" is wide enough to cover receipts of payments after trading has ceased as the result of contracts entered into previously, but such receipts would not be assessable to income-tax. A firm dissolved partnership at a certain date; thereafter nothing was done except to take delivery of stock previously bought, & apply it in fulfilment of orders previously booked: —Held: there was no evidence of the firm having continued to trade after the date of dissolution, & that the profits of these contracts were not assessable under Sched. D. —HILLERNS & FOWLER v. MURRAY (1931), 47 T. L. R. 553.

SECT. 1.—APPLICATION OF SCHEDULE (Vol. XXVIII., p. 6).

11a. General rule.]—(1) Income tax under Schedule A., as under every other Schedule, is assessed on profits & gains, & the test in regard to liability to tax under Schedule A. is not whether the person taxed had an independent ownership of the property, but whether he had profits & gains in respect of his occupation.

(2) A person who by a will is given a right of residence in a house rent free so long as he wishes, & who is in residence during the year of assessment, is assessable to income tax for that year under Schedule A. in respect of his beneficial occupation; & the amount at which he is assessed must be included in a return of the total income for super tax purposes in the following year.

(3) When the right of residence is given to two persons jointly, it is for the Special Comrs. to fix the proportion of the total assessment applicable to each person, &, when such a finding has been made, it should be accepted in any higher ct.—SHANKS v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] 1 K. 25 ii. —— —— ——.]—The Finance Acts contain in each year, except in years of revaluation, a provision that the annual value of property which has been adopted for the purpose of income tax under Sched. A. for one year shall be taken as the annual value of that property for the same purpose for the next year:—Held: this provision does not preclude an increase in the assessment or an additional first assessment under Income Tax Act, 1918, s. 125, where the original assessment is found not to have included the whole annual value.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. DICKSON, [1928] S. 50b. —— Whether gross value in Valuation List conclusive as to rent.]—Applts. were the owners of premises within the Metropolitan area with regard to which it was admitted that for the years to which the appeal related, 1924–25 & 1925–26, the actual rentals received exceeded the gross Sched. A assessments by more than the authorised reduction mentioned in 1918 Act, rule 7 (2), No. V, Sched. A. They contended, however, that they were entitled to a repairs allowance under rule 7 (1), because (a) in view of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (c. 67), no alterations merely in value of the hereditaments during the quinquennial period could during that period be taken into consideration for the purposes of rule 7 (2) (the repairs allowance had been granted for earlier years within the same quinquennial period—1921–22 to 1923–24); & (b) the gross value in the Valuation List was for all Income Tax purposes conclusive of the annual value & must be treated as the rent of the premises within rule 7 (2). The General Comrs. dismissed an appeal on these grounds against the assessments for the years 1924–25 & 1925–26. The co. appealed :—Held : applts. were not entitled to the allowance.—METROPOLITAN PROPERTIES CO., LTD. v. DUNHAM (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 740.

No. III., Rule 3, upon the balance of these dues, it appealed :—Held : the balance was not a profit arising out of lands or heritages within the meaning of Sched. A house & grounds were bought by the society for use as a convalescent home by its members. The purchase price was paid partly by the society & partly by contributions by its members. 62a. —— School carried on by company paying dividends.]—The Girls' Public Day School Trust was incorporated as a co., but its memorandum & articles were framed with the object of establishing schools that would give a good education at the lowest possible cost. The Trust School was open to the general public, a large proportion of its pupils were scholars from the public elementary schools, & a great proportion of its governing body were nominated by the local education authority, &, further, the school was largely maintained by public moneys, & in the view of the Board of Education the school satisfied the regulation which prohibited any Parliamentary grant to a school conducted for private profit. In accordance with the Board's wishes it was provided that the co. should be converted into an educational trust at the end of a period & exceeding fifty years from 1905, & that in the event of a winding up before the end of that period the surplus assets of the co. should be subject to an educational trust & should not be distributed among the shareholders; that during the period above-mentioned the dividend paid on share capital should not exceed a sum equal to 4 per cent. a year. The Comrs. found on the facts the Trust School was a public school, & as such entitled to the benefit of the exemption from income tax provided for by 1918 Act, Sched. A, No. VI., r. 1 (c):—Held: there was ample evidence on which the Comrs. could find that this school was a public school, & the possibility of profit arising to an individual in the course of carrying on a school did not of necessity prevent the school having the character of a public school.

The existence of a perpetual foundation is not by itself conclusive, but only one of the factors to be considered. There is no distinction between money used for a public school raised by debentures at interest, & money raised by preference shares with limited interest. The judgments in Blake v. London Corpn., No. 60, were not intended to lay down a rule that no school from the conduct of which any person could derive pecuniary benefit could in any circumstances be a public school.—Girls' Public Day School Trust v. Ereaut, [1931] A. It owned & occupied a college at which classes were held for instruction in the principles & practice of woollen & worsted cloth manufacture. The produce grown on the land represented only about thirty per cent. of the food required for the cows. Resp. sold his milk to regular customers in the district, & only purchased milk for resale when his own supply was insufficient for his customers' ordinary requirements. He sold his cows when they became dry. The general comrs. held that resp. was not a dealer in milk, & they discharged an assessment made upon him in accordance with 1918 Act, Schedule D., Case III., r. 4:—Held: resp. was a dealer in milk whose land was insufficient for the keep of the cows within the rule, & the further question whether the assessable value afforded no just estimate of the profits was for the comrs. to find, & the case must be remitted to them for that purpose.—HUXHAM v. JOHNSON (1926), 136 L. 93a. —— Exchange transaction.]— Under an agreement made on Mar. 8, 1921, for the supply of marble by a co. to building contractors, the contractors agreed to advance £20,000 of the price, percentage deductions being made from the amount due on each consignment of marble until the advance had been repaid. On Mar. 17, 1921, the £20,000 was paid to the co., & in anticipation of the marble being purchased in Italy, though not till the autumn of 1921, the co. at once arranged for the conversion of the greater part of the £20,000 into lire at one hundred & three to the £, & a lira account was opened. In May, 1921, the lira had appreciated in value, &, as the money was not yet required by the co., their nominee, without the co.'s knowledge or authority, directed the sale of the balance of the lira account, & at seventy-two to the £ the lire realised a profit of £6,707, which was received by the co. The lire were subsequently repurchased for the purposes of the contract for £19,386, which was allowed as a deduction from the co.'s profits for income tax purposes :—Held : in computing the co.'s profits for the purposes of assessment to income tax for the year 1922–23 the £6,707 was not a profit arising out of the contract for the supply of marble, but was merely an appreciation of a temporary investment, & was not assessable to income tax as part of the profits of the co.'s trade.—McKinlay v. Jenkins (H. 96a. Sale of patent rights.]—A syndicate formed to work & develop a group of English & foreign patents carried on business mainly by granting licences to manufacturers at royalties. Certain foreign manufacturers refused to take licences, unless they were also given an option of purchase exercisable within a given period, & the syndicate entered into a contract with an American co. to grant them a licence to use & work the syndicate's American patents, with an option of purchase thereof. The co. having exercised its option of purchase, & paid to the syndicate a sum for the purchase of the American patents out & out, the Special Comrs. decided that profits on the sale of the patents arose in the course of the co.'s business & were chargeable to income tax :—Held : the Special Comrs. had not wrongly directed themselves, & there was ample evidence to support their conclusion of fact.—Ducker v. Rees Roturbo Development Syndicate, Inland Revenue Comrs. v. Rees Roturbo Development Syndicate, [1928] A. machinery. Under the agreements made with these firms, however, in addition to the price paid for the machinery, he was entitled to further payments for grant of "shop rights," i.e. the right of the purchasers to use the machinery & processes in their own mills or within a limited area. Applt. contended that these payments were for the acquisition of an exclusive licence to use the patented processes in a limited area, that they were payment for portions of the patent rights & therefore capital payments in respect of which he was not assessable. The Special Comrs. found that the agreements were primarily for the sale of machinery & that the grant to the purchasers of "shop rights" was consequential on the sale; & therefore that the payments for the "shop rights" must be included with the payments for the machinery in the receipts of applt.'s business:—Held: the Comrs. had decided rightly on the evidence before them.—BRANDWOOD v. BANKER, BRANDWOOD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. Royalties.]—Applt. co. carried on business in the United Kingdom as literary agents, acting on behalf of authors in making arrangements with publishers & others for the publication or disposal of authors' literary productions. The co. remitted to the authors the royalties less the co.'s commission & expenses. The co. was assessed for the year 1925-26 in respect of sums paid under such arrangements to certain authors who were not resident in the United Kingdom. The books concerned were written out of the United Kingdom. The co. appealed to the Special Comrs. The Comrs., in an interim decision, determined that the copyright royalties in question were not profits or gains arising from any trade, profession, or vocation exercised in the United Kingdom ; that they were profits or gains arising from property in the United Kingdom ; & that the non-resident authors were assessable in the name of the co. under rule 5 of the General Rules. At a further hearing the Comrs. held that the assessments should be under Case VI. of Sched. D, & they should be in the amount of the royalties less the agents' commission & incidental expenses, so far as they related to the royalties brought into charge, & not, as contended on behalf of the revenue, without any such deduction. Both parties appealed :—Held : that the royalties were annual profits or gains arising from property in the United Kingdom & so were assessable under Sched. The deduction for deficiencies could not be ascertained until the casks were removed at the conclusion of storage, &, until then, no sum was demandable from customers. The Revenue maintained that, in estimating the co.'s profits & gains for purposes of income tax, the weekly rent charges fell to be treated as profits accruing week by week, &, subject to an allowance being made for the deficiencies as ultimately ascertained, should be brought into account as profits of the year in which they accrued :—Held : the profits from storage contracts were neither earned nor ascertainable until those contracts had been completed, & ought not, therefore, to enter into the computation of the co.'s profits & gains for the purpose of income tax in any year before that in which the contracts were completed.—DAILUAINE-TALISKER DISTILLERIES v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1930] S. 114a. —— "Turning over" cotton mills.]—During the boom in the Lancashire cotton trade in 1919, applt., with other persons, engaged in the operation known locally as "turning over" a cotton mill, i.e. acquiring a controlling interest in the mill, organising its administration & finances, & reselling it to a new co. The operation was successful & applt. joined other syndicates, composed partly of the same persons engaged in "turning over" three other mills. In each case a profit resulted to applt. On Mar. 24, 1923, the additional comrs. for the division in which applt. resided signed the book containing an estimated assessment upon applt. to income tax under Schedule D. for the year 1919–20. The book was not delivered to the general comrs. until Apr. 18, 1923; notice was given to applt. on May 5, 1923, & the assessment was signed by the general comrs. on Sept. 5, 1923:—Held: (1) though each adventure of "turning over" a mill, taken singly, was not a trade, but a capital transaction, yet the succession of such adventures, in each of which applt. took part, might constitute the carrying on of a trade, & the Special Comrs., on an appeal against the assessment, were not estopped by their previous decisions from reconsidering the whole of the facts, & finding that applt. was carrying on a trade, on the profits of which he was liable to income tax; (2) the assessment was made in time, having been made when it was signed by the additional comrs. within the three years allowed by 1918 Act, s. 125 (2), & the subsequent steps need not be within that time.—PICKFORD v. QUIRKE, PICKFORD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 114b. —— Isolated transaction—Assignment of option.]—Resp. joined with three other persons in obtaining an option to purchase a rubber estate in the Malay Peninsula. As the estate was too small for resale to a co. for public flotation, they acquired a further option to purchase an adjoining estate. Ultimately the two estates were sold to a co. at a profit. Resp. having been assessed to income tax on a sum representing his net share of the profit appealed. The Comrs. found that resp. acquired the property or interest in the property with the sole object of turning it over again at a profit, & that he at no time had any intention of holding the property or interest as an investment, & confirmed the assessment. They subsequently found, on the case being referred back to them, that the transaction was not a concern in the nature of trade:—Held: having regard to the finding of the Comrs. that the transaction was not a concern in the nature of trade, & to its being an isolated transaction of purchase & resale of property, the profits arising therefrom were not in the nature of income but were an accretion to 116a. Company letting out offices — Rents & profits from contracts for services.]—A co. formed to acquire, manage, & deal with a block of buildings let out the rooms as unfurnished offices to tenants. The co. provided a staff to operate the lifts & to act as porters & watch & protect the building. The co. also provided certain services, such as heating & cleaning, for the tenants if required, at an additional charge. For each of the four years ending April 5, 1925, 1926, 1927, & 1928 the co. was assessed under Sched. A to income tax on the gross value of the building as appearing in the valuation list under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (c. 67). The co. admitted its liability to be assessed in respect of its profits from the services supplied to the tenants under Sched. D, but the Crown claimed in making the assessments under Sched. D to include the rents of the offices as part of the receipts of the trade, making allowance for tax assessed under Sched. 131a. —— —— —— ——.]—Applt. was employed by a British co. as general manager of their sugar estates in Demerara where he lived & where his salary was wholly earned & paid. He was in England on leave from June to Sept. 1918, & during that time the co., at his request, placed to the credit of his banking account in England £525, being an advance on account of salary falling due before Apr. 5, 1919 & an assessment to income tax was made upon him for the year 1918–19 in respect of this sum under Schedule D., Case V. His wife had been for several years, & was throughout the year 1918–19, the owner of a house in Kent, towards the upkeep of which he contributed out of other income arising in England, but since Sept. 1917, she had been mainly living with him in Demerara, the house being left unoccupied. During his stay in England in 1918, applt. lived for the most part in hotels & in fact spent only one night at the house. The Special Comrs. having decided that applt. was resident in the United Kingdom during the year ending Apr. 5, 1919, & that he had been rightly assessed to income tax in respect of the above sum as having been received in the United Kingdom during that year from an employment abroad:—Held: inasmuch as applt.'s salary was payable in Demerara, the sum credited to him in the United Kingdom must be regarded as remitted to him from abroad & as constituting income from a foreign possession chargeable under Schedule D., Case V.—FLEMING v. WILKINSON (1925), 10 Tax Cas. 416, C. The manufacturers supplied advertising material but all other expenses were met by applt. out of his remuneration, which consisted of commission only, based on the net cash received by the manufacturer in respect of all goods shipped to the relative agency district, with a small guaranteed minimum. The whole of the commission was paid into an account in a bank in England. Between Nov. 16, 1916, & June 16, 1923, applt. was in the United Kingdom for the following periods only: Apr. 14, 1919, to Aug. 10, 1919; July 26, 1920, to Nov. 22, 1920; Dec. 20, 1921, to Apr. 12, 1922. He returned to England again on June 16, 1923. When in England applt. visited the manufacturers with whom he was under agreement, to discuss business matters & to receive instructions. Three railway cos. were incorporated in England. A. co. owned a line of railway situate wholly in Portuguese East Africa. B. co. owned a line situate wholly in Portuguese East Africa with the exception of six miles situate in Southern Rhodesia, & C. co. owned a line situate wholly in Southern Rhodesia. C. co. had its head office & general control in England, but also had offices in Buluwayo, where a general manager & staff conducted & managed the line. C. co. worked the lines of A. co. & B. co. as one with its own, & the three cos. shared the profits & losses of the joint venture upon a specified basis :—Held : A. co. & B. co. were in partnership with C. co., & the partnership business was carried on within Southern Rhodesian territory by the latter co. within Southern Rhodesia Income Tax Ordinance 20 of 1915.—RHODESIA RYS. v. COMR. Apr. 5, 1913–1916 of the English co. as agents for the Danish co.:—Held: on the principle of Erichsen v. Last, No. 168, the Danish co. exercised a trade in the United Kingdom to the extent to which goods were taken on board their ships at Hull for carriage elsewhere, & this trade was carried on by the British co. as their regular agents. Therefore, the Danish co. were assessable to income tax in the name of the British co. for the three years ended Apr. 5, 1915, under 1842 Act, s. 41, in respect of the profits arising from such trade, so far as regards freights collected by the British co. in respect of such goods, & for the year ended Apr. 5, 1916, under 1842 Act, s. 41, as amended by Finance (No. 2) Act, 1915 (c. 89), s. 31, in respect of all the profits arising from such trade, whether the freights were collected by the British co. or not.

(3) Two Dutch shipping companies owned four steamships known as the Batavier Line which traded regularly between Rotterdam & London. A Dutch firm, W. & Co., were the directors & had the management & control of both companies. & were also the shipping agents of both companies. By an agreement in 1899 made between the Dutch firm & one of the companies the firm were authorised to appoint sub-agents, where they deemed it necessary. In 1904, & again in 1916, the Dutch firm appointed applts. sole agents in London of the Batavier Line & thereafter applts. did all that was required to be done in connection with the ships of the Batavier Line in London. Assessments to income tax having been made on applts. as agents of the Dutch companies in respect of the profits of their business of shipowners:—Held: the Dutch companies were exercising a trade in the United Kingdom, even assuming that the Dutch firm, in appointing applts. as agents, acted as shipping agents & not as directors, they nevertheless constituted applts. direct agents of the two Dutch companies in London.—TARN v. SCANLAN, NIELSEN, ANDERSEN & CO. v. COLLINS, MULLER (W. There was no written agreement defining his position. The business was carried on in two ways: (a) "C.i.f. business." An offer to buy bacon or hams at prices stated by the bidder was received by applt. & cabled to the co. If the co. accepted it they cabled to applt. accordingly who notified the bidder, usually first by telephone & later in writing. The written acceptance sent to the bidder represented the transaction as a purchase by applt. for the bidder from the co. Applt. received neither the goods nor documents relating to them nor did he collect any moneys. He was paid a commission on all orders originating in his "territory." (b) "Consignment business."

PART V. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

ss. Realisation of wool by Imperial Government—Whether profits earned in Victoria.]—Pursuant to an agreement between the Imperial & Commonwealth Governments, resp. co. was incorporated in 1920 in Victoria, with a head office at Melbourne, for the purpose of selling the undisposed of surplus of wool acquired for the war, & distributing the proceeds. The Commonwealth Govt. transferred to the co. its undivided half of the Australian wool & in cash its share of profits already realised, in consideration of the issue of priority wool certificates & fully-paid shares to its nominees, the wool suppliers. The co. also agreed with the Imperial Govt. to sell on its behalf for a commission all the rest of the wool, whether Australian or not. The wool was all sold during the years 1921 to 1924; the co. had no other dealings in wool. The contracts of sale were made, & deliveries & payments thereunder took place, outside Australia. The proceeds of the half share of the Australian wool largely exceeded the sum at which it had been taken into the books of the co. The priority wool certificates were redeemed, & the whole of the capital credited as paid on the shares was paid off under successive schemes sanctioned by the ct.; there remained a large surplus in the hands of the liquidator of the co. Assessments were made upon the co. under the Income Tax Act, 1915, of Victoria, in respect of proportions of the surplus proceeds of sale & of the commission earned. The co. raised objections thereto, & a special case was stated:—Held: (1) the surplus resulted merely from the realisation of capital assets, & therefore no part of it was income chargeable to tax under sect. 35 of the Act; (2) no part of the surplus, or of the commission, was a profit "earned in or derived in or from Victoria" so as to be chargeable to tax under that sect.—TAXES COMR. v. BRITISH AUSTRALIAN WOOL REALIZATION ASSOCN., LTD., [1931] A. sb. —— Whether profits earned in Queensland.]—As the general scheme of the Queensland Income Tax Act of 1924 bases liability to tax thereunder upon the source of the income, not the residence of the taxpayer, being in Queensland, & as the power of a legislature to tax property, whether real or personal, is limited territorially, sect. 10 (2) of the Act, which purports to tax profits arising from the sale of "any personal property whatsoever," applies only to personal property in Queensland; so, too, para. (ii) (b), which was added to sect. 10 (2) by an amending Act of 1926, & purports to tax money received from a co. in respect of shares issued in circumstances stated in para. (ii) (a), cannot be construed as referring to a co. which does not carry on business, or possess assets, or derive its profits from a source in Queensland. Consequently, a wool grower resident in Queensland is not liable to income tax under sect. 10 (2) of the above Act in respect of sums received by him as a shareholder in the British Australian Wool Realization Association, Ltd. Further, the excess of the sums so received over the market value of the shares when issued cannot be treated as an addition to the profits of the shareholder's business, because income tax having been paid by him upon the shares when issued they became property with its own incidence, if any, to tax.—TAXES COMR. v. UNION TRUSTEE CO. Consignments were sent by the co. to applt. to be sold on its behalf. They were sold by auction. The bills of lading were made out to applt. 204f. Option to be assessed otherwise than on basis of preceding year—Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 29 (3)—Necessity for receipt of profits in period preceding three years anterior to year of assessment.]—A co. took over a business as a going concern as from Apr. 3, 1925, & was assessed for the years 1925–26 & 1926–27 by reference to the average profits of preceding years as having succeeded to the trade. The profits of the business for each of the years ending Mar. 31, 1925, & Mar. 31, 1926, were less than the average annual profits for the six years ending Mar. 31, 1924. The co. having given due notice, claimed that it was entitled under Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 29 (3), to be assessed for the year 1927–28 on the basis of the average profits of the business for the three years ending Mar. 31, 1927:—Held: the co. not having been in possession of the source of the profits for any part of the period preceding the three years mentioned in the sub-sect., the sub-sect. was not applicable, notwithstanding that the co. fell to be treated for income tax purposes as successors in the business.—BROWN (E. G.) & CO., LTD. v. STEWART (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 423.

204g. —— —— ——.]—Applt. co. was formed in Oct. 1924, to take over a partnership business of wool merchants, the partners themselves becoming the holders of practically all the shares. In the year ending Mar. 31, 1926, the co. sustained a loss of £64,016. Under Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), Part IV., dealing with income tax, the assessment on a three years' average was abolished, & it was provided that the profits for income tax purposes should be computed on the amount for the year preceding the year of assessment. It being obvious that in the readjustment of the system in that way hardship would arise, to mitigate certain cases of hardship sect. 29 (3), was framed. The question in dispute was whether in the circumstances above set out the co. had shown that it was within the mischief which sub-sect. 3 aimed at alleviating. The co. contended that sects. 28 & 29 of Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), were intended to cover all cases where the abolition of the three years' average would cause exceptional hardship, & also that in a case where there had been a change of ownership of the business during the three years on which the 1927–28 average would have been computed the new owners, in this case the co., should be treated as having been in notional possession of the source during the six years mentioned in sub-sect. 3 of sect. 29 preceding the three average years. On an appeal against an assessment to income tax Sched. D for the year ending Apr. 5, 1928, in £68,032 less £539 wear & tear allowance, the comrs. held that the co. came within the provisions of sect. 29 (3), & were entitled to the relief granted by that sub-sect., & they reduced the assessment to £5,480 less the £539:—Held: though the co. could bring their case within the first part of sect. 29 (3), it became impossible to apply that part of the sect. unless the co. could show that it was in possession of the profits during the six years, preceding the three years before 1926–27, but in fact the co. was not in possession of the profits for any portion of those six years. To work the sub-sect. the co. must have been in possession for some part of the six years, either all of it or part of it. The co. must have been in possession or the sub-sect. did not arise at all.—BETTS v. LAYCOCK, SONS & CO., LTD. (1930), 142 L. T. 506; 15 Tax Cas. 431, C. A.

204h. —— —— Validity of notice—Notice by accountants.]—A firm of chartered accountants had been employed by applt. co. as their accountants & auditors for many years. They had each year interviewed & corresponded with the appropriate inspector of taxes with regard to the co.'s income tax liabilities with a view to agreement as to the figures upon which liability was to be based. All returns were signed by the co.'s duly authorised officer. The co. was admittedly entitled to exercise the option with regard to the basis of assessment afforded by Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 29 (3), if it so desired.

The accountants informed the inspector in two letters dated Oct. 3 & 4, 1927, that the co. claimed " to be charged for the year 1927–28 " as if sect. 29 had not been passed. No reference was made to the year 1928–29.

In a letter dated Oct. 25, 1927, the accountants purported to withdraw the claim. The amount of the liability for the year 1927–28 computed on the average basis was greater than the amount on the preceding year basis. The co. appealed against an additional assessment for the year 1927–28 on the difference between these amounts, contending, inter alia, that the accountants had no authority to give the notice required by the sect. & that valid & effective notice was not given. It was not suggested that the accountants had specific authority to lodge the notice or that the co. had confirmed the accountants' action:—Held: the accountants had not a general authority to bind the taxpayer in the matter; they had not been held out as having such authority; & further the notices were invalid as purporting to be made by reference to one year only. ment made upon it under sched. D for the year 1927–28 should be reduced to the amount of the profits of the year of assessment, on the ground that sect. 23 of Finance Act, 1927, extended the application of proviso (a) of sect. 29 (1) of Finance Act, 1926, so as to cover any case where a trade had been set up or commenced within the period of two years referred to in sect. 23. The special comrs. on appeal refused the co.'s claim :—Held : sect. 23 of Finance Act, 1927, did not so extend the application of proviso (a) of sect. 29 (1) of Finance Act, 1926.—KUALA MUDA RUBBER ESTATES, LTD. v. TODD (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 440.

210a. —— Partnership.]—By a deed dated Nov. 22, 1922, A. & B., partners in a firm, dissolved partnership as from Apr. 1, 1922. Upon the dissolution of the partnership A. continued to carry on business at the firm's address, but from Nov. 22, 1922, until his death in June, 1923, B. carried on, in his own name at his private address, a small amount of business previously done by the firm. By a deed dated Dec. 15, 1922, A. took C. into partnership as from Apr. 1, 1922. An assessment having been made on the firm for 1922–23 upon the average of the profits for the three years ended Mar. 31, 1922, the comrs. found that the partnership between A. & B. was not dissolved until Nov. 22, 1922, & that there had been no discontinuance of the business, but that A. had succeeded to the business of A. & B., & that A. & C. had succeeded to the business carried on by A. after the dissolution of his partnership with B. :—Held : there was evidence upon which the comrs. could come to their conclusions, & they had not misdirected themselves in law.—FARADAY, RODGERS & ELLER v. CARTER (1927), 11 Tax Cas. 565, C. A.

210b. —— Absence of formal contract.]—During Mar. 1928, there were negotiations & detailed correspondence between the resp. co. & another co. who were proposing to purchase the business of resp. co., culminating in a letter dated Mar. 21, 1928, in which the prospective purchasers indicated that the terms contained in the correspondence, & as arranged at interviews between the parties, were generally accepted "subject to such terms being fully set out in a formal contract or agreement, to be submitted to us & finally approved of." On Mar. 29, 1928, two of the directors of resp. co. resigned & entered the service of the purchasers. On Mar. 30 resps. gave notice to their foreign agents terminating their engagements. The formal contract was dated Apr. 10, 1928. Resp. co. were assessed for the year 1927–28 in accordance with the provisions of rule 11 (2) on the footing that the succession took place after Apr. 5, 1928. The General Comrs. allowed their appeal against this assessment, finding that a contract for the sale & purchase of the business existed before Apr. 6, 1928. The Crown appealed :—Held : the correspondence did not constitute a contract & that there was no evidence of a de facto succession before Apr. 6.—TODD v. JONES BROS., LTD. (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 396.

210c. —— Purchase from liquidator.]—A. co. carried on business as (a) motor engineers, (b) cinema theatre proprietors, &, until a short time before going into liquidation, (c) haulage contractors & char-a-banc proprietors. On the liquidation of the co. applts. purchased the co.'s lands & property & stock-in-trade, the purchase-price being £16,000, of which £15,850 was stated, in the agreement of sale, to be in respect of lands & property, & £150 in respect of stock. Applts. retained the co.'s employees & continued without any interruption the work in

sb. Informal arrangement during coal strike.]—A Glasgow coal merchant & a London firm of coal exporters & importers made, during a coal strike, an informal business arrangement, the main feature of which was that coal was invoiced by the firm to the merchant at cost, the merchant to pay also to the firm one-half of whatever net excess over this cost price he might obtain from his customers. The arrangement continued for a few months only & was brought to an end by an accounting & division of profits between the parties. The special comrs. on appeal proceedings decided that, having regard to all the facts of the conduct of the business between the parties, the trade in question was carried on jointly within r. 10, Rules applicable to Cases I. & II., Sched. D, & they found as a fact that the transactions involved were partnership transactions. An assessment was accordingly confirmed charging the total profits in one sum separately from any other liabilities of the parties :—Held : the evidence justified the comrs.' decision.—GARDNER (JOHN) & BOWRING, HARDY & CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. the co.'s hands. They carried on business as motor engineers & as cinema theatre proprietors but not at any time as haulage contractors & char-a-banc proprietors. The General Comrs. held that applts. had not succeeded to the business previously carried on by the co.:—Held: there were no grounds for disturbing the Comrs.' decision as being erroneous in point of law.—WILSON & BARLOW v. CHIBBETT (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 407.

210d. —— Transfer of tied houses to different brewery.]—Applt. co., a brewery co., acquired the control of another co., the B. Brewery Co. by an arrangement whereby the shareholders in the latter exchanged their shares for shares in applt. co. The B. Co. then leased its brewery & its tied houses, comprising the whole of its property, licensed & unlicensed, to applt. co. at an annual rent. Applt. co. supplied its own products to the tied houses, which became "tied" to them, & brewing at the B. Co.'s brewery immediately ceased. Shortly after the date of the lease applt. co. purchased all the stock & loose effects of the B. co., & about a year later they purchased the brewery at a valuation, the lease, as regards the brewery, thus only remaining in effect for about eighteen months. Applt. co. appealed against assessments made on the footing that it had succeeded to the business of the B. Co. & that accordingly in arriving at applt. co.'s liability the profits of the B. Co. should be brought into the computation. The General Comrs. held that the assessments had been correctly so made:—Held: the matter was primarily a question of fact & there were no grounds for disturbing the Comrs.' decision.—SHIPSTONE (JAMES) & SONS, LTD. v. MORRIS (1929), 4 Tax Cas. 413.

212a. —— ——.]—Held: in order to establish that there has been a falling short of the profits or gains of a trade within the exception to r. 11 of the Rules applicable to Cases I. & II. of Sched. D., it has only to be shown that the profits or gains in the year of assessment have fallen short from some specific cause, & not that the aggregate profits or gains since the change have so fallen short; & if the profits or gains in the year of assessment are found to have fallen short from some specific cause, income tax is computed on the actual profits or gains of that year instead of on the average of the three preceding years.—KNEESHAW v. CLAY & HORSFALL, [1929] 1 K. 213 iii. —— Absence of abnormally favourable conditions of preceding year.]—A co. which had succeeded to a coal merchants' business formerly carried on by a firm, appealed under r. 11 of the rules applicable to Cases I. & II. of Sched. D, against an assessment to income tax for the year following the succession, based on the profits of the business in the year immediately preceding the year of assessment. It appeared that the profits in the earlier year had been inflated by the existence of a coal strike in that year which had resulted in a serious shortage in the supply of coal & had enabled the firm to dispose of waste coal at abnormally high rates of profit. The co. claimed an adjustment of the figures, on the ground that the falling short of its profits in the year of assessment was due to one of two alternative "specific causes" within the rule, viz. (1) the cessation of the unusual conditions prevailing, as a result of the coal strike, in the preceding year; or (2) a profound & unprecedented disturbance of the coal trade in consequence of the capture of foreign markets by other countries:—Held: the absence during the year of assessment of the abnormal conditions affecting profit-making which prevailed in the preceding year constituted a "specific cause" within rule 11, for the falling short of the co.'s profits in the year of assessment.—INLAND REVENUE v. ANDERSON, FREW & CO. v. INLAND REVENUE, [1930] S. The advances were not made by the firm as factors for the co. The co. having failed, the loans became irrecoverable, & the firm claimed to deduct the loss thus incurred in arriving at the profits of their profession for income tax purposes:—Held: the advances were not money "wholly & exclusively laid out for purposes" of business & the deduction of them was inadmissible.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. A. & B., [1929] S. 217b. —— Rent—Proviso for abatement if profits insufficient.]—Resp. co. were assessed to income tax for the years 1923-24 & 1924-25 under Sched. D of the Income Tax Act, 1918, in respect of its profits in the respective sums of £800,000 less £450,000 wear & tear of plant & machinery & £800,000 less £350,000 for wear & tear. The co. claimed that as it had paid in 1922 & 1923 two sums of £630,000 & £960,000 respectively under a lease dated Dec. 29, 1921, those sums ought to be allowed as deductions from the profits in the years of assessment. The co., under the terms of that lease, were in possession of a very large number of properties in different parts of the world used by them for the purposes of their trade & for which, under the lease, it had to pay £960,000 a year. The document of Dec. 29, 1921, was in the form of a strict lease, but contained a proviso that if the profits of the business of the co., after providing for the rent therein reserved, should be insufficient to enable the co. to pay interest on debenture stock & specific mortgages, the dividend on preference shares, a dividend of 10 per cent. on ordinary shares, then the rent should be abated to the extent of the deficiency ascertained. The comrs. held that the payments of £630,000 & £960,000 were not payments antecedent to or necessary to earn profits, but contingent payments dependent & payable only out of profits earned & were not allowable deductions from profits assessable to income tax:—Held: the question was one of mixed fact & law & therefore the decision of the comrs. could be reviewed; & having regard to the document of Dec. 29, 1921, which was a genuine lease, the payments made for the premises leased were an outgoing of the business which ought to be allowed for.—UNION COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. v. ADAMSON (1930), 144 L. 217c. Excess profits duty—Holding company & subsidiary company.]—The whole of the share capital of resp. co. was held by another co., which accordingly was assessed to & paid excess profits duty on the profits of the two cos. as though the subsidiary co. were a branch of the main co. In the computation of the main co.'s income tax liabilities on the three years' average basis, allowance for excess profits duty paid was made in the same manner as a deduction would be allowed for an ordinary outgoing in the course of trade. The main co. went into voluntary liquidation in 1918, liability to income tax ceasing before Apr. 6, 1918. In consequence of the operation of the average basis for income tax, the main co. had received effective benefit in respect of a part only of the excess profits duty paid. Resp. co. claimed deductions in the computation of its income tax liabilities for subsequent years in respect of the excess profits duty paid, for which allowance had not effectively been given to the main co., in so far as such duty was attributable to its own profits. The General Comrs. on appeal allowed the claim & the Crown appealed:—Held: the co. was not entitled to any deduction.—OGSTON v. REYNOLDS, SONS & CO., LTD., REYNOLDS, SONS & CO., LTD. v. OGSTON (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 501, C. 224a. —— —— ——.]—Applt. co. was a member of the Cold Rolled Brass & Copper Assocn., an unincorporated body having as its objects the fixing of prices for goods manufactured by its members, & the provision of a common fund to be applied in the interests of its members. The common fund consisted of members' entrance fees & monthly payments proportional to output tonnage, & in the event of the Association being wound up was distributable between the members in proportion to their contributions. In 1918 the Ministry of Munitions had large surplus stocks of brass & copper & the Assocn. was specially authorised by its members to negotiate with the Ministry in regard to its disposal. As a result the Assocn. contracted to purchase the metal from the Ministry at fixed prices per ton, & this contract, & also the draft arrangement for the disposal of the metal to the Assocn.'s members, were subsequently approved by the Assocn. in general meeting. By these arrangements members were given, firstly, an option of purchasing a quantity of the metal proportional to their monthly output, at prices scheduled by the Association varying according to quality & size, & secondly, an option to apply for any residue. The whole of the metal was thus disposed of by the Association at prices higher than those paid to the Ministry, & the "profit" was carried to the common fund. Applts. debited in their accounts the full cost of the metal purchased by them from the Assocn., & did not bring into the accounts their share in the "profit." They were assessed to income tax under Case I. of Sched. D. on the basis that they were entitled to deduct only the net cost of the metal, i.e. the full cost less their share in the "profit":—Held: applts. were able to share in the distribution of the metal only on payment of the prices scheduled by the Assocn.; their share in the "profit" was in proportion, not to the price paid, but to the quantity taken; the profit carried to the common fund could not be regarded as the individual members' profit; & in the circumstances applts. were entitled to deduct as a business expense the price paid by them to the Assocn.—CLIFFORD & SON, LTD. v. PUTTICK, CLIFFORD & SON, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 189.

224b. Subscription to guarantee fund of British Empire Exhibition.]—Applts., asphalters, subscribed to the guarantee fund of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, solely, as the General Comrs. found, in the hope of obtaining preferential treatment in the allocation of contracts for asphalting work within the exhibition grounds. They did not in fact obtain any contract at all from the exhibition authorities. Having been called upon to pay a considerable part of the amount guaranteed they sought to deduct the sum so paid from their profits assessable to income tax as a trade expense. The General Comrs. held it was an allowable deduction:—Held: the question was one of fact, &, as there was evidence to support the finding of the General Comrs., their decision must be affirmed.—MORLEY v. LAWFORD & Co. D.:—Held: the question whether the subscriptions were given with the view of obtaining a staff that would earn profits, or whether they were given merely because the staff had in fact been treated at the hospital, was a question of fact for the Special Comrs., & their decision must be affirmed.—BOURNE & HOLLINGSWORTH, LTD. v. OGDEN (1929), 45 T. 226a. Liability to bank on loans to meet acceptances—Subsequent compromise of bank's claim.]—Applt., who carried on business as an exporter of cloth, habitually financed his shipments by drawing bills on the buyer in Shanghai & borrowing from a bank in London on the security of the bills & shipping documents. In 1920 a buyer became unable to meet his acceptances, & applt. found himself responsible to the bank for a large sum. In computing his assessable profits for the year ended Mar. 31, 1921, he was allowed to deduct a sum of £22,410, being the estimated amount of the bank's claim against him, but subsequently he advanced certain contentions against the bank & eventually, at the end of 1922, the bank accepted £8,000 in settlement of its claim. Applt. objected to additional assessments made in order to bring into charge the difference between the £8,000 & the £22,410 previously allowed, contending that the sums advanced by the bank were a liability for the year ended Mar. 31, 1921, & that the subsequent reduction of the debt was immaterial in determining his liability for that or any later year:—Held: applt.'s transactions with the bank constituted part of his business & that the loss incurred was a trading loss; & the computations for the purposes of income tax must be reopened & adjusted by reference to the actual amount of this loss.—BERNHARD v. GAHAN, BERNHARD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. Both in 1927 & 1928 the co. were, for the purposes of Sched. 244a. ——.]—A co. leased a cinematograph theatre with its fixtures, furniture, machinery, etc., for twenty-one years under a lease which provided for an annual rent & a premium payable by quarterly instalments over the whole period of the lease. The lessors reserved the right in certain circumstances to terminate the lease at six months' notice. If this right were exercised all future instalments of the premium were to be cancelled. In negotiations before the terms of the lease were settled there had been a provisional agreement under which a rent was to have been paid equal to the total annual payments of rent & premium secured by the lease. The General Comrs. on appeal proceedings allowed the co.'s claim to deduct from its profits for income tax purposes the instalments of the premium. The Crown appealed :—Held : the payments were capital expenditure.—GREEN v. FAVOURITE CINEMAS, LTD. (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 390.

249a. Payment to agent to terminate agency.]—The Anglo-Persian Oil Co. paid to its agents in Persia the sum of £300,000, in compensation for the latter relinquishing a contract of agency. The co. treated that sum in its books as a payment out of revenue, & charged instalments of £60,000 to revenue account during each of the following five years. After the premium had been taken into account it was found that in some cases the tied tenant paid less rent than a free tenant would have paid, & in some cases more. If the rents & premiums of all the tied houses were aggregated, no loss in rent had been suffered by the company in consideration of the tie :—Held : in considering whether an expense had been incurred by the co. in the letting of tied houses which could be deducted from the profits of the business as having been wholly or exclusively laid out or expended for the purposes of the trade, it was only the aggregate loss on the letting of all the tied houses that could be taken into account, & as in the aggregate no loss had been sustained there was no expense to be deducted.—Collyer v. Hoare & Co., Ltd., [1931] 1 K. ing a similar deduction in respect of other stallions in the stud to the extent of one-third of the number of travelling stallions. The farmer contended that his stallion-owning business should be treated as entirely separate from his farming business, & that the whole of the expenses & losses connected with his stallions should be set against the revenue derived from them :—Held : it was primarily a question for the comrs. to determine, & no cause had been shown for disturbing their determination.—Marshall v. Inland Revenue Comrs., [1927] S. sole activity being the indemnity of its members, who were coal-owners, against liability for compensation in respect of fatal accidents to workmen. The members of the assocn. were the persons protected by it, every member being liable to contribute a sum not exceeding £25 in the event of a winding up. The assocn. formed a general fund by making calls upon members proportionate to the wages paid in their works for the time being, & the balance of the ordinary call fund was transferred to a reserve fund, into which any extraordinary calls were also paid. A member, on retirement, was entitled to get back in cash a proportion of his share in the above reserve fund, but, apart from this, members had no right at all to the cash in the reserve fund, though the interest accruing on the reserve fund could be used in diminution of members' calls:—Held: (1) the sums paid by the members to the assocn. were admissible deductions in computing the profits made by a member for the purpose of assessment to income tax, as the money was laid out by the respective members on a true insurance principle; (2) the surplus funds of the assocn. were not assessable to income tax, as the assocn. was mere machinery for the purpose of enabling subscribing members to insure themselves.—THOMAS v. EVANS (RICHARD) & CO., JONES v. SOUTH-WEST LANCASHIRE COAL OWNERS' ASSOCN., [1927] 1 K. 307b. Marine insurance company—Building ships—Cancellation of shipbuilding contracts.]—A marine insurance co., having entered into contracts for the building of four ships, accepted delivery of two of the ships & then, owing to a slump in the shipping trade, cancelled the contracts for the other two ships on payment of £70,000. It was contended that a new business of dealing in ships had been begun by the co., & that the £70,000 was a proper deduction in arriving at its profits:—Held: the co. was not carrying on any trade, from the profits of which the £70,000 was an admissible deduction.—DEVON MUTUAL STEAMSHIP INSURANCE ASSOCN. v. OGG (1927), 13 Tax Cas. 184.

309a. Loss on investments—What amounts to.]—Applts., an insurance co., had investments in British railway stocks, & it was admitted by the Crown that any loss suffered by applts. on such investments was deductible from their profits for purposes of income tax. The result of Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), was that applts. received in exchange for their various railway holdings stocks in the four amalgamated railway cos. created by that Act. The market value of these new stocks was less than the original cost to applts. of the old stocks, & they claimed that the loss so occasioned to them should be allowed as a deduction from their profits for 1922 & 1923 in computing their income tax liability:—Held: as the effect of what had happened was that the old investments had been closed & realised, & new investments had been begun, applts. were entitled to the deduction claimed.—ROYAL INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. STEPHEN (1928), 44 T. L. R. 630; 14 Tax Cas. 22.

312a. Employment—Actress.]—The expression "employment" in Sched. E. of 1918 Act means something analogous to an office or a post.

An actress earned her living by accepting & fulfilling engagements for which her professional qualifications fitted her. During the periods of assessment in question, she exercised her activities by (a) acting in various stage plays in England & one in the United States of America, under various contracts with theatrical producers; (b) performing for the films; (c) performing on the wireless for the British Broadcasting Corpn., & (d) performing for gramophone companies for reproduction on their records:—Held: the actress was assessable under Sched. D of 1918 Act in respect of the profits which she derived from her profession or vocation as an actress & not under Sched. E in respect of the profits of her employment.—DAVIES v. BRAITHWAITE, [1931] 2 K. B. 628; 100 L. J. K. B. 619; 145 L. T. 693; 47 T. L. R. 479; 75 Sol. Jo. 526.

313a. —— Remuneration of solicitor-trustee under trust.]—A solr.-trustee was empowered by clauses in the instruments creating the trusts to charge for work done by him in connection with the trusts. By agreement between himself, his co-trustees & the beneficiaries, his remuneration was calculated as a percentage of the annual income of the trust funds, which income had already been brought into charge to tax:—Held: this remuneration was chargeable to income tax against the solr. under 1918 Act, Schedule D, Case II., as his profits or earnings arising from an employment, & was not constituted of annual payments payable wholly out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19.—JONES v. WRIGHT (1927), 139 L. sl. Dividends paid in Victory Bonds exempt from taxation.]—W., Ltd., having accumulated profits, declared a dividend, & by consent of the shareholders, paid the same in Victory Bonds. W., a shareholder, in his income return for that year, claimed he should not pay income tax on this dividend because it was paid in Victory Bonds which were exempt from income tax:—Held: the payment of the distributed dividend in question in this case, in bonds, does not bring the transaction within the "obligation" of the bond in question which introduces the exemption in taxes. Such payment is not the payment of the capital of the bond at maturity nor is it the payment of interest upon presentation & surrender of coupons which is what is exempt from taxation. The amount so received as dividend represented by said bonds was liable to income tax as profits & gains.—WATEROUS v. MINISTER OF NATIONAL REVENUE, [1931] Ex. C. R. 108.—CAN.

317a. —— —— —— Different holdings of War Loan.]—Applt., who owned £2,350 5 per cent. War Loan inscribed in the books of the Bank of England, in June, 1924, converted this holding into 4½ per cent. Conversion Loan, the interest on which was payable under deduction of income tax. Applt., however, continued throughout the year 1925–26 to hold a small amount of 5 per cent. War Loan Post Office issue, to which he had succeeded on the death of his daughter, & which he was not aware he could convert :—Held : applt. continued throughout the year 1925–26 to hold the same source of income, i.e., 5 per cent. War Loan, & under Schedule D, Case III., r. 2, he was assessable to income tax for that year in the full amount of the interest received from such War Loan in the preceding year.—Turton v. Mitchell (1927), 138 L. T. 365; 13 Tax Cas. 245.

317b. —— —— —— ——.]—The words "interest . . . on any securities issued under the War Loan Acts, 1914 to 1917," in 1918 Act, Sched D, Case III., r. 1 (f), designated one taxable subject-matter & not several sources of income.

A taxpayer was the holder of a number of 5 per cent. National War Bonds, 1928 (Third Series). These bonds were on Dec. 1, 1924, converted into 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, 1929–47. The taxpayer in the following year purchased additional 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, 1929–47. Both the 5 per cent. National War Bonds, 1928, & the 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, 1929–47, were securities issued under the War Loan Acts. A question arose whether they were of the same class or source for the purposes of rr. 1 & 2 applicable to Case III. of Sched. D of the Income Tax Act. The taxpayer contended that they were the same source, & therefore the assessment for the year in question should be computed on the basis of the income arising within the year preceding the year of assessment. The Crown, on the other hand, contended that the income arising from 5 per cent. National War Bonds & 5 per cent. War Loan Stock was income arising from different sources, & therefore the assessment for the year in question ought to be computed on the income of the year of assessment :—Held : as both the 5 per cent. National War Bonds, 1928, & the 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, 1929–47, were securities issued under the War Loan Acts, 1914 to 1917, the interest arising from those securities arose from the same source & ought not to be split up for the purpose of charging income tax.—Merrifield v. Wallpaper Manufacturers, Ltd., [1931] 2 K. 367a. —— Agreement to pay super-tax on wife's income in excess of specified sum—Whether husband entitled to marshal wife's income.]—A husband & wife lived apart upon the terms of a separation deed by which the husband covenanted during the joint lives of himself & his wife to pay to trustees for the benefit of the wife such a sum in each year as, after deducting income tax at the current rate, should amount to the sum of £3,000. Clause 11 of the deed was in these terms: "In addition to all other payments by this indenture agreed to be made by the husband or his representatives after his decease he or they shall pay & discharge all super-tax which shall be payable in respect of the income of either the husband or the wife except any super-tax in respect of any income of the wife not coming to her under or by virtue of this indenture in excess of £1,400 for any year." Apart from the deed the wife had an income exceeding £1,400 a year:—Held: in computing the super-tax payable by the husband in respect of the income of the wife, the husband was not entitled to marshal the component parts of the wife's income so that one part, namely, the annual amount payable under the deed plus £1,400, should be exempt from super-tax as to £2,000 thereof, & as to the balance should bear the lower rates of tax, & that the higher rate of tax should fall upon another part, namely, the excess of the wife's total income over the first-mentioned part; but clause 11 of the deed required that the whole super-tax payable in respect of the total income of the wife should be divided in the proportion which the amount of one of the above-mentioned parts of the wife's income bore to the amount of the other, & that the husband should pay super-tax in the proportion which the first-mentioned part bore to that secondly mentioned.—FLEETWOOD-HESKETH v. FLEETWOOD-HESKETH, [1929] 2 K. 369c. Payment of interest to debenture holders—Out of accumulated profits.]—The words "profits or gains brought into charge to tax" in rr. 19 & 20 of the All Schedules Rules to 1918 Act, mean profits or gains brought into charge to tax in the same year of assessment as the payment is made of the interest from which income tax is deducted.

A trading co. wrote off against capital depreciation a balance of £68,929 standing to the credit of its profit & loss account & representing accumulated past profits on which the co. had paid income tax in previous years. During years of charge the co. made no profits, but it paid debenture interest, deducting from the payments tax at the standard rate which is claimed to retain on the ground that the £68,929 was to be regarded as available for the payment of the interest, & that the interest was; therefore, "payable wholly out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax" within r. 19 of the All Schedules Rules under 1918 Act:—Held: as during each of the years of charge the co. had no profits or gains brought into charge to income tax, the interest had not been paid out of money already brought into tax within r. 19. The case, therefore, did not fall within r. 19, but within r. 21, by which the co. must account to the Crown for the amount of the tax which it had deducted.—LUIPAARD'S VLEI ESTATE & GOLD MINING CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1930] 1 K. 380a. Instalments paid after death of moneylender—Instalments not representing capital.]—A moneylender made loans on promissory notes which provided for payment to him of monthly or more frequent instalments. Up to the date of his death he was assessed under Case I, Sched. D, in respect of the profits of this business, all instalments due & paid prior to his death being brought into the relative computations. Instalments falling due after his death were collected by the administrator of his estate but it was not suggested that the administrator was at any time carrying on any trade. Assessments were made on the administrator on the basis that so much of the instalments collected by him as did not represent repayment of capital was "interest of money" within rule 1, Case III., Sched. D. The administrator contended that the sums in question were not assessable as "interest of money" within Income Tax Acts:—Held: the sums in question were "interest" assessable under Case III.—BENNETT v. OGSTON (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 374.

393a. ——.]—Under Housing of the Working Classes Acts & Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), resps., a metropolitan borough council, assigned to the London County Council all rates authorised to be raised by resps. under Metropolis Management Act, 1855, or London Govt. Act, 1899 (c. 14), to secure money advanced by the London County Council. The money so raised was used by resps. in connection with the construction of flats for the working classes in pursuance of a scheme prepared by them under Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1919 (c. 35), s. 1. In making payments of interest on the sums advanced resps. deducted income tax under Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 21. The interest was paid out of the general fund in the hands of resps., into which fund were paid all profits or gains, whether derived from a housing scheme or from elsewhere. Resps. had only one banking account, out of which all payments, including the interest, were made & into which all receipts, including the profits & gains derived from resps.' electricity undertaking, or otherwise, were paid. No special fund in respect of any housing scheme was maintained. Resps. possessed profits or gains brought into charge to income tax sufficient for the payment of interest on the sums advanced, apart from any revenue derived under any housing scheme :—Held : as none of resps.' profits & gains other than the receipts of the housing scheme contributed to the payment of the interest, & as resps. had an indemnity against loss on the scheme, resps. were liable to account for the amount of the deductions.—DICKSON v. HAMPSTEAD BOROUGH COUNCIL (1927), 91 J. In order to finance the scheme, the corpn. issued housing bonds, & when paying interest upon them they deducted income tax. They alleged that that interest was paid out of their general borough fund, which was used in financing their markets, gas, electricity, tramways & other undertakings, & that as the income in respect of that fund & those undertakings had already been brought into charge for income tax purposes, they were entitled to retain the amounts deducted :—Held : as the corpn. had an indemnity against loss on the housing scheme the interest so paid could not be regarded as a general payment out of profits brought into charge, & the corpn. must account to the Revenue for the tax so deducted under rule 21 of the rules applicable to all Scheds.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] 2 K. 394a. —— ——.]—The profits of the Metropolitan Water Board were assessable under 1918 Act, Schedule A., No. III., r. 3, by reference to the profits of the year preceding the year of assessment. The accounts of the Board for the year ending Mar. 31, 1922, showed a loss, & no assessment was made for the year ending Apr. 5, 1923. The accounts for the year ending Mar. 31, 1923, showed a profit of over two millions, out of which the Board paid over one million interest on water stock, & debentures, deducting & retaining the income tax thereon. On an information claiming that the Board was liable to account for the amount of the tax so deducted, the Board contended that the interest paid for the year 1922–23 was payable out of profits brought into charge for 1922–23 within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19, & was in fact paid out of the profits for 1922–23, & that, although the income tax for 1922–23 was to be measured by the profits of the preceding year, the profits for 1922–23 had been brought into charge, & rule 21 did not apply :—Held : as the Board had been assessed at zero under Schedule A for 1922–23, the interest had not been paid out of profits brought into charge, & the Crown was entitled to succeed.—A.-G. v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD, [1928] 1 K. 428a. —— Securities in control of foreign custodian of enemy property—Payment of dividends by Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal—When interest accrues.]—Before the war one K., who was a naturalised British subject ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom, deposited certain securities, stocks, & shares with a bank in Germany for safe custody, & the bank collected the interest & dividends & put them to the credit of K.'s account. From the outbreak of war in 1914 K. ceased to operate the account & he died in 1916. The bank, however, continued to credit the account with the interest & dividends until 1917, when the German Govt. appointed a custodian to take over & administer enemies' property in Germany, & the bank then paid the interest & dividends to the custodian. K.'s last surviving exor. died in 1921, & resps., the exors. of such survivor, recovered the interest & dividends, together with interest thereon, through the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal. Resps. were assessed to income tax in respect of these sums for the years 1922–23 to 1926–27 under Cases IV. & V. of Sched. D. on the ground that they were income arising to resps. in those years as they accrued only when received under the decree of the Tribunal:—Held: the dividends & interest accrued in the years when they were paid into the bank, & it was now too late to make assessments in respect of the years before K.'s death, & as to the years after his death assessments could be made only so far as the assessments were in time, & the further sum paid as interest thereon under the decree of the Tribunal was not income but was compensation comparable to damages for detention of a chattel & therefore was not assessable to income tax.—SIMPSON v. MAURICE'S EXORS. 430b. —— Company making investments on real estate abroad.]—A co. incorporated in the United Kingdom, & carrying on business there at its head office in the making of loans of money upon the security of land in Egypt, was assessed to income tax until Apr. 1, 1922, under Schedule D., Case I., upon the profits of the co.'s business. As from Apr. 1, 1922, the entire control of the business was removed to Egypt. The trade of the co. wholly consisted of the lending of money to approved borrowers in Egypt in accordance with Egyptian law, at rates of interest varying from 6 to 8½ per cent. No loans were entertained without good real security being given, &, in the event of the borrower's default, proceedings were invariably taken in the local cts. to realise the security, & if it could not be sold immediately, the co. would go into possession:—Held: as from Apr. 1, 1922, the co., though it carried on a trade or business, was properly assessed to income tax under Schedule D., Case IV., in respect of income arising from securities in a place out of the United Kingdom, & was to be taxed in the full amount of such income, whether it was remitted to the United Kingdom or not. There was no evidence upon which the comrs. could find, as they had, that the taking of securities for the loans advanced was only "an incident" in such business; on the contrary it was an indispensable condition of the business. The case being one coming both under Case IV. & Case V. the Crown had an option to tax the co. under either case.—BUTLER v. MORTGAGE CO. OF EGYPT, LTD. (1928), 139 L. T. 29; 13 Tax Cas. 803, C. A.

441a. —— —— —— —— Application of American law.]—Testator, a subject of the United States, directed that his residuary estate should be held upon trust to dispose of the income thereof to the use of his daughter, now the wife of applt., during her life. Testator's residuary estate consisted wholly of foreign securities & foreign stocks & shares, & the existing trustees were an American trust co. Applt. appealed against assessments to income tax made upon him in respect of his wife's income arising from the will under Case IV. & Case V., r. 1, as being income arising from foreign securities, stocks & shares, & chargeable to tax, whether received in the United Kingdom or not, & claimed that, by reason of the interposition of the title of the trustees, it should be assessed under Case V., r. 2, as being a foreign possession other than stocks & shares & chargeable only to the extent to which it was remitted to the United Kingdom. The assessments were ultimately upheld by the House of Lords upon the assumption that the American law was the same as the law of England. Upon an appeal by applt. against further assessments to income tax made upon him in respect of the same income for the three succeeding years, expert evidence was adduced as to the law of the United States to the effect that under that law the wife had no estate or interest in the securities, stocks or shares, but that her sole right was to compel the trustees to discharge their duties under the will:—Held: as the result of this evidence, the income in question was assessable under Case V., r. 2.—ARCHER-SHEE v. GARLAND, [1931] A. —— —— ——]—Testator, a citizen of the United States left the residue of his property in trust for his daughter during her life. The trustees, who had full power over the investment of the trust fund, were a co. constituted under the law of the State of New York & resident therein. The trust fund consisted of foreign govt. securities, foreign stocks & shares, & other foreign property. The trustees paid over such of the sums they received as they considered to be income, after deducting expenses, to the order of the daughter at a bank in New York. No part of the income was remitted to the United Kingdom. Resp., the husband of testator's daughter & resident in the United Kingdom, was assessed under Schedule D., Case IV., in the full amount of the income of the trust:—Held: (1) the daughter was specifically entitled under the will in equity during her life to the interest & dividends of the securities, stocks, & shares comprised in the trust fund, & her husband was assessable under Case IV., r. 1, & Case V., r. 1, to income tax in respect thereof, except such, if any, as were shown to be "foreign possessions other than stocks, shares & rents," whether such interest & dividends were remitted to the United Kingdom or not; (2) the matter should be remitted to the comrs. to state which of the items of the trust fund were (a) "securities" within Case IV., r. 1, (b) "stocks, shares or rents" within Case V., r. 1, & (c) "possessions out of the United Kingdom other than stocks, shares or rents" within Case V., r. 2.—BAKER v. ARCHER-SHEE, [1927] A. Remittances were received from the firm in each of the three years 1920–21, 1921–22 & 1922–23, & the average amount of these remittances formed the basis of an additional assessment on resps. for the following year, 1923–24, under rule 2 of Case V. In 1923–24, however, no remittance was received from the firm, & resps. contended that there was therefore no income from that source to be assessed:—Held: each foreign possession must be treated separately in determining whether or not liability existed for any year, & if in any year no income arose from a particular possession, no liability could exist for that year in respect of that possession.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. DRYSDALE'S TRUSTEES (1928), 13 Tax Cas. 565.—SCOT.

Nursing facilities, when not required for members, were granted to non-members at increased rates. Funds were held by the assocn. which had been raised by public subscription, & the hospital had been acquired with funds similarly raised. Palestine, Syria, or other parts of Turkey in Asia & the Peninsula of Sinai for the purpose of settling Jews on such lands." Then follow in the memorandum twenty-one specified objects & powers which included power to cultivate & improve any lands & erect buildings thereon, to let any land of the co. to any Jews, to acquire, construct & manage tramways, railways, harbours, docks, hydraulic works, telegraphs, telephones, factories & workshops, & to purchase & sell, work & develop mines & mining rights, & to carry on the business of mining & metallurgy. All the twenty-one objects or powers were stated to be subject to a proviso that they were to be "exercised only in such a way as shall in the opinion of the assocn. be conducive to the attainment of the said primary object." No part of the income of the assocn. was distributable by way of dividend, bonus or otherwise by way of profit to the members of the assocn., nor, in the event of a winding up, were the surplus assets distributable among them :—Held : the assocn. was not "a body of persons . . . established for charitable purposes only" within 1918 Act, s. 37 (1) (b), so as to be entitled to exemption from income tax in respect of consolidated stock owned by it & representing donations. 483c. Exemption of industrial societies—1918 Act, s. 39—Number of shares unlimited.]—Resp. Society, which was registered under Industrial & Provident Societies Act, 1893 (c. 39), claimed exemption under Sched. D. on the ground that the number of its shares was not limited by its rules or practice. The Society was formed to carry on the business of (inter alia) manufacturers & dealers in butter, cheese, milk & other dairy products. Admission to membership was at the discretion of the committee & subject to taking up a qualifying number of shares; further every member was bound by the Society's rules to sell to the Society any milk produced on any lands farmed by him if required to do so. The number of shares held by any individual member was limited to 200. The majority of the members were dairy farmers, & milk dealers & consumers were not in practice admitted to membership. Approximately 98 per cent. of the Society's sales were made to non-members. The Crown contended that practically the whole of the Society's sales were to non-members, & that the restriction of membership in general to persons willing to supply milk to the Society & the exclusion of milk dealers constituted an effective limitation of shares. The General Comrs. found in favour of the Society :—Held : the number of the Society's shares was not limited within 1918 Act, s. 39 (4), either by its rules or practice, & it was entitled to the exemption.—BENSTED v. MIDLAND DAIRY FARMERS, LTD. 489a. —— Foreign director of British company.]—Applt. in the first case was appointed foreign director of a British co. for fourteen years from 1918. The co. had subsidiary cos. on the Continent, the principal one being a French co. of which applt. was managing director. He was also a director of a German co., & had control over selling organisations in other European countries. He was thus responsible for the whole of the British co.'s Continental business, & his only remuneration was a fixed salary payable by the British co. plus commission on the co.'s profits from trading on the Continent. Since 1918 applt. had lived in Paris with his family. He came to London once a month to attend the co.'s directors' meetings, his function being to report & advise the directors on questions affecting the Continental business. It was no part of his duty to attend to the general business of the co. Applt. was assessed in respect of salary & commission for each year from 1920–21 to 1926–27 by the General Comrs. for the division in which the co.'s registered office was situated :—Held : (1) his office was an office within the United Kingdom ; (2) the General Comrs. had jurisdiction to assess for 1920–21 & 1921–22 as well as for later years.—PROCTOR v. RYALL, RYALL v. PROCTOR (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 204.

Resp. had been managing director of the co., & after his retirement the directors made him a voluntary allowance annually. They subsequently stopped this annual allowance & paid resp. a lump sum as a gift in lieu thereof :—Held : the allowances could not be regarded as supplementary salary. They were not "a profit or gain arising from an employment," nor could they be considered as receipts in respect of an office, but were merely gifts, & resp. was not liable to income tax on the sums so received by him.—BENYON v. THORPE (1928) 97 L. On Mar. 21, 1928, a meeting of the warden & council of the school was held at which a resolution was passed to grant to the retiring headmaster an immediate payment of £1,000 & " an annual pension " of £500. There was no scheme then in existence under which the headmaster could have qualified for a pension, & no negotiations took place between the headmaster & the warden & council before the payment was made. The council had the right at any time to rescind the resolution & to cease payment of the allowance :—Held : the allowance was not an annuity or pension chargeable to income tax under Sched. Art. 109 provided that " in the event of any director dying or resigning his office . . . the co. shall pay to him or his representatives by way of compensation for the loss of office " a sum equal to the remuneration received by him in his last five years of office by way of director's fees. The remuneration to which a director was entitled was payable free of income tax. The sums paid under art. 109 to the three resps. were assessed to income tax under Sched. E of Income Tax Act, 1918 :—Held : payments made under art. 109 to directors were not in the nature of fortuitous payments but in respect of services rendered as directors, there being a direct relation between the holding of the office of director & the right to payment of the sums, & the co. contracted by the arts. of assocn. to make such payments as part of the remuneration of directors. 545d. Lunacy percentage.]—Under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), & the Rules in Lunacy, 1892, the Crown is in certain circumstances entitled to receive 4 per cent., but not exceeding £400, of the clear annual income of a lunatic. A., a lunatic, had a considerable income & the whole of the funds were in ct. The income as it came in was credited to the lunatic's account by the Paymaster-General, & the appropriate lunacy percentage was debited annually in that account. Applt., the committee of A., was assessed under Case III. of Sched. D. for the year 1926–27 in the sum of £452, the amount of War Loan interest arising in 1925–26; the remainder of the lunatic's income was received under deduction of income tax. Applt. claimed that a deduction of £161, the lunacy percentage for 1925–26 on the whole of the lunatic's income, should be made from the assessment, on the grounds that the lunacy percentage did not form part of the lunatic's income & that there was no authority for charging it to income tax. The Crown contended that there was no provision in the income tax Acts for allowing such a deduction, that the payment was merely an application of the lunatic's income, or alternatively that the deduction from the assessment should be restricted to the percentage appropriate to that source of income:—Held: lunacy percentage is a payment out of the lunatic's income, & that no deduction is admissible for income tax purposes.—A. The insured had in each year the option of taking the reduction of premium for that year in cash or of converting it into the equivalent reversionary bonus. Resp. remitted £14 9*s.* 6*d.* to the co. but claimed that the amount of the premium paid by him in the year was £48 5*s.* :—Held: the reduction of premium had been provided by the policy, that the amount of the premium paid by resp. was £14 9*s.* 6*d.*, & that he was entitled to relief from income tax on that amount only.—WATKINS v. JONES (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 94.

The beneficiaries were all capaces & resident in this country. Testator held £40,000 5 per cent. War Stock, the interest on which was payable without deduction of tax. The interest due on June 1, & paid to the trustees on that date, amounting to £1,000, was treated by them as capital, & estate duty was paid thereon. The trustees, having been assessed to income tax on the £1,000 of interest, contended that trustees acting for behoof of a British resident who was capax were not assessable to income tax. The Comrs. decided that the trustees were assessable as regarded the two-thirds of the interest offering to the portions destined to the testator's wife & daughter in life rent, but not as regarded the one-third payable by them to the son :—Held : the trustees were assessable to tax on the whole interest, under Rule 1 of the Miscellaneous Rules applicable to Sched. Income payable to or for benefit of infant—Income applicable in paying premiums on educational endowment policy.]—The father of a young girl conveyed a sum of stock to applts. as trustees, & directed them to take out an educational endowment policy for such sum as could be insured for an annual payment of £30 for his daughter, the endowment to begin on her attaining the age of fifteen, & to continue for four years. The income of the trust fund was dedicated to the payment of the annual premiums. The truster further directed applts. to utilise the educational endowment payable under the policy & any other income available from the trust fund for the education & advancement of his daughter from the time when she became fifteen until her majority. If the daughter attained the age of twenty-one the capital of the trust fund was to be made over to her absolutely, but if she died before, the fund to revert to the truster or his representatives. The trust deed contained no gift of income to the daughter. While the daughter was still under fifteen applts., on her behalf, claimed repayment of income tax deducted at the source from a sum of £33, the annual income of the stock, on the ground that that income was the income of the daughter for income tax purposes, & that, as she had no other income of her own, she was within the limit of total exemption:—Held: the daughter had no present beneficial right to receive the income & the claim failed.—DEWAR v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1931] A. Resps. claimed repayment of income tax:—Held: as the duration of the payments did not exceed six years the income was to be deemed the income of the subscriber, & the resps. were not entitled under 1918 Act, s. 37 (1), to repayment of the tax.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. ST. 585a. Sum claimed already allowed as deduction.]—Applt. co. habitually financed its purchases by loans from its bankers repayable on demand; the loans were for no specified period, but were paid off with interest when the co. received payment for the goods, usually within three months. The interest was paid without deduction of income tax, & was debited in the co.'s profit & loss account as a business expense. It had been allowed as such in computing the profits on which the co. was assessed under Case I. of Sched. D. for the four years ended Apr. 5, 1925. The co. claimed repayment of tax under 1918 Act, s. 36, for these four years on the interest paid to the bank, contending that it should not have been allowed as a deduction in computing profits, that this error could be corrected by additional assessments, & that the interest must be treated as having been paid out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue refused the claim, & on appeal the Special Comrs. upheld this decision:—Held: as in fact the interest had been deducted in arriving at the assessable profits, it had not been paid out of profits brought into charge to tax, & that it was not open to the co. to claim revision of the assessments.—MULLER & CO. 592b. When justified—What amounts to "discovery" by surveyor.]—The allowance by an inspector of taxes of a debt as bad for purposes of the creditor's assessment to income tax under Sched. D does not bind the Crown contractually; nor is an assessment not appealed against conclusive against the surveyor as it would be if an appeal against the assessment had been determined, though, semble, such determination would not preclude an additional assessment. But in order to justify an additional assessment there must be a "discovery" by the surveyor that properties or profits chargeable to tax have been omitted. "Discovery" does not mean a mere change of opinion, but the ascertainment of facts which, if they had been known when the first assessment was made, would have increased it. What the statute requires is not a prophecy to be judged by after events, but an estimate of the value de præsenti of the debt for a profits & loss account.—ANDERTON & HALSTEAD, LTD. v. BIRRELL (1931), 47 T. L. R. 528.

595a. —— —— Absence of accountant's certificate.]—Applts. delivered to the inspector of taxes balance sheets & trading & profit & loss accounts of their business covering the period of three years, on the average profits of which their Sched. D. liability was to be computed; they also delivered to the assessor of taxes a statement showing the average profits to be £1,447 after making the adjustments required for income tax purposes. The inspector asked that the accounts should be certified by a qualified accountant in view of their magnitude, & applts. refused on the ground that there was no statutory authority for such a requirement. In due course the statement & accounts were laid before the Additional Comrs., who, not being satisfied, made an assessment of £2,000, against which applts. appealed. On the hearing of the appeal the General Comrs. were of opinion that examination of the books as proposed by applts. would occupy them for several weeks, & even then would not enable them to establish the correctness of the accounts because they were not professional accountants. The Comrs. accordingly, not being satisfied on the evidence tendered that the assessment was excessive, decided to confirm it unless within two months applts. should produce accounts audited by a qualified auditor. Applts. expressed dissatisfaction with the Comrs.' decision as being erroneous in point of law & required them to state a case:—Held: the Comrs.' decision was not ultra vires.—HUNT & CO. v. JOLY (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 165.

614b. —— —— Ordinary residence.]—Applt. lived in the United Kingdom until 1909 when she went to India to be married. Her husband died in 1916. Except for one period of five months she was not in the United Kingdom between 1909 & July, 1919, when she returned to the United Kingdom & remained for fifteen months. She spent part of each of the income tax years 1921–22 to 1927–28 in the United Kingdom, the periods spent in the United Kingdom within each year ranging from forty days to one hundred & seventy-seven days in aggregate. She lived in hotels & had no house of her own either in this country or elsewhere. She had no property in this country except investments in War Loan. From 1921 her son was at school in this country. The Special Comrs. had found, in appeal proceedings for the year 1924–25, that she was not resident & not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom. Her claim to exemption from income tax on income within the provisions of the sects. mentioned above for the year 1927–28 was refused by the I. R. Comrs. On her applying, under Finance Act, 1924 (c. 21), s. 27, for the claim to be determined by the Special Comrs., the Comrs. considered that having regard to the continuance of regular & lengthy visits to the United Kingdom the circumstances were different from those previously under consideration in relation to the year 1924–25, & they held she was resident & ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom. She appealed:—Held: the matter was a question of fact & the Comrs.' decision could not be disturbed as being erroneous in point of law.—KINLOCH v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 736.

By a deed dated Nov. 11, 1925, the tenants agreed, in consideration of the owner undertaking to execute certain alterations & repairs, to pay, from the date of completion of the alterations, & for the remaining period of the lease, an additional £125 per annum. The additional £125 per annum was described as "rent." The owner, resp. in the present case, contended that it represented repayment by instalments of the tenants' obligation to him. The premises were assessed for the purposes of Sched. A for the year 1926–27 in the amount of £250. The General Comrs. on appeal reduced the assessment to £125. The Crown appealed. She was not present at the hearing of the appeal nor was any evidence called on her behalf, & an adjournment was therefore applied for on behalf of the Crown. The General Comrs. refused the application & found, on statements made by her representative, that she was "resident abroad," not that she was not resident in the United Kingdom, "& that the income was earned abroad." When the case first came before the K. B. Distribution of profits—Assets of company written up—Loans to directors written off.]—A partnership business was converted into a limited co. in 1916, practically the whole of the shares therein being held by two resps., the original partners, who were brothers, & were also the governing directors. The accounts showed profits of £117,000 for the three years ending Dec. 1919, but no dividends were declared or paid. The co., having power to lend money, granted loans amounting to £283,000 to resps. at 5 per cent. interest, against which the capital assets were increased in value by £226,000 & profits drawn upon to the extent of £57,000. The actual cash lent was mainly provided by a bank overdraft. At a later date resps. duly passed resolutions purporting to cancel the debt of £283,000 by writing it off against the general reserve fund. Resps. having been assessed to super tax upon £283,000 :—Held : (1) the loans were genuine loans, which gave rise to no liability to super tax, even if cancelled, except as to the £57,000 taken from profit & loss account; (2) the purported release of the debt was wholly invalid & ineffectual, & resps. remained liable to the co. to repay the whole amount of the £283,000 but were not liable for any super tax thereon.—HALL v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 668a. —— Part retained by trustees—For payment of death duties.]—Applt.'s first husband, by his trust disposition & settlement, gave the whole of his property, real & personal, to trustees for payment of his debts, except those heritably secured on his real estate, his funeral expenses, & the management expenses of the trust, any legacies he might leave, & an annuity to a niece, & subject thereto, in the events which happened, the trustees were to hold the whole of his property on trust to pay out of the free income thereof an annuity to his sister, & subject to the implement of all prior purposes of the trust, the trustees were, as soon as convenient after his death, to convey all his lands & estates to applt. in life-rent during her life, with remainders over to a series of heirs, & to hold the whole of the residue of his property in trust for her in life-rent during her life & on her death to the person then entitled to the landed estates in fee. In addition to all powers competent to them by statute or common law, testator conferred on his trustees all powers of administration competent to a fee simple proprietor, &, in particular, power to sell any part of his property & to grant leases of any part of the heritable property. On the death of testator in 1919, heavy death duties became payable on the heritable estates, which were already heavily mortgaged. The trustees elected to pay the duties by sixteen half-yearly instalments, of which the earliest were met out of the proceeds of sale of testator's stocks & shares. Pending the realisation of such part of the heritable estates as, after necessary reductions of the charges thereon, would be sufficient to meet the remaining instalments, the trustees retained the estates & the management thereof in their own hands, & paid applt. only the free annual income. On the footing that she was entitled to the life-rent of the estates from the date of her husband's death, applt. was assessed to super tax for the year 1923–24 on the whole annual value of the estates as assessed to income tax, Sched. A., for the previous year, & this assessment was upheld by the Special Comrs. on appeal :—Held : applt. was assessable to super tax for the year 1923–24 only on the amount of the free income actually receivable by her from the trustees for the preceding year, the trustees & not applt. being owners of the estates for the purposes of Sched. A. for that year.—DE ROBECK (LADY) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 13 Tax Cas. 345, H. L.

668b. —— —— During minority.]—Applt.'s grandfather left a share of his estate in trust for his son, applt.'s father, for life & after the father's death in trust for the issue of the father in such shares & on such conditions as the father should appoint; in default of appointment, in trust for those children equally who should attain the age of twenty-one. The father died in 1919. His will exercised the power of appointment mentioned above & provided, inter alia, that the property settled by the will of the grandfather should on the father's death be divided into as many shares as he should have children surviving him, & that each child's share should be held by trustees on trust to pay the income to the child for twenty years from the father's death & after that period, if the child survived, to transfer the corpus to him absolutely. As the result of Chancery proceedings with reference to the father's will the ct. ordered, inter alia, that a certain sum per annum should be paid to the guardian of applt. out of the income of his share in the grandfather's estate, for his maintenance during minority. It was contended that this amount only should be brought into the computation of applt.'s liability to super-tax :—Held : the income of the share of the estate appropriated to applt. was all income of applt. for super-tax purposes.—STERN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 670a. Partnership—Payments to widow of deceased partner—For use of firm name.]—A partnership deed provided that in the event of death of a partner the remaining partners might continue to use the firm's name, marks, & goodwill, paying to the exors. of the deceased partner for this privilege the sum of £500 quarterly for a period of five years, "after which it may be enjoyed without further payment." One of the partners died, leaving one-half of his residuary estate in trust for his widow, applt. The value of deceased's share in the capital & income of the partnership was agreed & paid to the exors. in full discharge of all claims except the quarterly payments. These payments were duly made, at first in full, but later under deduction of income tax. Applt. was assessed to super tax for the year 1926–27 in respect of her half share of the four quarterly payments received in 1925–26 : —Held : the payments were income assessable to super tax.—MACKINTOSH v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 15.

671a. Loans to controlling shareholder of private company—No dividends declared.]—Applt. was the controlling shareholder of five private limited cos. From time to time he withdrew from the business of each of the cos. sums which he used to finance the purchase in his own name of premises to be occupied by himself trading as a firm. The sums so withdrawn were described in the cos.' accounts as " loans " to applt. trading as such firm. Each of the cos. had power to advance money on loan, with or without security, but, while in some cases the loans shown in the accounts to have been made to applt. were subsequently approved formally in general meeting, no previous formal authorisation was given for any of the loans. The loans were not secured by any document, & no provision was mad as to repayment or interest thereon. None of the cos. ever declared a dividend for any of the years material to the case. The Special Comrs. decided that the loans in question had not been made in the course of the businesses carried on by the cos., & that they were not genuine loans but constituted income of applt. for the purposes of super tax :—Held : there was ample evidence before the Comrs. to support their conclusion of fact.—JACOBS v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 673a. Income received by executor before assent to legacy.]—Under the will of his father, who died in Aug. 1921, resp. was entitled to a specific legacy of certain shares in two cos. Owing to difficulties in administration the exors. did not assent to the legacy until June, 1924, & in the meantime dividends had been declared upon the shares in Feb. & Aug. 1923, & in Mar. 1924, which dividends were retained by the exors. until their assent in June, 1924. Resp. was assessed to super tax upon these dividends for the years ending Apr. 5, 1924, & Apr. 5, 1925, respectively, on the basis that they were his income for the years when such dividends were payable by the cos. Resp. contended that as he was not in a position to require payment of the dividends from the exors. until June, 1924, they were not his income or receivable by him until then, & that he was wrongly assessed :—Held : the doctrine of relation of the exor.'s assent to the date of the death applied, & resp. was rightly assessed.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. HAWLEY, [1928] 1 K. 673b. Income from share of residue—When residue ascertained.]—Applt. on attaining the age of twenty-five became entitled to a quarter share in the capital & income of the residue of his father's estate, which consisted mainly of real property heavily mtged. The will provided that the property was to be divided when the youngest child attained twenty-five, which happened in 1916, & not before, & that until then the exors. & trustees should apply the surplus income, after payment of legacies, annuities, etc., in reduction of the mtge. debts. In fact the exors. did not divide the property & continued, from 1916 to 1925, to apply the surplus income to reducing the mtges. All testator's debts other than the mtge. debts had been paid off before Mar. 1919, & payment of certain legacies & annuities was begun in Dec. 1919, but no payment was made to the residuary legatees until 1921, after which small annual payments were made. The delivery of a residuary account was not necessary in this case as no legacy duty was payable on the residue. Assessments to super tax for the years 1920–21 to 1925–26 were made upon the applt. to include one-fourth of the income from the property, less annual charges, but without deduction for repayment of mtges. : —Held : so long as the mtge. or other debts remained unpaid the exors. were entitled to retain any assets coming to their hands, the applt. did not enforce conveyance to himself of his share of the residue, & therefore the income arising from his share was not his income for super tax purposes.—DAW v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., DUFF-DUNBAR v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. payment of his funeral & testamentary expenses, debts & legacies, to divide the residue amongst his children in equal shares. At the time of testator's death the estate was subject to mtges. of considerable amount. The exors. had from time to time made advances to the children, & were in the habit of crediting a beneficiary's share of the income of the residuary estate in reduction of the interest on &, if sufficient, the capital of the advances to him. One of testator's sons having been assessed to super tax for the year ending Apr. 5, 1920, on income which included the sum so credited to him in the preceding year, appealed against the assessment on the ground that the residue had not as yet been ascertained, inasmuch as there was a mtge. on the estate for a large sum, which was still outstanding, & therefore that he had no income from testator's residuary estate to which super tax could attach. The Comrs. held that in those circumstances they were precluded by Daw v. Inland Revenue Comrs., No. 673b, from holding that the residue had been ascertained, & they discharged the assessment:—Held: the question whether the residue had been ascertained & the bequest assented to by the exors. was a question of fact to be determined by the Comrs. & not by the ct.; there was no rule of law that the mere existence of an outstanding mtge. prevented the residue from being ascertained; the Comrs. had misdirected themselves in law in holding that Daw's case, No. 673b, prevented them from coming to a decision on the facts, & the case must be remitted to them for a finding whether on the facts the residue had been ascertained so as to constitute a trust fund; also, Daw's case, No. 673b, decided no principle of law, but was merely a decision on the particular facts of that case.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. SMITH, [1930] 1 K. 674b. Difference between net Schedule A. assessment & reduced rental paid under lease.]—Resp. negotiated for a lease of a house at a rent of £135 per annum, but it was eventually agreed that if resp. would pay £683, which was necessary to put the premises in a fit state for habitation, a lease would be granted at a rent of £35 per annum. The sum of £683 was paid before the execution of the lease. The circumstances in which the rent was fixed at £35 per annum were not set out in the lease, which was for a term of seven years, shortly afterwards extended for another year in consideration of resp. contributing £141 towards further repairs, but it was agreed therein that the rent under any new lease should be £140 per annum:—Held: the sums paid by resp. for repairs at the beginning of his tenancy were capital expenditure, & the difference between the net Schedule A. assessment on the house & the rent of £35 actually paid under the lease formed part of his total income for super tax purposes.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. FARGUS (1926), 10 Tax Cas. 665.

674d. ——— ———.]—Testator by his trust disposition & settlement directed his trustees to hold & retain his lands & estates at M. & to pay all duties & burdens & the cost of repair & maintenance &, in the event of his death without issue, to allow his wife "to occupy & possess during her lifetime free of rent or taxes both landlord's & tenant's" the mansion-house of M. with the offices & furniture & other effects therein & the game on his estates. Testator having died without issue, his widow, under the terms of the trust, occupied the mansion-house & lands at M. during the year ending Apr. 5, 1920.

On an appeal by her to the Special Comrs. against an additional assessment to super tax for the year ending Apr. 5, 1921, on a sum representing (a) the annual value of the mansion-house & lands, & (b) certain payments by the trustees for rates & wages, the Comrs. upheld the additional assessment, but their determination was reversed by the First Division of the Ct. of Session as the Ct. of Exchequer in Scotland:—Held: (1) as occupier in her own right of the mansion-house & lands the widow was rightly assessed on the annual value of her free enjoyment as being income liable to super tax. The liability of the occupier to super tax is not determined by the question whether he has power to let or otherwise to convert the annual value into money; (2) the money paid by the trustees for rates was paid for the benefit of the widow & ought to be included in her total income for super tax purposes.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. MILLER, [1930] A. 674e. Profits of partnership—Executor of deceased partner becoming partner.]—Applt. was the sole extrix. & residuary legatee of her late husband, who, until his death in 1916, was a partner in a firm. At the time of his death large sums were owing to the firm from residents in enemy countries, & by arrangement with the Inland Revenue these were allowed as bad debts, on the understanding that any sums received in respect of them should be brought into account for income tax as profits of the firm of the year in which they were received. On her husband's death applt. became a partner in the firm. In 1921 a sum was received in respect of the enemy debts, in respect of which the firm was assessed to income tax in the year ended Apr. 5, 1923. By arrangement between the partners applt. bore a proportion of the assessment in respect of the sum so received proportionate to her late husband's share of the profits:—Held: no part of the sum received in respect of the enemy debts formed any part of applt.'s total income for super tax purposes.—LASSEN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1927), 138 L. T. 463; 13 Tax Cas. 229.

674f. —— Distributed by agreement after accumulation.]—In 1918 one of the partners in a firm died. Availing himself of certain provisions in the deed of partnership he had by his will nominated his son to be a partner & to succeed to his interests in the firm as from the date of his death. The partnership deed made such a nomination subject to the consent of the other partners, provided that such consent should not be unreasonably withheld. This consent was not given & was eventually, in 1926, formally refused. Throughout this period what would have been the deceased father's share of the profits was carried to a suspense account & remained undistributed. Under the provisions of the partnership deed if the son were admitted as a partner this share of the profits from the date of the father's death to the date of the son's admission would belong wholly to applt. in the first case; but if the son were not admitted these profits would be divisible equally between the first applt. & the three other partners. Two of the latter three retired & relinquished any claim they might have in the matter. It was agreed in 1926 that the accumulated profits should be distributed as to 25 per cent. to the one other then remaining original partner (whose exors. were applts. in the second case) & as to 75 per cent. to the first applt. This distribution was not actually made until 1928. The son in 1926 & again in 1928 attempted unsuccessfully to contest by litigation the validity of these proceedings. The Crown contended that the parties were entitled, on the basis of the 1926 agreement, to shares of 75 per cent. & 25 per cent. respectively in the profits in question year by year from 1918 onwards & were assessable to super tax accordingly. The special comrs. on appeal upheld this view. Applts. demanded cases:—Held: the first applt. was assessable in respect only of the 25 per cent. to which he was entitled in any event & in the second case there was no liability.—FRANKLIN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., SWAYTHLING'S EXORS. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 674g. Undistributed profits of company—Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21—"Reasonable time"—Termination by liquidation.]—The share capital of a limited co. registered in 1922 was held by four persons, & the co. was a co. to which above sect. applied. In Feb. 1924, the directors came to the conclusion that the prosperity of the business, which was speculative, might not continue. Accounts for the year to Mar. 31, 1924, were prepared, showing a profit of approximately £34,000, & were presented at the general meeting on May 14, 1924. No dividend was declared & at the same meeting a resolution for the voluntary winding-up of the co. was passed, & a liquidator appointed. The Special Comrs. issued a direction to the co. that for super tax purposes the co.'s income for the year ended Mar. 31, 1924, should be deemed to be the income of the four shareholders. This direction was discharged by the Special Comrs. on appeal, but was restored by the Board of Referees on a re-hearing. The contention of the co. was that above sect. had no application in the circumstances of the case, & that on the passing of the resolution for winding-up it had no power to declare a dividend:—Held: the co., by going into liquidation while the "reasonable time" contemplated by the Act was still running, terminated that reasonable time, & that in view of the intended liquidation it would have been reasonable for them to have distributed the whole of the available income.—SUTCLIFFE (LIONEL), LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 171.

674h. —— —— What amounts to income—Profits appropriated to endowment policies.]—Applt. co. was formed in 1918 as a private limited co. by a husband & wife, who at all times held all its issued capital except five one-shilling shares. The objects for which it was established did not include the carrying on of any business to which the Assurance Co. Act, 1909 (c. 49), applies. The only business that the co. carried on was the issuing of endowment policies & the management of the funds received by way of premiums for such policies. The only policies issued were a small number of policies issued to the husband & wife in 1918 & 1919, payable in 1928 & 1929. After the surrender of certain policies in force only for a few months in 1918 & 1919 the only policies remaining were four policies, the consideration for each of which had been the transfer in one amount to the co. as a lump sum premium, of National War Bonds of a face value equal to the amount assured by the policy. Under these policies the co. undertook to repay the sum assured "together with any bonus which at the time of payment will be attached to the policy." There was no provision in the policies or in the co.'s articles giving the policy-holders a title to any share in the co.'s profits. The co. each year "appropriated" to the account kept for each of the policies an amount approximately corresponding to the interest on the bonds transferred as the premium for such policy & made corresponding investments, which were treated as held against the policy:—Held: the interest in question was income of the co. for the purposes of sect. 21.—ENDOWMENT CO., LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1929), 14 Tax Cas. 353.

674j. —— —— —— Sums applied in repayment of share or loan capital or debt.]—A private limited co. was incorporated in Mar. 1915, to purchase from H. certain freehold & leasehold properties known as the C. Estate, subject to mtges. owing thereon amounting to £238,000, which were vested in H., who also held all the shares in the co. with the exception of two which were held by two directors of the co.,

who together with H. were the directors of the co. The Arts. of Assocn. of the co. contained an article, No. 95, which provided that "so long as any mtge. or charge affecting any property of the co. shall remain outstanding & unsatisfied the net profits of the co. shall be applied in the discharge & satisfaction, so far as the same shall be available, of the principal moneys & the moneys secured by any mtge. or charge for the time being outstanding & unsatisfied, unless the co. shall by special resolution direct to the contrary." There was also a deed poll executed by H. in Nov. 1915, by which it was provided that the net profits of the co. should be applied, without any deduction for interest on mtge. debts to which he was entitled, in the discharge & satisfaction of the principal moneys & interest payable in respect of the mtge. debts mentioned in the sched. to the deed poll, to which H. was not beneficially entitled. These outstanding mtges. were afterwards taken over by H. No dividends had ever been paid by the co., but the mtges. had been reduced from £238,000 to £186,000, & the co. had also accumulated a reserve fund of £80,000. The Special Comrs. made a direction under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21, which was confirmed by the Board of Referees, that for the purposes of assessment to super tax the actual income from all sources of the co. should for the periods ended June 24, 1924, 1925, & 1926, respectively, be deemed to be the income of the members of the co.:—Held: (1) neither art. 95 of the Arts. of Assocn. of the co. nor the fact that no special resolution had been passed by the co. altering the requirements of that article precluded the Special Comrs. from making a direction under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21 (1), that the co. had not distributed a reasonable part of its income to its members, & therefore the income of the co. should for the purposes of assessment to super tax be deemed to be the income of its members; (2) the fact that Finance Act, 1927 (c. 10), s. 31 (1), expressly provided that sums expended or applied in redemption or repayment of any share or loan capital or debt should be regarded as income available for distribution among the members of the co.; & therefore in terms applied to the present case, did not prevent such sums being regarded as available for distribution among the members of the co. under the general provisions contained in Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21 (1); (3) where there has been no distribution by a co. among its members of a reasonable part of its actual income, & in consequence a direction has been made by the Special Comrs. under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21 (1), that the actual income from all sources of the co. shall for the purposes of assessment to super tax be deemed to be the income of the members, the whole of the income of the co. & not merely that part of its income that might reasonably have been distributed by the co. among its members, is to be treated as being covered by the direction of the Comrs.—COLVILLE ESTATE, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1930] 2 K. 674k. —— —— —— ——.]—G., Ltd., was a private co. incorporated in 1918. At all times material in the present case the whole capital was held by two persons, who were also the co.'s sole directors. G., Ltd., in pursuance of one of the objects for which it was formed, acquired in 1918 the whole issued share capital of another co. The funds necessary for this transaction were obtained partly by loans from the two directors, & partly by a loan from a bank obtained on the conditions (a) that all the shares so acquired were deposited with the bank as security, & (b) that all dividends on the shares were paid to the bank, as & when received, in reduction of the amount due to the bank. From 1919 to 1923 dividends were received & paid over under this arrangement. During these years G., Ltd., had no other income. Its expenses were met by loans from the directors who also from time to time lent to the co. further sums which were paid to the bank to reduce the balance due from the co. At May 21, 1922, the co.'s financial year ended on May 21, the amount owing to the bank was £4,965. In Nov. 1922, the bank advanced further sums with which the co. made other investments. The amount owing to the bank at May 21, 1923, was £7,933. The Special Comrs. issued "directions" under Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21, that the dividends received by G., Ltd., during the year to May 21, 1922, £19,500, & during the year to May 21, 1923, £6,500, should be deemed to be income of the two shareholders for super tax purposes. On appeal the Special Comrs. discharged these "directions." The I. R. Comrs. required the case to be reheard by the Board of Referees, who restored the "directions." The co. appealed to the High Ct.:—Held: (a) as regards the first year, the co. could not make any distribution & the decision of the Board of Referees could not stand; (b) as regards the second year, the Board of Referees were entitled to come to the decision which they had given, as there was a balance available for distribution, the amount of the dividends received having been in excess of the amount owing to the bank in respect of the 1918 loan.—GLAZED KID, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 681a. ——— ———.]—Lord M., who died on Jan. 7, 1917, by his will bequeathed an annuity of £25,000 free of income tax to his wife. The Ct. of Chancery decided that the annuity was bequeathed free of both income & super tax. The trustees of the will appealed against assessments to income tax for the five years ended Apr. 5, 1926, made upon them in respect of so much of the annuity as was not paid out of profits & gains brought into charge to tax. The will provided for the payment of the annuity primarily out of the income of the residuary estate, but, if insufficient, resort might be had to the capital of the residuary estate from time to time to make good the deficiency. The trustees alleged that for the purpose of arriving at the assessment under r. 21 of the rules applicable to all scheds. & Finance Act, 1927 (c. 10), s. 26, the amount of the annuity ought to be taken to be £25,000 with the appropriate addition to make the grossed amount which would produce £25,000 net after deduction of income tax only, which for example in 1925–26 would have been £31,250; & no addition should be made in respect of any super tax. The Crown claimed that there ought to be added that portion of the super tax assessed on the recipient of the annuity which bore the same proportion to the total super tax assessed on the recipient as the sum of £25,000, together with additions calculated on a similar basis for the previous year bore to the total income from all sources of the recipient during that year, & that a further addition should then be made to the sum so arrived at sufficient to make the total sum, after deduction of income tax at the rate current during the year, produce the sum so arrived at. The comrs. held that the payment of the super tax by the trustees was an additional annuity to Lady M., & that in computing the amount of the annuity for the purpose of assessment under r. 21 & sect. 26 the super tax with the income tax appropriate thereto must be included:—Held: there had been given to Lady M. an additional annuity of such a sum as, after the deduction of the income tax thereon, would leave the amount of super tax for which she was chargeable in respect of the annuity given by the will, & income tax was payable on that additional annuity.—MICHELHAM'S TRUSTEES v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., MICHELHAM (EXECUTORS OF DOWAGER LADY) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. s1. Lump sum paid to retiring partner.]—One of the partners of a firm having retired, the partnership business was continued by the remaining partners, & the retiring partner received £1,500 "in full satisfaction of his whole share & interest in the profits of the year current at the date of dissolution of the original partnership," & it was further provided that there should be paid to him quarterly "out of the future profits of the business" sums amounting to £500 for the first year, & diminishing gradually to £100 for the fifth year:—Held: (1) the £1,500 was not a share of the profits of the firm, but the price or consideration paid for a discharge by the retiring partner of his claim to participate in the profits of the firm prior to his retirement, & the agreement did not affect the ascertainment of their share of the profits up to that date; (2) the quarterly payments "out of the future profits" did fall to be taken into account in estimating their profits after that date.—RUTHERFORD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1924] S. t1. Annuity & income tax thereon.]—By an antenuptial marriage settlement a husband conveyed funds to trustees for payment of an annuity of £600 free of income tax to his wife, & for payment of the balance of the free income to himself. By a subsequent agreement, following upon divorce, the wife discharged her claims under the settlement, & the husband granted a mandate to the settlement trustees to pay an annuity of £600 free of tax to the wife, & the balance of the free income to himself. The intention of the agreement was declared to be that the wife should receive an absolutely free annuity of £600, & the husband bound himself to relieve her of income tax thereon in the event of her being found liable to pay it:—Held: in computing the husband's income for super tax he was entitled to deduct, in respect of the annuity, such a sum as would, after deduction of income tax, amount to £600; & that rule 23 (2) did not invalidate the payment of £600 in full to the wife, in respect (a) that the annuity was payable under the agreement out of net income belonging to the husband, which had already borne tax, & (b) that the husband had undertaken that the wife could receive such a sum as, after deduction of tax, should amount to £600.—HUTCHISON v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1930] S. sy. Allowance by father to son—Finance Act, 1922, s. 20 (1).]—A father, who had paid a sum of money to his son, a married man, of full age, under a gratuitous bond by which he had bound himself to pay to the son an annuity for a period of three years, claimed to deduct the sum in question in calculating the amount of his total income for super tax purposes, on the ground that above sect. (c) applied to the case:—Held: the deduction was inadmissible, in respect that the income disponed fell exactly within the description contained in above sect. (b), being for a period of less than six years, & it must accordingly be deemed to be the father's income for super tax purposes.—GILLIES v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] S. C. sz. Loss on purchase of shares in other companies.]—In 1920 applt. co. was incorporated in India & entered into agreements with two English cos. what had promoted it & were at all times practically the only shareholders, to purchase from them a large block of shares in B. C., Ltd., the consideration being the allotment to them of an equal number of fully paid shares of Rs. 200 each in applt. co. Half the shares were to be, & were, allotted immediately; the English cos. could retain the B. C., Ltd., shares for 3 years, & pledge them to secure their own liabilities. In 1923, no further shares having been allotted & no B. C., Ltd., shares delivered, a supplemental agreement was made under which the English cos. in 1924 sold all the B. C., Ltd., shares, the price realised & dividends being credited to applt. co.; it was part of this agreement that the shares already allotted should satisfy the original purchase consideration. In respect of super tax for 1924–25 under Indian Income Tax Act, 1922, applt. co. alleged that the transaction had resulted in a loss to them which they were entitled to deduct from profits otherwise accruing. They contended that in ascertaining the result of the transaction the allotted shares must be taken at their normal value of Rs. 200 each. It was found by the commissioner that in 1920 each share in applt. co. was worth Rs. 98:—Held: no loss was proved as the English cos. were liable to applt. co. for the amount by which the sum realised was less than the nominal value of the allotted shares.—TRUSTEES CORPN. 687a. ——.]—The exor. of a deceased taxpayer appealed against super tax assessments which had been made on deceased in respect of his wife's income from settled funds & from certain shares. Deceased had obtained an advance of £11,000 from the trustees of his marriage settlement on the security of shares not forming part of the settled funds. Subsequently he had charged his life interest in the settled funds, thereby forfeiting it in favour of his wife. Later he was adjudicated bankrupt, & the mortgaged shares which had become practically valueless were sold by the Official Receiver for a nominal consideration to the wife, who thus became entitled to the equity of redemption. In 1920 the shares again became very valuable, & the trustees, to whom the £11,000 was still owing, issued an originating summons to the parties interested, & as a result the ct. sanctioned a compromise by which the trustees were to retain each year any amount by which the wife's aggregate income from the settled funds & the mortgaged shares, after deducting income tax & super tax on that aggregate income, should exceed £4,000. The whole balance of the debt to the trustee was thus paid off within fifteen months & deceased's exor. contended that the surplus income so applied should be deducted from the wife's total income in computing the deceased's liability to super tax:—Held: the surplus income of the wife appropriated by the trustees formed part of deceased's income for purposes of super tax.—PERKINS' EXECUTOR v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 91 i. Who are contributories—Liability on loan guarantee shares—Compulsory allotment.]—The F. Co-operative Agricultural Society, Ltd., was incorporated & registered under Industrial & Provident Societies Act, 1893. The committee were empowered by the rules of the society to obtain loans "to an extent not exceeding such amount as may be authorised by a general meeting." The rules further provided that, for the purpose of securing advances, the society might issue to every member such number of loan guarantee shares of the nominal value of £1 each as would be equal to the number of ordinary shares held by each such member, & that each member should be bound to apply for, & accept, allotment of such loan guarantee shares when making application for ordinary shares. When the allotment of the ordinary shares of the Society took place, no loan guarantee shares were then issued or applied for. In consequence of losses which the society incurred, the committee found it necessary to obtain a bank overdraft amounting to £1,700. Subsequent trading proved unsuccessful, & in the year 1925 seven members of the committee gave their personal guarantees to the N. Banking Co., Ltd., in respect of the society's indebtedness. Notices were sent out convening a special meeting of the society & intimating that members would be asked to apply for loan guarantee shares, & that, failing applications, such shares would be issued to members to the extent to which they were obliged to accept the same. This meeting was held, &, no applications for loan guarantee shares being received, such shares were forthwith allotted to members in accordance with the terms of the notice convening the meeting. An order for the winding up of the society was made, & the chief clerk included in the list of contributories the names of the persons to whom loan guarantee shares had been allotted. The members affected moved to vary the chief clerk's certificate on the ground that they had been wrongly included in the list of contributories:—Held: the liability of each member to accept loan guarantee shares was an original liability from the time of his joining the society, & appts. were liable, as contributories, in respect of the loan guarantee shares allotted to them.—Re FOREGLEN CO-OPERATIVE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, LTD., [1930] N. 831a. Ascertainment of period of twenty-one years.]—Testator, who died in Nov. 1893, gave his net residue, subject to certain life annuities which did not exhaust the income, in trust for a bachelor's children who should attain twenty-one, with a gift over in default. In Mar. 1896, the judge ordered the surplus income to be accumulated for twenty-one years from testator's death, i.e., until Nov. 6, 1914, or until the bachelor's previous death without leaving issue. During this twenty-one years' period the bachelor married & died leaving three children, two of whom were still living. Temporary orders for maintenance were made. In Nov. 1914, the judge declared that as from Nov. 6, 1914, the two children then living were entitled to maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), but that notwithstanding sub-sect. 2 any income not so applied passed as on an intestacy. In July, 1927, the elder child attained twenty-one, & her contingent moiety vested in possession. The question having arisen whether, having regard to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 165, the order of Nov. 1914 ought still to be acted on with regard to the younger child's contingent moiety :—Held : (1) the effect of sect. 165 was that the years of minority accumulation, which commenced during the twenty-one years' period, were not to be reckoned in ascertaining that period, & the income of the younger child's contingent moiety must in the first place be applied for her maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 43 (1), & the balance could be validly accumulated under sub-sect. 2 ; (2) quite apart from sect. 165, the moment the elder child attained a vested interest as a member of the contingent class, there could be no question of intestacy as to any part of the capital or income.—Re Maber, Ward v. Maber, [1928] Ch. 88 ; 97 L. 1126 iv. —— —— ——.]—A child is further protected by Children's Protection Act, R. S. O. 1927, c. 279, s. 25 (3), which provides that when it has been abandoned or deserted, or has been allowed by the parent to be brought up by a Children's Aid Society, or by another person, in circumstances which show that the parent was unmindful of his parental duties, the judge shall not give the child to the parent, unless satisfied that, having regard to the welfare of the child, he is a fit person to have the custody of it. When once a child has been taken from its parents & made a ward of a Children's Aid Society & then placed out with foster parents, the parents have forfeited their natural rights, & others have acquired rights. The words "having regard to the welfare of the child" indicate that the intention of the statute is that the judge, in determining whether the parent is a fit person to have the child restored to him, should contrast the situation of the child in the care of its foster parents with that which it would occupy if restored to its natural parents.—Re CHIEMELEWSKI, [1928] 2 D. S. S. 1920, c. 155, s. 7 (b). Therefore, although the ct. concludes that the parent has not been "unmindful of his parental duties" within said section, it should not, nevertheless, order the child to be restored to him if in its opinion the child's welfare in the widest sense, i.e. its material, moral, religious & physical well-being, requires that the order should be refused.—Re ROSS, ROSS v. MCNEILL & MCNEILL, [1928] 3 D. O., c. 186, by the father of an infant, for an order for the custody of the infant, it was held as the infant was not at the time resident in Ontario, the Supreme Ct. of Ontario had no jurisdiction. As the procedure under Infants' Act is an alternative procedure to the procedure by writ of habeas corpus, the jurisdiction must be limited to cases where a writ would be granted; & a writ will not be granted where the person directed to be produced in ct. is without the jurisdiction. It is only in extraordinary circumstances that the ct. will appoint a guardian to an infant who resides abroad, & has no property in the jurisdiction; & in this case the circumstances were not so extraordinary as to call for the exercise of this jurisdiction.—Re SHAND, [1928] 2 D. An order awarding the custody of a child is subject to the doctrine of res judicata with respect to all questions affecting the matter up to the time it was rendered. If, however, a change is shown to have arisen in the circumstances of the parties since the order was made which warrants a reconsideration of the question, the ct. will not be bound by the order, but will use its discretion in view of the altered conditions, always keeping in mind the fact that the welfare of the child is the paramount consideration.—WALLIS v. WALLIS & GRANT, [1929] 2 D. The parties, with a view to utilising pltfs.' dynamo in connection with the "C. A. Defts. were to be allowed a commission of 10 per cent. on cost price, & the ultimate profits were to be equally divided, but the agreement was not to create a partnership. Defts. during the pendency of the agreement received certain testimonials. After the termination of the agreement, pltfs. brought an action to restrain defts. from using or publishing these testimonials, & moved for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: defts. were sole purchasers or sole consignees of pltfs.' goods upon special terms, that there could not be implied from the agreement a contract between the parties, that all information of which defts. became possessed during the pendency of the agreement should not afterwards be used by defts. for other purposes, & that a fiduciary relationship had not been established between the parties as would have existed had defts. been in fact pltfs.' agents.—ACCUMULATOR INDUSTRIES, LTD. v. VANDERVELL (C. 810 v. —— ——.]—A grocer kept on his premises a soda water fountain, from which he filled empty aerated water bottles tendered to him by members of the public. Among the bottles so tendered were some embossed with the name of a firm of aerated water manufacturers. The manufacturers intimated to the grocer that, when selling their waters, they always retained the property in their bottles, & that, in using their bottles without their consent, the grocer was participating in the illegal use of their property. The grocer having ignored their intimation, the manufacturers sought interdict against his use of their bottles. After a proof as to the circumstances in which the manufacturers allowed to their customers & to the public possession of their bottles:—Held: members of the public were not precluded from acquiring a right to use the manufacturers' bottles, & the tendering by members of the public to the grocer of bottles embossed with the manufacturers' name did not certiorate the grocer that such bottles were in fact the property of the manufacturers, & the grocer was under no duty to the manufacturers to inquire into the history of each bottle tendered to him; interdict refused.—LEITCH & Co., LTD. v. LEYDON; BARR & Co., LTD. v. MACGEOGHEGAN, [1930] S. Deft. on this procedure summons asked for further & better particulars of the secret processes:—Held: deft. was entitled to such particulars, but that they must be disclosed only to three experts not trade rivals of pltf., deft. himself & his legal advisers, & the order must be in such a form as to prevent the persons to whom the secret processes were communicated from disclosing them, & copies of the particulars must be returned to pltf. when the proceedings were closed.—SORBO RUBBER SPONGE PRODUCTS, LTD. v. DEFRIES (1930), 47 R. 853a. Conversion of goods—Perishable goods.]—Pltfs., who were an American co., carried on business as exporters of fruit. They had been exporting fruit from Colombia for many years, & they had a large number of contracts with the growers of bananas & dealt with about 97 per cent. of the exportable bananas in that country. Under those contracts the bananas which were to be sold to pltfs. became the property of pltfs. as soon as they were severed from the trees. Defts. imported into England a cargo of bananas, under contracts which they had made with a co-operative society formed by some of the banana growers in Colombia, who desired to break down pltfs.' monopoly & find another outlet for their produce. Pltfs. claimed that 2,041 stems of bananas, an unidentified part of the cargo imported by defts., were from growers with whom pltfs. had contracts, or were from estates covered by those contracts, & they obtained an interim injunction restraining defts. from converting to their own use or otherwise dealing with or in any way disposing of bananas, the property of pltfs., save by delivery of the same to pltfs. or their agents:—Held: the order for an interim injunction was unsatisfactory & embarrassing, because (1) the bananas were perishable; (2) the order did not identify the bananas, dealings in which it was sought to restrain; (3) it did not order delivery to pltfs. The order must be varied by ordering the sale of a specified number of bananas to be selected.—UNITED FRUIT CO. v. FREDERICK LEYLAND & Co., LTD. (1930), 144 L. T. 97; 47 T. L. R. 33; 74 Sol. By its arts. of assocn. membership of the society was open to persons qualified in certain ways approved by the council of the society, & paying a certain entrance fee & yearly subscriptions; & members were authorised to use the letters "M. S. A." as a professional designation. Deft., who was an architect, but had never been & was not a member of the society, used the letters "M. S. A." as a professional designation. The society brought an action against him for an injunction, which he did not defend, & by its statement of claim alleged, among other things, that the continuous & exclusive use of the letters by its members had given the letters a definite meaning & value in the minds of the public, & the use of them by unauthorised persons would damage the society. On motion for judgment in default of appearance:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to an injunction.—SOCIETY OF ARCHITECTS v. KENDRICK (1910), 102 L. T. 526; 26 T. L. R. 433.

906b. Use of professional designation implying membership—Of professional institution.]—Pltf. society was incorporated in 1885, under Cos. Act, 1867, as a co. not for gain without the use of the word "limited" under licence of the Board of Trade. In 1886 pltf. society recommended its members to adopt as their professional designation the use after their names of the term "Incorporated Accountant." By 1905 that designation had come to mean to that section of the public who had dealings with accountants a member of the society, which, by its system of tests & examinations, had conferred upon its members the valuable privilege of a recognised status for ability & integrity. In that year deft. association was incorporated under the Cos. Acts as a co. limited by guarantee. Shortly after its incorporation its council recommended its members to adopt the designation "Incorporated Accountant" with the addition of the abbreviation "Lon. Assocn." In an action by pltf. society against deft. assocn. & G., one of its members, claiming (a) an injunction to restrain G. from using in connection with his business of accountant the designation "incorporated accountant," & (b) an injunction to restrain deft. society from holding out, by advertisements or otherwise, that its members were entitled to use such designation:—Held: the designation "incorporated accountant" was a fancy & not a descriptive term, & had come to denote membership of the society, &, therefore, that the unauthorised use of it inflicted an injury on pltf. society, in respect of which it was 186a. ——.]—On Oct. 30, 1929, about 5.30 p.m., pltf. & her husband arrived at defts.' hotel with their suit cases & engaged a room for the night with a view to attending a dance in the neighbourhood. After having tea in their room they dressed for the dance. Pltf., having replaced a diamond ring which she was wearing by a pearl ring, put the diamond ring into a jewel-case & placed that in her suit case, which she latched but did not lock. When they went down to dinner pltf.'s husband locked the door of their room & took the key with him. After dinner they returned to their room, & on leaving it to go to the dance pltf.'s husband again locked the door & then handed the key in at the hotel office. About 2.30 a.m. the following morning they returned to their room in the hotel, having got the key from the hall porter. On getting up between 8 & 9 a.m. pltf. opened her suit case & jewel case & found that the diamond ring was missing. Defts. were immediately informed of the loss & search was made for the ring, but without result. Defts. had exhibited in the hotel a copy of Innkeepers' Liability Act, 1863 (c. 41), s. 1, & in the room occupied by pltf. a notice that all articles of value should be deposited at the office. Pltf. brought an action in the county ct. against defts. as insurers for damages for having failed to keep the ring safely. At the trial the above facts were proved or admitted, & it was found as a fact that the pltf. had taken reasonable care of the ring; but the judge, thinking that he was bound to do so by a previous case, gave judgment for defts. On appeal to the Div. Ct. :—Held : there was evidence to support the finding that pltf. had taken reasonable care of the ring & accordingly that the loss of it was not due to negligence on her part; the fact that she had not deposited the ring at the office in compliance with the notice did not imply that she had retained the protection of it in her own hands to the relief of defts.; & therefore that she was entitled to judgment against defts. in the action.—CARPENTER v. HAYMARKET HOTEL, LTD., [1931] 1 K. 18a. Type calculated to elude observation—Insurers refused benefit of clause.]—Deft. co. insured a quantity of leather, consigned c.i.f., for a voyage from New York to Tunis, by a certificate of insurance which provided : " This certificate represents & takes the place of the policy & conveys all the rights of the original policy-holder as fully as if the property were covered by a special policy direct to the holder of this certificate." One of the conditions of the policy was in much smaller print than other parts of the policy & was as follows : " In case of loss or damage to the property hereby insured the loss shall be reported to the representatives of the co., or, if there be no representative of the co., to Lloyd's agent, as soon as the goods are landed or the loss is known or expected." On the day after the arrival of the goods at Tunis the consignee sold them to pltf., who found them to have been damaged by salt water. In an action by pltf. on the certificate of insurance deft. co. contended, (1) that pltf. was not the right person to sue, & (2) that the clause in the policy as to giving notice within a limited time had not been complied with :—Held : the certificate, having been issued by deft. co. itself, enured to the benefit of pltf., & since pltf. did not know of the condition as to notice, & since the clause as to notice was in such small print that it was not such as a reasonable man, reading with reasonable care, would regard as forming part of the contractual terms, pltf. was entitled to recover.—KOSKAS v. STANDARD MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD. 171a. —— —— ——.]—A proposal form for the insurance of a motor-bus was signed by the person wishing to effect the insurance, but the answers to the questions therein, which were warranted to be true & to form the basis of the contract, were filled in by the insurance co.'s agent, who, although told the true facts, wrote, for some unexplained reason, answers which were untrue in a material respect. The agent was not authorised by the insurance co. to fill in proposal forms, & it did not appear that the co. knew that he had in fact done so. His duties were to procure persons to effect insurances & to see, as far as he could, that proposal forms were correctly filled up ; he was not authorised to give a cover note or to enter into a policy of insurance. A policy was issued to the person who had signed the proposal form, & during its currency he made a claim under it, but the insurance co. repudiated liability on the ground of the untrue statements in the proposal form :—Held : the agent of the insurance co. in filling in the proposal form was merely the amanuensis of the proposer, that the knowledge of the true facts by the agent could not be imputed to the insurance co., & therefore that the insurance co. was entitled to repudiate liability on the ground of the untrue statements in the proposal form.—NEWSHOLME BROS. v. ROAD TRANSPORT & GENERAL INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1929] 2 K. 156 i. General rule.]—The cause of action upon which A. recovered against an insurance co. was different from that upon which it recovered against B., but that difference did not defeat the right of the insurance co. to be subrogated to the rights of B. The test of subrogation is, "Can the right to be insisted on be deemed to be one, the enforcement of which will diminish the loss?": COMMERCIAL FINANCE CORPN., LTD. v. MERCHANTS CASUALTY INSCE. 157 iv. —— —— ——.]—Where in a contract of insurance a provision for subrogation contains no limitations or restrictions the insurer's right of subrogation should not be restricted within narrower limits than equity would have given him in the absence of the provision. A motion by the insurer under such a contract for an order compelling the insured to permit the former to use the latter's name in suing third parties was therefore allowed, where the insured pressed for the order because of its belief that the cause of the loss might eventually be found to have been the result of a tort rather than a breach of contract.—NORTHERN ASSCE. Act, &, therefore, in view of the weight of opinion on the interpretation of the latter Act, the said provision of the Insurance Act does not entitled the insurer to become the assignee of part only of the insured's claim. 203a. —— —— Refusal of company to insure.]—Applts. were in possession of a motor car under a hire-purchase agreement, it being a term of the agreement that they would insure the car with the B. insurance co. The B. co. refused to accept the insurance "owing to information received" & told applts.' brokers that this was their reason for refusal; but the brokers did not communicate the fact to applts., but told them that the B. co. had refused the insurance because they did not cover that class of car. Applts.' brokers then succeeded in obtaining an insurance of the car with the L. co., but when the original period of that insurance was coming to an end the L. co. wrote that they could not invite renewal. Applts. had not in fact wished for a renewal & had not made any application to the L. co., & they then effected an insurance with the present resps. The proposal form of resps. contained a number of questions & a stipulation that the truth of the answers to those questions should be the basis of the contract. To a question "Has any co. or underwriter declined to insure?" applts. answered, No; the fact being that without applts.' knowledge the B. co. had declined to accept their insurance, & the L. co., as applts. were aware, had intimated that they would not renew. Applts. claimed on their policy with resps., & resps. refused to pay, on the ground that the question in the proposal form had been answered untruly & that there had been concealment of a material fact. Applts. brought an action on the policy & the judge, by whom the action was tried, gave judgment for resps. Applts. appealed :—Held : as regards the B. co. the answer of applts. was untrue, & the fact that they were unaware of its untruth was immaterial; & as regards the L. co., although there had been no refusal to renew because there had not been any actual request for renewal the intimation that the co. would not invite renewal was a material fact which ought to have been disclosed to resps., & was in fact if not in words a refusal to insure within the meaning of the question.—HOLT'S MOTORS, LTD. v. SOUTH EAST LANCASHIRE INSURANCE CO., LTD. 218a. Representation of underwriter—Estoppel of insurer.]—The claimant owned a motor car which he sometimes let out on hire & sometimes used himself for his own pleasure. He wished to insure the car, & instructed brokers to effect an insurance. The brokers interviewed the underwriter of resps., & he showed them a form of policy & said that it would cover both private pleasure & private hire by the insured. The claimant on being informed of this signed a proposal form for a policy & his broker stated in the form that the purpose for which the car would be used was "private hire"; the broker meant thereby that private hire would be the principal risk. Resps. then issued to the claimant a policy which in words covered "private pleasure or private hire," but which provided that the signed proposal form was incorporated with it & formed the basis of the contract. An accident occurred while the claimant was using the car for his own pleasure, & he made a claim under the policy. Resps. refused to pay, on the ground that as the proposal form was the basis of the policy & only related to the car while on hire an accident occurring while the car was not on hire was not covered. The dispute was referred to arbitration, & the arbitrator awarded in favour of the claimant, subject to the decision of a special case. On argument of the case :—Held : the arbitrator had acted rightly in admitting evidence of the interview between the brokers & the underwriter, & even apart from such evidence, as there was an inconsistency between the proposal form & the policy, the later document must prevail. On the facts, resps. were estopped from disputing the claim because their underwriter knew that the claimant had taken out the policy in reliance on his representation that it would cover private pleasure.—KAUFMAN v. BRITISH SURETY INSURANCE CO., LTD. M. sent to L. & Co. particulars of a proposed insurance against fire for pltf. on his dwelling-house, & a policy was issued by defts. to pltf. The policy provided that if there was any misrepresentation as to any fact material to be known for estimating the risk, or any omission to state such fact, defts. should not be liable. Pltf. did not disclose the fact that his house had previously been burnt down & that an insurance co. had paid him in respect of that loss :—Held : (1) M. was not defts.' agent, & M.'s knowledge of the earlier fire, whenever acquired, could not be imputed to defts., & pltf. had concealed a material fact & thereby relieved defts. from all liability under the policy; (2) even if M. was defts'. agent, his knowledge acquired prior to his appointment as agent could not be imputed to defts.—O'KEEFE v. LONDON & EDINBURGH INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1928] N. 252a. ——.]—By an agreement between two insurance cos., the E. Co. & the N. Co., therein described as a participation agreement, it was (inter alia) provided that the N. Co. should be entitled to & accept a quota of a one-eighth of all risks accepted by the E. Co. through its marine department. The participation was fixed at 50 per cent. of the share retained by the E. Co. at its own risk of all marine assurances accepted on or after a specified date, with a maximum limit on any one ship. The liability of the two cos. was to commence automatically at the same time, the expressed intention being that the two cos. should participate pari passu in all marine insurances accepted by the E. Co. The N. Co. was to be entitled to a proportionate part of the net premiums & other benefits received by the E. Co., & was to bear its proportionate share of losses. The E. Co. was alone to settle all claims which might arise under its policies & the N. Co. was to be bound by the settlement. The E. Co. was to receive from the N. Co. commissions on the net premiums & on the profits derived by the N. Co. from the whole of the business under the agreement. By another clause in the agreement the N. Co. was absolutely bound in every case to follow the fortunes of the E. Co. No stamped policy of assurance was ever issued to the E. Co. by the N. Co. in respect of any risk coming within the agreement. The N. Co. having been ordered to be wound up by the ct., the E. Co. claimed to prove in respect of certain claims arising under the agreement. The liquidator disallowed the claim:—Held: the agreement was a contract for "sea insurance," & not being expressed in a duly stamped policy was invalid as not complying with the requirements of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41).—ENGLISH INSURANCE CO. v. NATIONAL BENEFIT ASSURANCE CO. 432a. —— —— —— Unless notice of agency acquired before repossession.]—By Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 53 (2), a broker who effects a policy of marine insurance on behalf of a person who employs him for that purpose has a lien on the policy in respect of any balance on any insurance account which may be due to him from that person, unless, when the debt was incurred, he had reason to believe that such person was only an agent:—Semble: the same knowledge which, under this sect., would defeat the establishment of a lien when the policy is effected is equally effective to defeat it if acquired between that time & that at which possession of the policy is resumed after it has been parted with. The lien, therefore, of a broker in respect of a balance on an account under this sect. which is due to him from his employer, who, at the time when the policy was effected, he had no reason to believe was only an agent, does not revive if the broker, having parted with possession of the policy to his employer, knows or has reason to believe, when it comes again into his hands, that his employer was only an agent.—NEAR EAST RELIEF v. KING, CHASSEUR & Co., LTD., [1930] 2 K. 480a. —— —— Before or after loss.]—A firm of sellers in Africa sold goods, which were resold by the purchasers to pltfs. under a contract which required the second sellers to pass on to the second buyers the usual policy in the trade insuring against the usual risks. The goods were found to be damaged on delivery. A substantial part of the damage was caused at a time when pltfs. were not interested in the goods covered by the insurance, but by an indorsement on the policy all claims under it were assigned to the holder of the policy:—Held: under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 50, a marine policy was assignable, unless it contained terms expressly prohibiting the assignment, & it could be assigned either before or after loss. The effect of assigning the policy in the manner in which the policy was assigned, which was the ordinary manner in which policies were assigned in England, was to assign to the person holding the policy the right to sue on any claim which the assignor had on the policy, irrespective of the fact that at the time of the loss or damage the assignee was not interested in the subject-matter lost or damaged. Pltfs. were the assignees of the policy; the assignor of the policy had a right to make a claim in respect of the damage; that claim was assignable, & it was in fact assigned to pltfs., & they were entitled to sue the underwriters in respect of the damage.—ARON (J.) & CO. v. MIALL (1928), 98 L. 551a. Insurance of charges upon cargo—Whether freight included.]—By a policy of insurance the deft. insurance co. insured pltfs., who were shipowners, in respect of one of their steamships "on cargo as per form attached." The form attached provided that the insurance was (inter alia) "upon any charges of said assured upon said cargo or any portion thereof." The policy further provided that the term "cargo" as used in the policy included (inter alia) "charges of said assured upon said cargo or any portion thereof." During the currency of the policy pltfs.' steamship became a total loss with all her cargo, & pltfs. lost their right to recover from the different consignees the freight which was in process of being earned by them at the time of the casualty. Pltfs. claimed to recover under the policy from deft. insurance co. in respect of that loss:—Held: the words "any charges of said assured upon said cargo" included, & were intended to cover, the freight that was in process of being earned by the ship, & therefore pltfs. were entitled to recover under the policy in respect of that loss.—GULF & SOUTHERN S.S. In an action to determine the effect of the above decrees on treaties of reinsurance entered into between a Russian reinsurance co., having a branch office in London, & an English reinsurance co.:—Held: the decrees did not prevent the Russian co. from discharging their liabilities to the English co. under one of the treaties by a payment in London out of their assets outside Russia, or by means of a set-off against the liabilities of the English co. to them under the treaties.—FIRST RUSSIAN INSURANCE CO. v. LONDON & LANCASHIRE INSURANCE CO., [1928] Ch. 922; 97 L. 720a. —— —— ——.]—Pltfs. insured a consignment of gunpowder on a voyage & reinsured with defts. Both the original policy & the reinsurance policies covered perils of the sea & jettison, & were expressed to be "warranted free from loss arising from . . . destruction . . . in a port of distress or otherwise." The original policy contained no admission of seaworthiness, but the reinsurance policies did contain such an admission, & they provided that defts. would "pay as paid thereon," & that the payment should be subject to the same terms as in the original policy. The vessel carried, in addition to the gunpowder, drums of sulphuric acid, & owing to heavy weather some of the drums burst & the acid disabled the machinery, with the result that the ship had to put in to a port of distress. There the required repairs could not be carried out with the gunpowder on board, & it was thrown overboard & became a total loss. Pltfs. paid the owners as for a total loss, & claimed to be reimbursed by defts. :—Held : as the way in which the sulphuric acid was stowed & loaded affected the safety of the ship & rendered her unseaworthy, pltfs. were under no liability on the original policy, & they could not recover from defts. on the reinsurance policies.—FIREMAN'S FUND INSURANCE CO. v. WESTERN AUSTRALIAN INSURANCE CO., LTD. 720b. "On a voyage."]—Pltfs. insured a consignment of oranges from any port in Spain to Antwerp, &, after the ship had left Valencia & had been in wireless communication with Gibraltar, they reinsured with deft. by a slip, which referred to the fact that the ship had been in such communication with Gibraltar & which contained the words "on a voyage," meaning, according to the evidence, that the risk should attach only from a named port in the course of the voyage. The ship stranded before she reached Gibraltar, the oranges were damaged, & pltfs. had to pay on the policy. In an action on the contract of reinsurance :—Held : on the true reading of the slip, the intention was to limit the risk to the voyage from Gibraltar, & the action failed.—EAGLE, STAR & BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. REINER (1927), 43 T. 720c. Insured object in damaged condition at expiration of insurance—Continuation of risk for "immediate consequences" of such damage.]—Pltfs., reinsurers of a risk under a marine policy, reinsured that risk with defts. The policies were subject to the following conditions: "In the event of the vessel not being at the place of destination on the date of the expiration of the policy, the insurance shall continue in force till the end of the day when the vessel arrives at her first place of destination;" & "If the insured object is in a damaged condition at the time when the insurance expires, the risk shall continue for the immediate consequences of such damage until the object without unnecessary delay has been repaired or sold." On the date of the expiration of the policy, the vessel had not arrived at L. Bay, her first place of destination, but before reaching it she grounded on a reef & was taken into L. Bay badly damaged. Temporary repairs having been effected, she continued her voyage, but as she began to leak again she had to be run ashore in order to prevent sinking, & was subsequently sold as a wreck. Pltfs. having paid the original insurers as for a total loss, claimed against defts. on their reinsurance policy :—Held : the loss was an immediate consequence of the damage done by the original stranding, & the risk covered by the policy continued, until the vessel was repaired with no unnecessary delay, for the immediate consequences of the original damage.—MERCHANTS' MARINE INSURANCE CO. v. LIVERPOOL MARINE & GENERAL INSURANCE CO. 729a. Insurance against total or constructive or arranged total loss—Meaning of "arranged"—Artificial total loss not included.]—The owners of a Norwegian steamship were insured with pltfs. & other underwriters. Pltfs. re-insured their risk with defts. The insured steamship stranded in the Black Sea but was floated off & eventually reached Constantinople. Owing to the absence of adequate repairing facilities at this port, it was extremely doubtful that the vessel's condition would permit her to reach a port where repairs could be carried out without the risk of her becoming a total loss. In these circumstances the owners & underwriters agreed to settle the matter: the vessel was to be regarded as a total loss & the underwriters were to pay an agreed sum which in fact was more than her full repaired value at the time. Pltfs. claimed a proportionate part of the sum so paid from defts. The material portion of the policy of re-insurance was as follows: "Insurance . . . upon hull & machinery, etc., valued as in original policy. Being against total & (or) constructive & (or) arranged total loss of vessel only as per Bergens Damp Club policies & to follow their settlements" :—Held : the action failed. On the true construction of the contract there must be either a constructive total loss or a genuine claim for one which claim is settled by arrangement. The word "arranged" really meant compromised & did not cover an artificial total loss created by the will of the parties.—BERGENS DAMPSKIBS ASSURANCE FORENING v. SUN INSURANCE OFFICE, LTD. 735a. Unsuccessful action against insurer—Failure to pay costs—Liability of reinsurer to insurer.]—By a policy of marine insurance a vessel was insured by her owner with the present pltf., who by another policy reinsured the vessel against the risks, & for the period, covered by the original policy, for total loss only. A claim by the owner against the present pltfs. on the original policy failed on the ground that the vessel had been scuttled; & the present pltfs. obtained a judgment against the owner for costs, but it was impossible to recover the costs. The present pltfs. then claimed these costs from the present deft., one of the underwriters of the reinsurance policy. There was in the reinsurance policy a sue & labour clause, but no express contract by the reinsurers to pay the costs in question :—Held : that the sue & labour clause was inapplicable to such a claim, & as there was neither an express nor an implied contract to pay the costs in question the action failed.—SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN ASSURANCE CO., LTD. v. GROOM (1924), 41 T. 852a. —— Landing dispensed with by owner.]—Pltfs., a firm of merchants at O., imported a cargo of bunker coal from the Tyne, having insured the risk of the ocean transit with the P. co. until the goods were "discharged & safely landed," including "all risks of craft to & from vessel & whilst in craft awaiting landing." The storage risk, while at moorings at O., was covered by defts. Pltfs.' practice was to have bunker coal discharged into barges & to leave it in the barges until a vessel required bunkers & then to supply that vessel from a barge alongside. When the coal in question had arrived at O. & 1,000 tons of it had been discharged into a barge, the barge sank during the following night & part of the coal was lost & part was damaged. Pltfs. having claimed from defts., the latter compromised the claim & took third-party proceedings to recover a contribution from the P. co. on the ground of double insurance:—Held: as pltfs. dispensed with landing the P. co.'s risk terminated when the discharge was completed, &, as the discharge of the 1,000 tons had been completed, the proceedings against the third party failed.—Lindsay Blee Depots, Ltd. v. Motor Union Insurance Co., Ltd. 855a. Effect of clause.]—Claimants insured with defts. a quantity of cork from a port or place between Bordeaux & Nice to the United Kingdom. Claimants were cork growers & had a factory & warehouse near Algeciras, & they had sent from the factory to Algeciras quantities of cork for shipment, & had allowed it to accumulate on the jetty there until there should be enough for a cargo. While a quantity of cork was on the jetty awaiting shipment & before the policy was issued, a fire broke out on the jetty, & to prevent the fire spreading, the authorities jettisoned part of the cork & threw sea-water on the remainder, with the result that a large portion of the cork was lost or damaged. The policy, when issued, contained (inter alia) a marginal clause that the policy was not to enure to the benefit of any fire insurance co., but loss reasonably attributable to fire was covered. It also contained a warehouse to warehouse clause. A claim under the policy was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator treated the marginal clause as non-existent, on the ground that it was not included, or stipulated for, in the slip which represented the true contract between the parties, & he also found that the loss was one reasonably attributable to fire:—Held: (1) the goods on the pier at Algeciras, having come in the ordinary course of transit from the shippers' manufactory at San Roque, were covered by the policy; (2) there being an existing fire & an imminent peril, the damage caused by water, used either to extinguish the fire or to prevent it from spreading, was a proximate consequence of fire, which could be recovered under the general words of the policy, as being ejusdem generis with fire; (3) the underwriters were not relieved from liability by the restraint of princes clause: (4) the case must be remitted to the arbitrator upon the question whether the policy issued, so far as it contained the fire policy clause, was or was not contrary to the usual form of marine insurance on goods.—Symington & Co. v. Union Insurance Society of Canton (1928), 97 L. 1660a. —— .]—A sailing ship, of which pltf. was mtgee., was insured by a policy, underwritten by deft., against perils of the sea & fire, &, as per Institute Time Clauses, clause 8, against loss of the vessel "caused through the negligence of master, mariners, engineers or pilots." The vessel was damaged by ice & she leaked badly, & the captain, expecting a gale in which he thought she would be lost, decided to abandon her, & he set fire to her to prevent her from being a danger to navigation, & he & the crew then abandoned her. In an action by the mtgee. on the policy deft. did not allege any misconduct by the assured, by the mtgee., or by the managing owner, & there was no evidence that the abandonment was a wilful casting away of the ship by the master :—Held : on the facts the abandonment was unreasonable on the part of the master & constituted negligence, & this negligence, resulting in the continuing action of a previously existing peril of the sea, was covered by clause 8, & even apart from that clause, as the peril of the sea had endangered the ship & the negligence of the master resulted in proper measures not being taken to save her, pltf. was entitled to recover under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 55 (2) (a).—LIND v. MITCHELL (1928), 98 L. 1870a. —— ——.]—Pltfs. were the owners of the steamship A. While loading a general cargo at New York a fire broke out & general average expenditure was incurred. The share of the cargo-owners amounted to 18,000 dollars, & this was paid to pltfs. After repairs & reloading the A. proceeded on her voyage, but was struck & sunk by another steamer. The cargo was discharged & the A. raised & taken into Chester, near Philadelphia, where the voyage was abandoned. Further general average disbursements were made. By the law & practice of Philadelphia cargo-owners were not liable to pay more than the salved value of the cargo. This they paid. The first defts., the London Assurance, were the insurers in part of the hull & machinery against perils of the sea & fire. The second defts., the British Traders Insurance Co., Ltd., were the insurers of part of the cargo's proportion of general average disbursements, & the fourth deft., A. H. Henderson, was an underwriter of a similar policy at Lloyds for the other part. The third defts., the United Kingdom Mutual Assurance Assocn., Ltd., were a club of which pltfs. were members, & as such entitled to be indemnified against liabilities for cargo's proportion of general average not otherwise recoverable. Pltfs. claimed under the policies. The London Assurance denied liability. The third defts. admitted liability if & when any balance was ascertained. The other insurers disputed the amount claimed & the method of computation. The bills of lading provided that general average should be adjusted under York-Antwerp Rules, 1890, & under the policies the same rules were to apply:—Held: the 18,000 dollars recovered in New York must be taken into account when computing the liability of the disbursements underwriters. In the case of the hull underwriters the values to be considered were those at the termination of the adventure & the loss incurred by reason of the diminution or extinction of the value of the cargo was a loss which fell upon the assured, the shipowner, & came within Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 66 (4). —GREEN STAR SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. LONDON ASSURANCE (1931), 145 L. 2010a. —— Recovery of damages in collision action.]—Defts. insured pltfs.' steamer against the usual marine risks, the steamer being valued in the policy at £4,000. During the currency of the policy the steamer collided with another steamer. The ship was repaired at pltfs.' cost, & a collision action by pltfs. against the owners of the other steamer was settled, & the owners of the other steamer paid over to pltfs. £2,500, as being half the damages. In an action against defts. pltfs. contended that, as the balance of their loss was £2,500 they were entitled to recover that amount, it being less than the value of £4,000 put on the steamer in the policy:—Held : defts. were liable only for £1,500, being the difference between £4,000 & £2,500, the amount recovered by pltfs. from the owners of the other ship.—GOOLE & HULL STEAM TOWING CO., LTD. v. OCEAN MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1928] 1 K. 2014a. Loss less than amount paid into court.]—Resps. insured applts.' tug boat by a policy of marine insurance, which provided that, on a claim for a constructive total loss, the insured value was to be taken as the repaired value, & that nothing was to be taken into account for the damaged value, & also that all claims were to be subject to English law & usage. The tug was sunk by collision, & applts. at once gave notice of abandonment. Salvors employed by resps. raised the tug in a few days, & the abandonment was not accepted. The salvors, without the knowledge of applts., made an offer to resps. for the tug, & resps. requested them to put it into writing, which they did. The appellate ct., considering the evidence as to the probable cost of repair, held that there had been only a partial loss to an amount less than that paid into ct.:—Held : (1) the sinking was not an actual total loss; (2) resps. were not precluded from denying that they had accepted the abandonment; (3) there had been no constructive total loss within Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 60 (2) (i), since even at the date of the abandonment it was not unlikely that the tug could be recovered, & it was unnecessary to consider whether the old rule, that the crucial moment was the commencement of the action, had been modified by sects. 61 & 62; (4) the appellate ct. was not bound to accept the highest estimate of the cost of repairs given by resps.' witnesses, & the ct.'s finding as to the sum necessary, being justified by the evidence & not being based upon any error of principle, could not be questioned.—CAPTAIN J. 2341a. —— —— Damages for negligence in watching wreck.]—Defts. & other underwriters insured pltfs.' steamship A. against total loss, & to the extent of three-quarters against damages which pltfs. might have to pay for collisions with other vessels. The A. was sunk in a river & in fact was a constructive total loss. Notice of abandonment was given & acceptance thereof refused. Pltfs. & defts. agreed without prejudice to their rights to take joint action to salve the property. The master of the A. employed a tug to watch the wreck & warn other vessels. In an action brought, in the names of pltfs., by & for the benefit of defts., against the S., the owners of the S. counterclaimed & recovered judgment for the whole of their damages & costs, & the underwriters paid three-quarters of the damages & costs to the owners of the S.:—Held: the underwriters were jointly liable to indemnify pltfs. against the remaining one-quarter of the damages & costs of the S., the liability not arising under the policy but upon the contract of indemnity.—SUART & STEAMSHIP ALLEGHANY OF LONDON, LTD. v. MERCHANTS' MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD. 2404a. Prosecution of claim—Condition limiting time for.]—Pltfs. were interested in a certificate of insurance which was issued under two policies of marine insurance subscribed by defts. in respect of 100 barrels of pure gum turpentine shipped from Florida to Rotterdam. The policies provided for payment for "leakages from any cause in excess of 1 per cent. on each invoice." It was the practice of the trade, at the port of shipment, to gauge the barrels of turpentine & to express the result in gallons, & at the port of discharge to weigh it & to express the result in kilograms with an allowance for reduction on account of the varying temperature conditions of 3·25 kilograms to the gallon. The policies also contained a stipulation providing that no suit or action for the recovery of any claim should be maintainable in any ct. unless such suit or action be commenced within one year from the happening of the loss out of which the claim arose, but that limitation clause did not occur in the certificate. When the vessel was discharged a shortage in respect of the gallons of turpentine shipped was ascertained to have taken place. Defts. having refused to pay upon the ground that there was no sufficient evidence of the loss & that the claim was not instituted within the year, the present claim was brought by the pltfs. on the certificate:—Held: the limitation clause was not one which bound the certificate holder. The rights of the original policy holder, which were conveyed to the certificate holder, comprised the rights given by the policy qualified by all the conditions & warranties which affected the nature & extent of the insurance granted, but did not impose an obligation affecting only a limitation of time within which the rights so given were to be enforced; (2) an actual physical loss had been proved based upon the calculations, & there was no ground for imputing that loss to any cause other than leakages.—PHŒNIX INSURANCE CO. 2463a. —— ——.]—A ship belonging to the Glen Line was insured, hull, machinery, etc., with the Liverpool & London War Risks Insurance Assocn., against the usual war risks. On the declaration of war on Aug. 4, 1914, the ship was seized by the German Government & was interned until after the Armistice. The Glen Line gave notice of abandonment, which was accepted by the Assocn. as for a constructive total loss on Aug. 4, 1914. After the peace the Glen Line presented a claim to the Mixed Arbitral Tribunal, under article 297 (e) of the Treaty of Versailles, in effect, for compensation for loss of prospective profits arising from the seizure of the ship by the Germans immediately on the outbreak of the war, & this claim was compromised for about £140,000. Thereafter the British Government, as reinsurers to the extent of 80 per cent. of the war risks undertaken by the Assocn., who made no claim to the compensation, claimed that the compensation was received by the Glen Line as trustees for the Assocn., & that the British Government were entitled to 80 per cent. of the trust moneys:—Held: the compensation recovered under the treaty was analogous to damages recovered for loss of freight in prospect secured by an existing charter & must therefore be treated as belonging to the owner & not to the abandonee.—GLEN LINE, LTD. v. A.-G. 2527a. —— Unstamped insurance.]—In 1920 the E. co. & the Y. co. entered into a participation agreement effective as from Jan. 1, 1920, which was a reinsurance treaty binding the E. co. to cede & the Y. co. to accept a participation of all risks mentioned of the share retained by the E. co. accepted after Jan. 1, 1920. In Sept. 1921, the E. co. arranged that the N. co. should take over the Y. co.'s position as from Jan. 1, 1920; & in Jan. 1922, an agreement, hereinafter called "the Outwards Treaty," on the same lines & with the same provisions as those of the agreement with the Y. co. was entered into between the E. co. & the N. co. In 1921 the N. co. & the E. co. entered into another participation agreement, hereinafter called "the Inwards Treaty," the N. co. ceding & the E. co. accepting a share of all marine risks. The Inwards Treaty had no provisions for the issuing of policies, or for particulars sufficient to make possible the issuing of policies, to satisfy the provisions of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41). No stamped policies were in fact issued under any of the three agreements, & no premiums were ever actually paid to the N. co., which was credited with the proper proportion of the net premiums received by the E. co. On the compulsory winding-up of the N. co. the E. co. claimed to be entitled to prove for sums paid by it for premiums under the Outwards Treaty, after allowing for sums paid or credited to it by the N. co. under the Inwards Treaty. The Official Receiver rejected the claim on the ground that both treaties were invalid & inadmissible in evidence, because they were contracts of marine insurance which did not comply with the requirements of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), & were unlawful; & upon a summons asking for an order that the proof should be allowed:—Held: (1) as the Outwards Treaty was invalid & void, the entries of premiums to the credit of the E. co. were not evidence of payment, & therefore no claim under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 84, could be made; (2) even if premiums had been paid such a claim could not have been made, as Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), ss. 92, 93, 97, amounted to an implied prohibition of offences by incurring liability for premiums in respect of unstamped sea insurances, & there had therefore been "illegality" on the part of the E. co. with the result that a claim for return of premiums under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 84, must fail.—Re NATIONAL BENEFIT ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 46; 100 L. The assured had in fact had a policy in another office, &, the premium thereon not having been paid, the insurance co.'s officer intimated that his co. did not desire to continue the policy, & if the assured was not prepared to pay the premium the co. would have no alternative but to cancel the policy. The premium not being paid the officer produced a cancellation voucher which he had taken with him when he went to call on assured, & assured then signed the voucher & the policy was cancelled:—Held: the termination of the insurance of the unilateral act of the co., & the policy was cancelled within the meaning of the question in the proposal.—BRYCE v. MERCANTILE & GENERAL INSCE.
